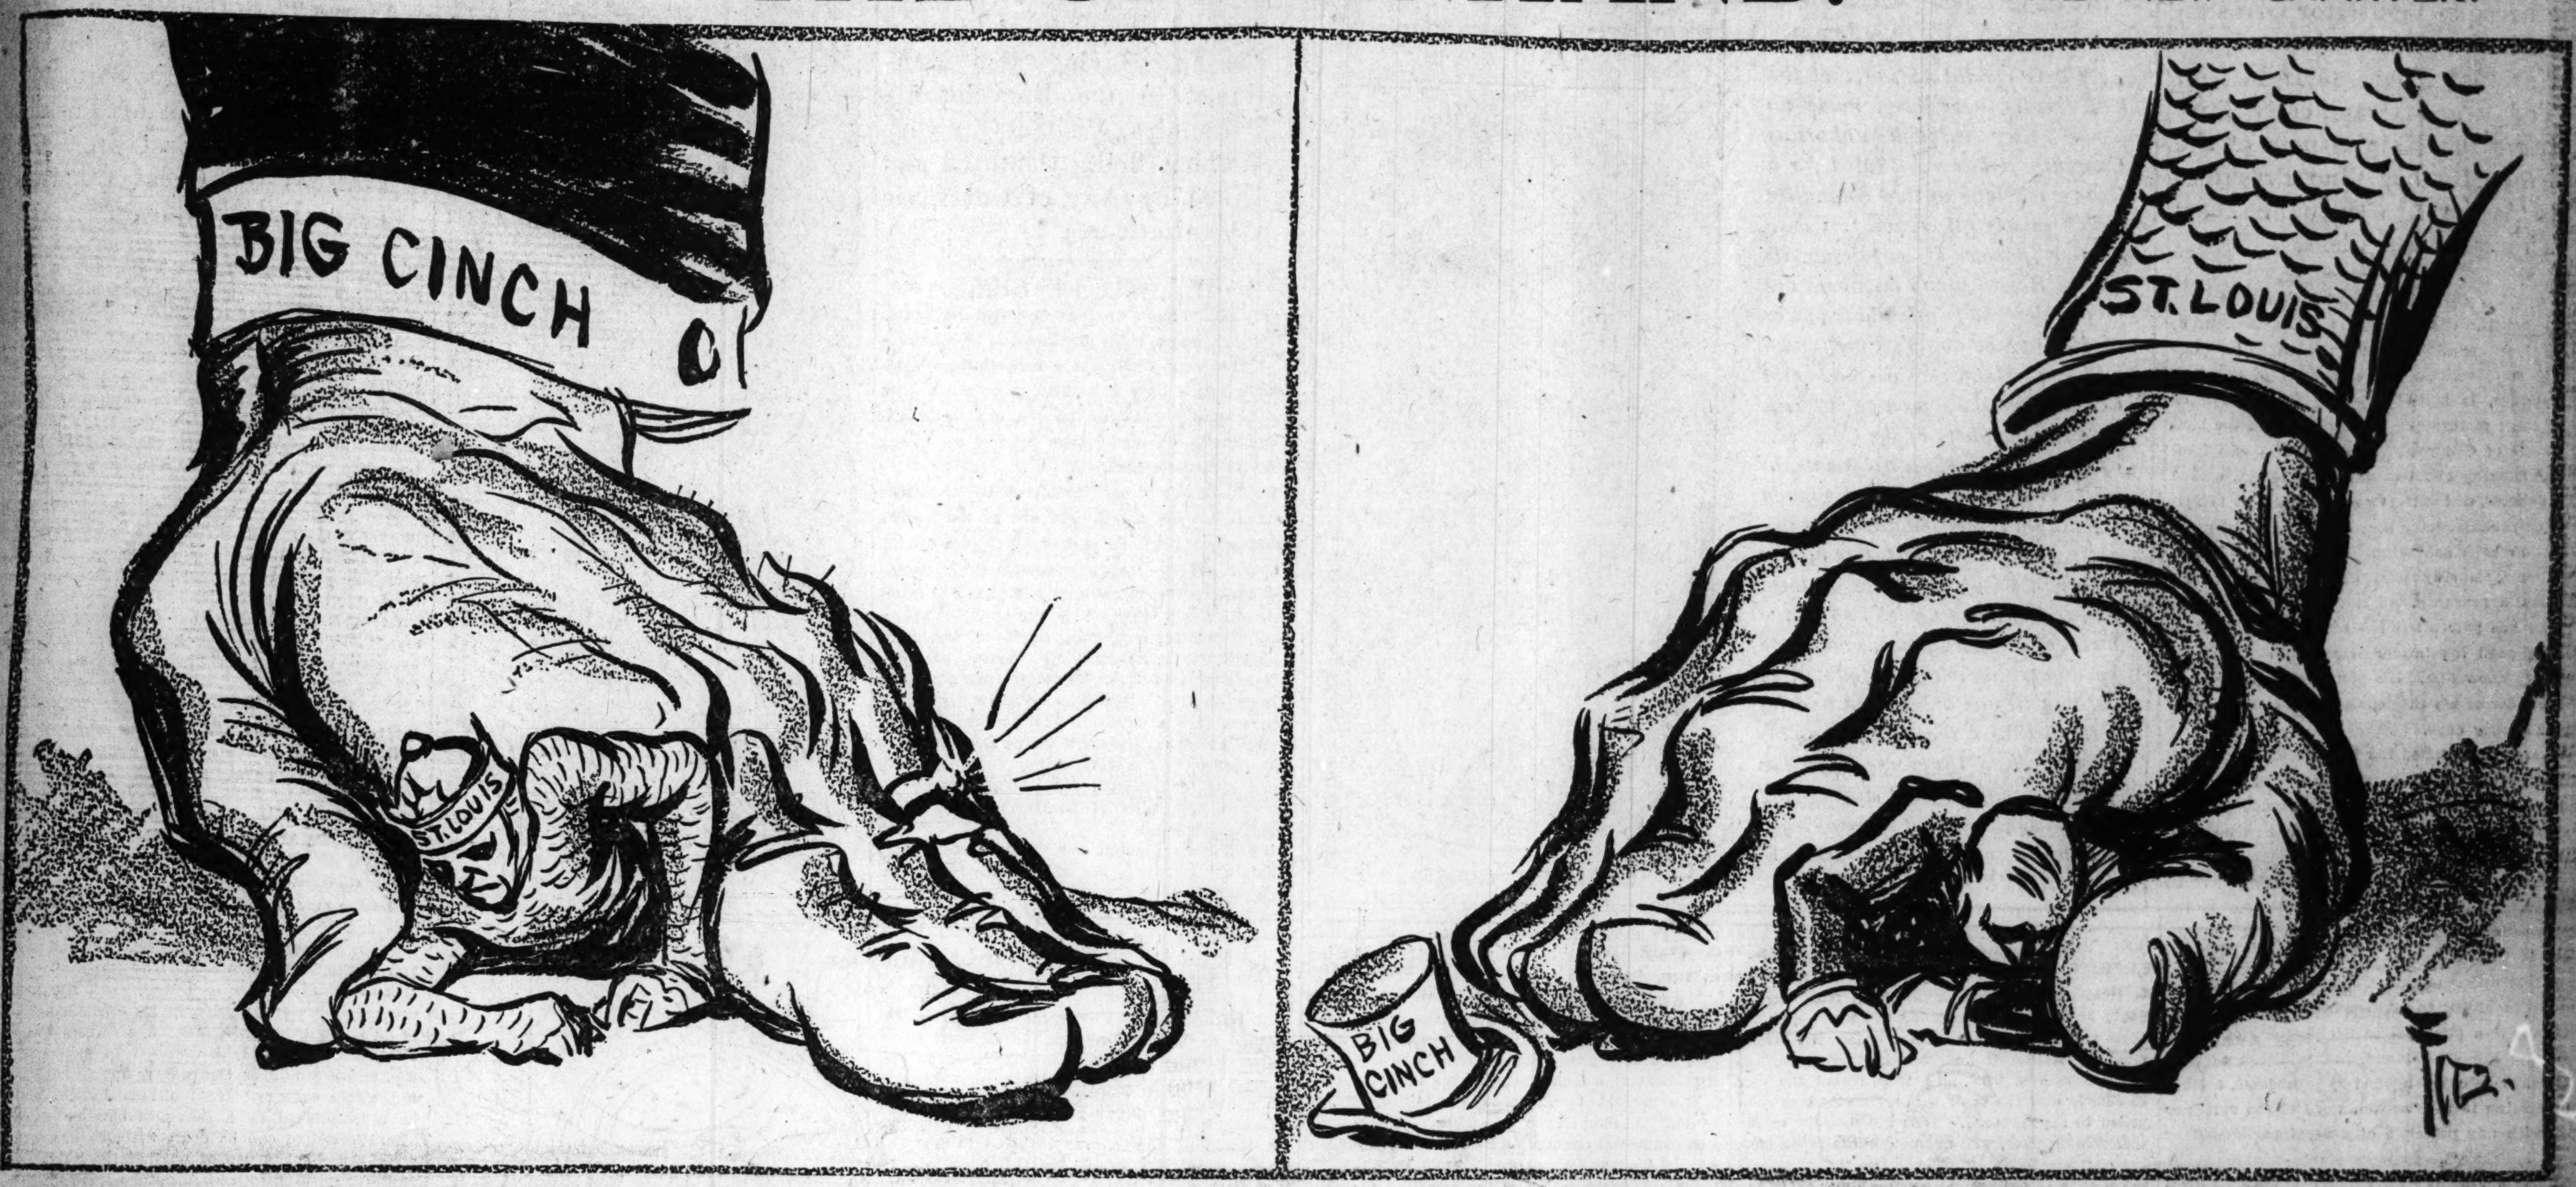
THE UPPER HAND.

THE OLD CHARTER.

THE NEW CHARTER.



FITZPATRICK'S cartoon on this page presents the charter issue at a glance.

Which shall have the upper hand in St. Louis—the people or the Big Cinch?

By the Big Cinch we mean the allied interests which profit through governmental power and privilege.

It includes the public utility corporations holding wholesale franchises.

It includes the business interests that profit in various ways through public service corporations.

It includes the political bosses who are paid in one way or another—in money or contracts or business opportunities—to organize parties and run the government for the benefit of themselves and their privileged allies.

It includes the corrupt or subservient officials who are elected and paid in one way or another to serve the common purposes of their bosses and the privileged interests.

UNDER THE OLD CHARTER THE BIG CINCH HAS HAD THE UPPER HAND.

The charter was framed for an overgrown village by men who had no knowledge of the needs and possibilities of a great city.

St. Louis had mule-power transportation. Electricity was unknown. Park, street and sewer problems were simple. Conditions of city life were vastly different from those of today.

The government was formed on political lines. It was controlled by political parties and the parties were organized and controlled by bosses.

The framers of the old charter were afraid of the people. They permitted them to vote for candidates nominated by political parties and usually selected by corrupt bosses, but the people had no power after the election. They could not control the acts of their officials. They could not remove corrupt and incompetent officials who betrayed the public trust.

The men who framed the old charter had no idea of popular control of government after elections. They had no knowledge of the necessity of it.

They had no idea of the necessity of public control of franchises after they were granted.

The city could not utilize its own franchises. It could not own, construct or operate for public use any public utility except waterworks.

All that the city could do was to grant franchises to individuals or corporations for the construction and operation of public utilities.

When the franchises were granted the men who obtained them did what they pleased with them. Some sold them outright for large sums of money. The men who obtained and held the franchises and the men who bought franchises that others had obtained capitalized the franchise values originally owned by the people and granted for the supposed benefit of the people and made the people pay the values several times over again in exorbitant fares and rates.

The franchise holders capitalized their franchises for millions more than was invested in the public utility plants and forced the people to pay interest and dividends on the excess capitalization. The people were in this way robbed of millions of dollars.

The only way the people had to check the rapacity of the franchise corporations, was to grant more franchises in the hope of creating competition. This plan usually resulted in more capitalization for the public to make good. The new franchises were highly capitalized and consolidated with the other franchises, the monopolized franchises were recapitalized at higher figures and the people paid.

Shrewd capitalists saw the opportunities to make money offered by these conditions under the old charter and grasped them. Shrewd politicians saw the opportunity to make money by electing corrupt or subservient men to office who would sell municipal franchises to capitalists and promoters.

Alliances between shrewd capitalists, corrupt political bosses and official boodlers plundered and oppressed the people of St. Louis for years.

EVERY St. Louisan of voting age knows what Butlerism was and what it meant to St. Louis. Every adult St. Louisan knows what a "boodle combine" is. It is a familiar phrase in this city and has a baleful significance.. To offset the limitation of the people's power the framers of the old charter diffused power and responsibility among public officials.

So "combines were formed by political bosses—'boodle bosses'" the Post-Dispatch called them—to put over franchises and other robber ordinances as to block remedial measures. Sometimes the combines were in the Council; sometimes in the House of Delegates; sometimes in both the Council and House. Sometimes they included executives and legislators. These combines enforced their will by controlling the Mayor and legislative majorities in both chambers, or by refusing to permit any city business to be transacted until their will was agreed to.

The late Boss Butler publicly boasted of his power to organize boodle combines and of his ability to buy any privilege he wanted for himself and his friends. He flaunted openly his power to plunder St. Louis and laughed at the helplessness of the people.

The charter made the people helpless to stop or defeat a boodle deal or to remove the rascals who sold out the city.

THE Post-Dispatch could name a score of men, wealthy, respectable and influential, who made fortunes through boodle deals. They supplied the money to bribe officials. Boards of Directors of public utility corporations set aside secret funds for boodle deals to get additional privileges or to defeat measures which threatened to deprive them of privileges and profits. It was customary for the wealthy and respectable beneficiaries of these corrupt plundering deals to ease their consciences by pretending that they did not know to what use their corruption funds were put. They did not see the money paid.

The boodle prosecutions of Circuit Attorney Folk exposed the methods by which the city was plundered and the helplessness of the people under the old charter to prevent the robbery.

Mr. Folk exposed two flagrant deals. He confirmed the facts, which the Post-Dispatch had previously published, of the sale of the Central Traction franchise to several financial adventurers for $250,000. This franchise was sold by the original thieves to a syndicate for $1,250,000. It became the foundation of the present street railway monopoly. It was the means by which unscrupulous promoters forced all the street railway lines to combine in a monster corporation with a capitalization of about four times the value of the actual property investment.

All of the rascals in the deal escaped punishment through the statute of limitations, but the city is still suffering the consequences of their rascality through the water-sogged, inadequate, but defiant, United Railways.

Mr. Folk exposed the Suburban deal by which valuable franchises were to be sold by a boodle combine for $175,000. This deal was defeated by exposure, but the people would have been helpless under the charter to defeat it otherwise or to prevent its consequences.

The public service corporations through their political agents, the party bosses, have controlled the party organizations and the elections. They have controlled the city government by corrupting the political parties and debauching the ballot box.

THE old charter was passed by fraud and for at least 30 years after its adoption municipal candidates were named by caucuses of bosses and were elected by fraud. It was difficult in the extreme to defeat any candidate the public service corporations wanted, or to elect any candidate they did not want.

It was impossible for the people to prevent the consequences of the election of corrupt or subservient men. They could not stop boodle deals, or vicious legislation of any kind. They could not pass needed legislation. They could not remove dishonest or unfit officials.

The people were helpless to enforce their will. The charter gave them no power to do it.

A FEW instances selected out of many illustrate the helplessness of the people under the old charter.

For a generation the Terminal Railway Association has handicapped St. Louis commerce and hampered the city's growth by grossly unjust charges. It made the Mississippi River a Chinese wall and charged heavy tolls on all St. Louis commerce passing it.

St. Louisans have known this, yet the Terminal monopoly has defied them. It has through the power and influence of the railroads and the interests allied with them frequently controlled the city government and has obtained almost all it wanted. Occasionally public indignation has been so great and public sentiment so aroused that the official tools of the Terminal were afraid to do its will. It was only by tremendous effort that the people of St. Louis have been able to keep the Terminal from taking everything it wanted to complete its oppressive monopoly.

Twice the city has tried to break the Terminal monopoly. Once, because the city could not under the charter construct, own or operate a terminal railway, the people gave bridge and terminal franchises to a private corporation organized by a group of leading citizens. The bridge and richly equipped Terminal system were sold to the Terminal monopoly.

The second time the people authorized the building of a free municipal bridge.

The unfinished free bridge is a monument to the helplessness of the people and the inefficiency of the city government.

The city is not able under the present charter to equip its bridge with railway terminals. It will have to equip a private corporation with terminal franchises and facilities or deal with corporations already equipped with terminal facilities.

On account of the city's helplessness to supply its own bridge with a loop for street railways city officials, under scandalous circumstances, gave a loop franchise to a private corporation, the Southern Illinois Traction Co.

By hard fighting the franchise was bettered by amendments which freed the bridge from the company's grip, but the franchise still holds and the city is helpless to handle its own business.

The United Railways controls the entire street railway system. The monopoly was formed by combining all the street railway systems in the city. Each one was heavily overcapitalized. The franchise values, belonging to the people, were absorbed for years to come.

When the monopoly was formed by fraud and corruption the aggregate capitalization of the separate lines was more than doubled. The capitalization is now four times the investment.

The people were helpless to prevent the original oppressive franchise grants. They were helpless to prevent the fraudulent and corrupt consolidation. They are unable directly to compel adequate service and fair rates. They are unable to compel the monopoly to perform its obligations.

Only by continual fighting and by years of litigation have the people been able to get a few concessions from the monopoly.

The street car evils from which we suffer would have been impossible if the charter had empowered the people to control the public service corporations and to construct and operate public utilities.

The betrayal of public trust by municipal officials for the benefit of wealthy and corrupt franchise corporations would have been impossible if the charter had empowered the people to recall corrupt and unfit officials.

The story of the United Railways is the story of every public utility. The evils differ only in degree, but arise from the same cause—the helplessness of the people.

The city has an electric light plant which manufactures cheap electricity, but is unable to extend its service to the public. The people must submit to the electric light and power monopoly and the greedy impositions of

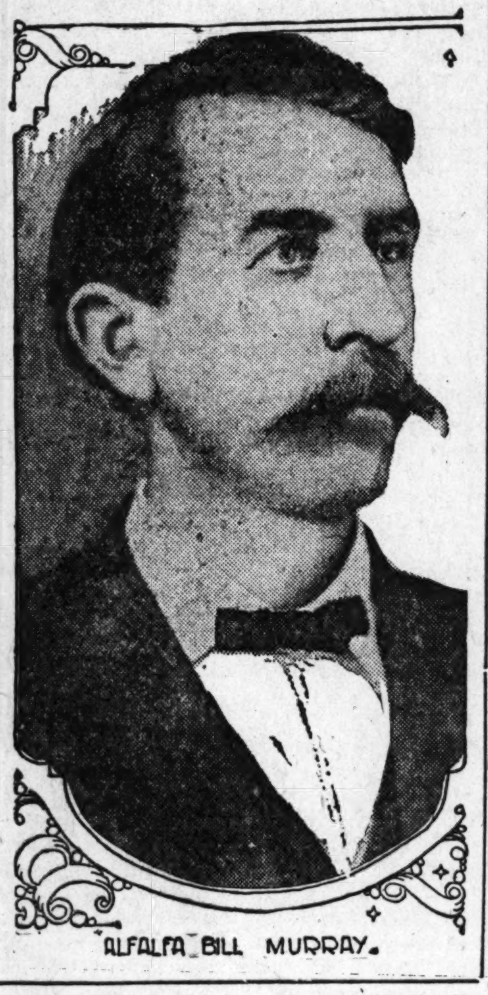
"Committees Rule Congress, Individual Members No Longer Count," Says "Alfalfa Bill" Murray

"Seniority Everything, Ability Nothing," Declares Oklahoman

Picturesque Legislator Gives an Intimate Impression of the National House as It Is Run Today and Graphically Portrays the Helplessness of the New Member Who Presumes to Attempt to Introduce New Thoughts and Ideas.

"House as Helpless Now as It Was Under Cannon"

"It is candid to say that the rules have been made no better through unhorsing Cannon. It has substituted for a Czar a machine of that committee which selects all committees with greater power of enforcing its rules. Hence, many members are on the alert not to offend the power of the organization. Every man will understand that a member of Congress must keep on good terms with the members of the Congress, as well as with his constituents, in order to be valuable, because much legislation is enacted under 'unanimous consent.' In fact, this affects all the bills of a private or local nature that most directly affect the member's constituency, and, if he be unpopular with his fellows, so surely will one object, and he is at a standstill. A second effort on his part meeting the same objection puts him entirely out during that session so far as that piece of legislation is concerned."—REPRESENTATIVE MURRAY.



ALFALFA BILL MURRAY.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., June 27.

W. H. ("ALFALFA BILL") MURRAY, president of the Constitutional Convention and a member of the first Legislature, is looked upon by Oklahomans as their most picturesque representative in the lower House of Congress. Possessed of a vast fund of information about innumerable things, skilled as a debater, and with few superiors in his knowledge of parliamentary law, he has attracted much attention in Washington. In his public life in Oklahoma, Murray paid little attention to his personal appearance, but since going to Washington he has patronized the tailor and the haberdasher until his farmer friends in Oklahoma scarcely know him. His picturesque sobriquet is a reminder of his enthusiasm for alfalfa in Oklahoma's early days.

Murray has studied the Washington game with absorbing interest. In a recent visit home he was asked to give his impressions from personal experience of the obstacles that a newly-elected member encounters in Congress.

"How is the game played in Washington?" he replied. "It is so much unlike the 'game' in the Constitutional Convention and the first Legislature of Oklahoma that would require a book to note the difference. In Oklahoma the game was played according to parliamentary law, which has beneath it a principal as decipherable as is the common law of England, but in Congress it is played by rules established by precedents, neither conforming to the 'written word of the rule' nor yet with any principle of general parliamentary law, but based upon precedents running back through our history for half a century. To illustrate: The written rule says that all committees shall be elected by the House, but in practice they are named wholly by the Ways and Means Committee.

"Indeed, we have eight volumes of books known as 'Hinds' Parliamentary Precedents,' requiring five feet of shelf room to hold them. Many of them are conflicting, and without principle to arrive at a solution. The key to these precedents, which but lately was firmly established and hedged in until it would require a revolution in the written rules, is expressed by the one word 'seniority'—a seniority more exacting than ever existed in the army, and with less excuse, because in the army it involves daily training and service, while 'seniority' in Congress means for the most part 'how long have you been here.' Nor does it require a criticism of 'Joe' Cannon to criticise 'senority,' because Joe sometimes broke it in the interest of 'organization' and 'policy' to accomplish the enactment of legislation.

How Seniority Rule Operates.

"THIS seniority starts a man on a given committee and he climbs according to the time he serves here, with but small regard for ability or effort, and according to the death, resignation or defeat of the man above him. For instance, I was appointed fourth on the Committee on Pensions, which gave me little power, because the control of the committee is lodged in the chairman, the ranking member of his own party and the member of the opposing party highest on the list. The chairman of the committee died and the ranking member who became chairman, took tuberculosis and was compelled to resign, and that placed me as the ranking member of the committee, with the next man above me as chairman.

"The chairman and ranking Democratic and Republican members constitute the conferees to settle the differences between the two houses on amendments, and they are controlled by 'seniority.' They may put into the bill provisions that the committee itself would not agree to, so that, although all legislation is done in committee, the committee consists for the most part of the chairman and the two ranking members.

"Moreover, this 'seniority' system of rules makes it impossible now for a new man, however able, to receive recognition according to his ability. Henry Clay was elected Speaker the first day he came to Congress. That now would be impossible. Indeed, the abler a man is, or rather the greater his publicity, notoriety, or reputation is, before he comes to the House, the less favor he may receive when he gets here, because, if he attempts to assume that he is the equal of members who have been here for many years, but who may have less ability than he, the membership will in all probability 'haze' him. Nor can he escape unless he be a master of parliamentary law, on account of the rules, which are based upon inharmonious and incongruous decisions, leaving the rules not founded on principles easily mastered, but always open to interpretation that will protect seniority.

"The new man who shows an understanding of parliamentary law astonishes many of the men who do not.

"I remember in the first caucus there were [illegible] new men, one who understood parliamentary [illegible] and one who did not. The one who did arose and addressed the chairman and the chair very promptly declared: 'You are out of order.' Whereupon the new member took his seat and wondered what class or kind of fool he had made of himself. The other one arose and the chair also declared him out of order. He immediately replied: 'I beg the chairman's pardon, but the rule is this', and then stated the rule so clearly that the chair without parley was compelled to say 'proceed.' It is unnecessary to say that this member, who understood the rules, from that day on had no trouble, while the other was never sure of his ground on anything.

Some Good That Seniority Does.

"IT is correct, however, to admit that in certain lines this rule of seniority is wise. It is particularly so when it takes the conceit out of a new member upon his arrival in Washington, and wherein it tends to check too much talking—talking merely for the Record, but whenever it fails to recognize an effort to do things and ability it has a tendency for bad conditions, and it will readily be seen that no reform can be worked from the inside of Congress but must come from the outside and as a popular protest against methods of organization. It is candid to say that the rules have been made no better through unhorsing Cannon.

"It has substituted for a Czar a machine of that committee which selects all committees with greater power of enforcing its rules. Hence many members are on the alert not to offend the power of the organization.

"Every man will understand that a member in Congress must keep on good terms with the members of the Congress as well as his constituents in order to be valuable, because much legislation is enacted under 'unanimous consent.' In fact, this affects all of the bills of a private or local nature that most directly affect the member's constituency, and if he be unpopular with his fellows so surely will one object and he is at a standstill; a second effort on his part meeting the same objections puts him entirely out during that session so far as that piece of legislation is concerned.

"It is a mistaken popular notion also that a man may speak when he gets ready. A bill is brought in, the time on each side is agreed to, divided equally between the chairman of the committe having the bill in charge and Mr. Mann of the minority party, and no other man can make a speech and get recognition unless one or the other of these two gentlemen yields time to him. He may be a master of the subject at hand, but he has positively no voice in the matter until the bill is considered for amendments, when he is limited to five minutes. It is readily seen that this system is dangerous to the public good, since the House has ceased to be a deliberative body. Even the Speaker is powerless to aid in the matter, because he, too, is bound equally with every other member under this rule.

"Sometimes an able popular member can get unanimous consent. Hence, again the necessity of keeping on good terms with the members. It necessarily follows that an assault upon the rules is an assault upon the power of the organization, which responsibility a discreet member would shirk, because it soon puts him so completely out of the organization that he becomes an outlaw to it, and hence powerless even to address the House. It is true he may get his remarks 'extended' in the Record, which no one reads except a few people back home, but this gives him little show to impress his views on the membership.

Argument for Long Terms.

"UNDER this system of rules the longer the people keep a member in the House the more service he can do them, and they should either keep them for a long time, or so long as the member shows that he's honest, courageous and able—it requires all three of these to make a good legislator—or establish the rule in every state of confirming each member to a given number of terms.

"If the member, however, does not display leadership in six or eight years, his constituents must realize that he will never display it. Most men fail to become leaders through lack of ability, effort or a lack of confidence in themselves,

The present Congress is wonderfully strong in morals, temperance and ability, but equally weak in moral courage and independence, largely due to the atmosphere and system in which we move. A member dreads the necessity of going up against even an opposition in his own delegation, to say nothing of opposing the President. It is readily seen that if all the members from one State vote the same way there can be no issue on that question raised in the State, but if one or more vote differently it flustrates his colleagues, because when he sends out his speeches and the Record defending his position it raises an issue which, however right to them it may appear, disturbs their political peace. The situation spurs on the member invariably to move along the line of 'least resistance,' and this is why reforms are not worked from within Congress but must come from without.

"The greatest evil in Congress is absenteeism. One member during the five months' special session of the present Congress was present at 15 roll calls. This evil of absenteeism is not confined alone to absence from Washington, but absence from the House in Washington. The Record might show the member answering every roll call, though he may have had nothing to do with the legislation. It takes 50 minutes to call the roll. Many of the members are over at their offices during the entire sitting of Congress, and in the event an amendment is offered to a committee report and if the committee be defeated, the chairman of the committee invokes a call of the House and a roll call upon the question, whereupon the gong rings throughout the offices and public buildings. The absent member rises from his desk, walks over and asks someone which way the committee is voting and casts his vote that way. So it is impossible almost to defeat or even amend the committee report. This is the reason why nearly all legislation in Congress is done by committee.

Foolish to Fight Committees.

"MEMBERS should be present when bills are considered. The man who attempts to defeat a committee report is almost driving against destiny, and this system is productive of the greatest evil in our legislative system. One would answer, you ought to pass a law to compel members to be present. I reply that if you could pass the law the members would be present.

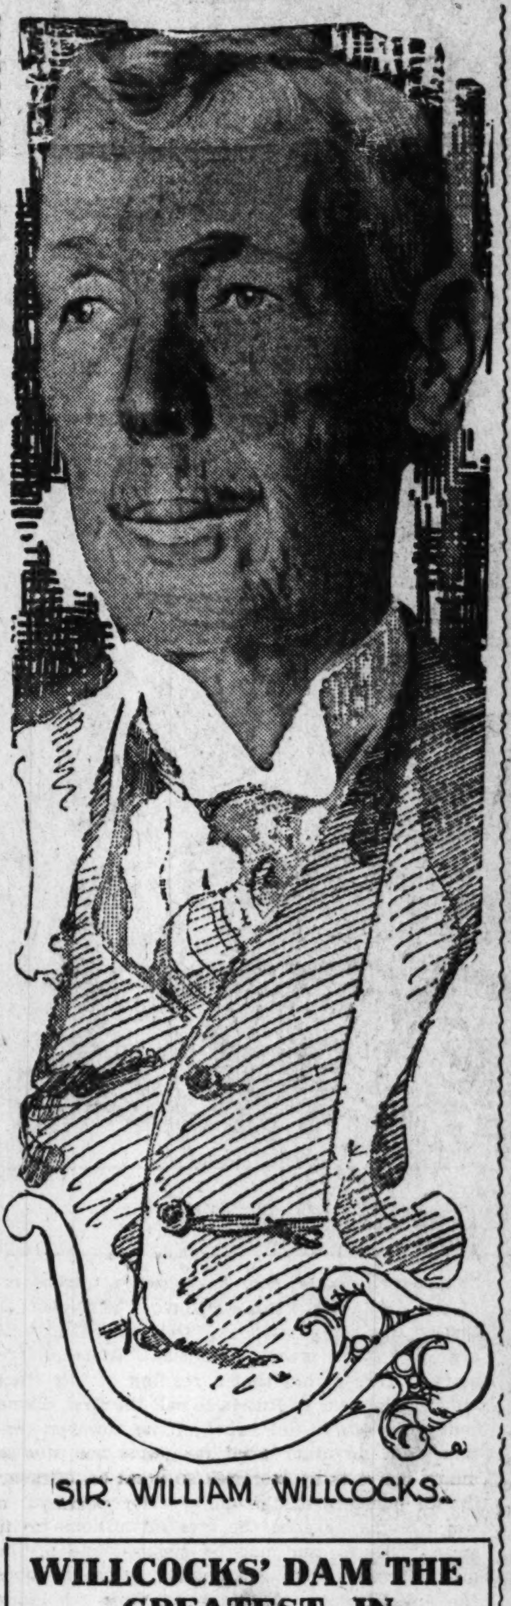
"There is only one way to correct this evil, and that is for a public demand to be raised throughout the United States commanding members to be present when bills are under consideration. I grant you that during general debate there is no harm in being absent, and herein again is where the member shirks the responsibility of rendering himself unpopular with the organization and his fellow members by an effort to correct an evil which he recognizes and greatly regrets to see.

"There are many things about Congress of which nearly everybody is ignorant. For instance, the cost of printing all speeches printed separate from the Record is paid for by the member. I paid $250 for my speech on 'intervention in Mexico' last year. This was necessary to give publicity, as well as to explain my position, at a time when the people were prone to criticise any man doffering with the President. The leaders sometimes must pay $1000 to print one speech because such leader must meet the issue throughout the country. This explains my statement that many members are too stingy to become leaders."

'What a Rotten Skyline!' Exclaims Assuan Dam's Builder As He Looks at St. Louis From Mississippi's East Bank

How Sir William Willcocks, One of the World's Most Distinguished Engineers and One of the Few Living Men Mentioned in the Encyclopedia Britannica, Visited Our City Without Being Captured and Dined by Any of Our Civic Organizations.

With the Thermometer Registering 98, Our Climate Looked Worse Than the Nile's to Him but He Was Pleased With Our River Though He Thinks It Will Make a Lot of Trouble for Us When East St. Louis Finishes the Great Concrete Levee It Is Building.



SIR WILLIAM WILLCOCKS.

WILLCOCKS' DAM THE GREATEST IN WORLD

THE Assuan dam, built by William Willcocks at the head of the first Nile cataract, is considered the greatest engineering work of its kind in the world. It is 6400 feet long, 1750 feet longer than the Mississippi River dam built by Hugh L. Cooper at Keokuk, Io. The Assuan dam is for irrigation, as the Keokuk dam is for water power. Its reservoir has a capacity of three and three-fourths trillion cubic feet of water, and creates a lake extending up the valley for 200 miles. It cost two million pounds sterling ($10,000,000), and was four years under construction. After its completion in 1902, he was created a Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George by King Edward VII.

Sir William's life has been given to the work of reclaiming the desert, and he declares that he considers that work one of the greatest toward which any man's ambition can be directed. He is about to retire from active service, at the age of 62 years, and he intends, after spending the remainder of this summer in Switzerland, to return to Egypt, there to live for the remainder of his days.

BY CARLOS F. HURD.

ST. LOUIS had a distinguished visitor Wednesday, whom, if his presence had been known, the City Club and the Business Men's League might have scrambled to entertain with the customary luncheon honors, and whom the Engineers' Club might have insisted on taking away from them both.

Sir William Willcocks, builder of the great Nile dam at Assuan, Egypt, and one of the world's foremost engineers, who was knighted by King Edward VII for his achievements in irrigation and reclamation, is not only named in the international Who's Who, but is one of the comparatively few living men whose names appear in the Encyclopedia Britannica. He spent Wednesday morning in St. Louis, on his return from a month's survey of the Federal Government's irrigation and drainage projects in the Southwest. This survey was made in behalf of the Department of the Interior, on a commission from Secretary Lane, and Sir William was accompanied by W. A. Ryan, Controller of Reclamation in the Interior Department.

Sir William thought our "trams" abominably noisy, and compared our midday heat somewhat unfavorably with that of the Nile Valley. He was thoroughly interested in just one thing that St. Louis has to show—the Mississippi River. His regret, in leaving on a noon train for Washington, was not that he had failed to see Art Hill or Portland place or Pestalozzi street, but that he had not had time to ride up the Mississippi to its junction with the Missouri River.

The splotchy confluence, which St. Louis passengers on excursion steamers hardly pause in their dancing to look at, but which an early French explorer declared to be one of the grandest sights of nature, was included in Sir Williams' sightseeing plans for the morning. He was disappointed to learn that it was not within the city limits and could not be visited in the two and a half hours remaining before his train.

"You Americans Are Slaves."

A RIDE to East St. Louis, to see a part of the east side levee and drainage system, was the only excursion of interest to Sir William which could be proposed for the time available. As the visitor sat in his room at the American Hotel, waiting for the car which Ryan had ordered, and telling me of his observations in the Southwest, the telephone bell rang. Sir William went on talking.

As he finished a sentence, the bell was still ringing, and I waited for him to answer the call before asking another question. He saw me looking at the instrument on the wall.

"I don't pay the slightest attention to that," he remarked serenely. "Why must I get up and talk into the telephone because someone chooses to ring the bell? You Americans call yourselves free, but you're the greatest slaves I've seen. You have no powerful national enemies to worry you, so your people take it out in worrying each other.

"Give me an autocratic Government, where the people aren't bothered with details of administration and where nobody tries to keep you from eating, drinking and living as you wish to.

"Why, a half-dozen times, in traveling over the United States, I've been suddenly deprived of my customary bottle of stout, because of some local regulation or other, until now I've learned to carry it with me. Some of your good folks in this country are like the Puritans, who made everybody so righteous that, after Charles II came to the throne, England took a 10 years' debauch, as a natural reaction."

I reminded Sir William that he might find the same annoyances under his own flag in some parts of Canada, and that "Abolish the bar" is the issue of a general election in the Province of Ontario this month.

"Perhaps so," he replied. "They may be doing it in Britain too. Britain is going in for democracy, and some of us think she's imperilling her empire. My home is in Egypt. I have lived practically all my life there and in India, and I am returning to Egypt now to spend the rest of my life, following my retirement from active service." Sir William is 62 years old.

And when I asked Sir William, a few minutes later, his views on the Mexican problem, he answered from Egyptian history, or rather from Anglo-Egyptian history.

"Egypt, in 1882," he said, "had a land problem like Mexico's, and the dissatisfaction with the Government was as great as it has been in Mexico. Taxes were exorbitant, and the Government, by demanding the taxes before the crops were harvested, forced the people into the grasp of usurers.

"Gladstone was a man of high ideals—such a man as President Wilson. He said, in reply to the demands of business interests, that he would not move his hand to help the owners of 150,000,000 pounds sterling in Egypt. But he did see that the people of Egypt needed help, and in the cause of humanity he intervened to give them the government they needed. Today the Egyptian people are better off than they have ever been in the 7000 years of their history. Perhaps not all the Egyptians are satisfied even now. As one Arab sheik told me, 'We are all children of Adam, and he was dissatisfied with Paradise.' But the Egyptian people have more prosperity and greater individual opportunity than they ever had before.

"I don't say that Mr. Wilson's duty toward Mexico is the same that Gladstone's was towards Egypt. That is a matter for him to determine—and for the American people. International conditions are different in this part of the world. With her interest in the Suez Canal, England could not leave Egypt lying loose, or she might have seen some rival power take it. So she had to establish a protectorate, from which Egypt has received most of the benefit, and which has been, so far, an element of weakness rather than of strength in the empire."

Crossing Eads Bridge, Sir William asked the usual question, and I made the usual reply, about the conspicuously unfinished free bridge. His comment was that, under the sort of government of which he had most experience, engineers, and not the voting public, would have had the say-so as to the location of the missing east approach.

"A Rotten Skyline!"

POINTING out the St. Louis skyline to the visitor, as we looked across from the East Side railroad yards, I was rewarded with the exclamation: "A rotten skyline!" He went on to declare that minarets and domes would be much more attractive than the square outlines of the Railway Exchange and Pierce buildings, and cited the case of the London City Council, which, after one 11-story business building had been put up in the metropolis, warned all builders against repeating the offense.

A view of the concrete walls now being built along the East St. Louis levee, north of Eads Bridge, caused Sir William to inquire whether St. Louis was well above the danger of flood. When told that it was so considered, Sir William was hardly convinced, and remarked that the East Side embankments might make a great difference with the flood line on the west side.

"The people in Pittsburg," he replied, "bottled up their river between narrow embankments, so that it overflows their residences, and then they appealed to the Federal Government for flood relief and protection. I told some of the Pittsburg business men that they were like the man who killed his father and mother, and then besought mercy on the ground that he was an orphan.

"The water has to go somewhere. Local and State improvements are not the way to deal with the flood problem. The Federal Government is the only agency to handle the Mississippi River. Why, the flood that we read about in the Bible was probably caused by a lot of conflicting local systems of dealing with the rivers of Chaldea and Mesopotamia, at a season of unusually heavy rainfalls.

"I have studied the lower Mississippi, at Memphis and points below, and I have recommended that the Government should build a great reservoir in the St. Francis Basin, and impound water there as a preventive of floods, until the lower river shall widen and deepen its own channel, a thing it would do in a few years. Then the St. Francis Basin could be restored to agricultural use, and it would be the richest farming land in the whole country. Such a result could never be accomplished by a series of smaller basins. The Mississippi can be dealt with, as any other river can, by the use of engineering skill and money. Its difficulties are not insuperable."

Irrigation and Polygamy.

SIR WILLIAM spoke with interest of the Keokuk Dam and its builder, Hugh L. Cooper, but said he had not thought it worth his while to go out of his way to visit Keokuk, as his interest is in irrigation and reclamation, rather than in power.

"I have just come from Los Angeles," he remarked. "Los Angeles has what you call boosters, but it must be added that there is something to boost. In other places they tried to show me cities, and towns trying to be cities. But in Los Angeles, with a creditable city to show, they preferred to exhibit the country.

"I found farmers with five acres, without a weed, using water sparingly and fertilizer freely, making $2000 to $3000 a year, while others with 160 acres were hardly getting along. Eight acres is enough for any man to cultivate. When I look at the pioneer irrigation work the Mormons did in Utah, I understand why they practiced polygamy. Irrigation and polygamy go together naturally. One man can't cultivate more than five to eight acres of irrigated land properly, and if he aspires to own much land, he needs a lot of help. Ten wives and twenty or thirty children would be about the right idea, for a man with a quarter section of land in that district.

"Southern California is the high-water mark of irrigation in the world, but profits, even there, depend entirely on the proper use of water and the liberal fertilizing of the land. Over-irrigated and under-fertilized land, the world over, becomes the prey of alkali and seepage. In Egypt we have learned to lay our drains before we dig our irrigation canals.

"If nature gives a place 10 inches of rain in a year, it makes provision, by little hollows and depressions, for disposing of that water, but if, by irrigation, you increase the rainfall to fifty or sixty inches, and don't increase the hollows, all it can do is to collect in the soil, come to the surface and ruin the land. The nitrates in the soil are the most soluble thing in it, and the most valuable, and they are forced out when water is poured too freely through the land."

His Fling at Free Bridge

SIR WILLIAM'S recent tour of inspection took him to the Rio Grande project at El Paso, the Elephant Butte reservoir and dam in New Mexico, the Salt River Valley at Phoenix and Yuma, Ariz., the Imperial Valley of California (350 feet below sea level), the Los Angeles district, Boise, Idaho; Provo, Utah, and Grand Junction, Montrose and the San Luis Valley, in Colorado.

The last-named valley has been damaged by over-irrigation and plans for draining it are being considered. He did not visit the Japanese settlements in California, but heard something of them.

"No wonder we're afraid of those devils," he commented. "They work."

"Who's that chap?" Sir William asked, as we passed the new Laclede statue, on the city hall lawn, on our way to the station.

"Founder of the city, eh? I say, it's a good thing they haven't got him looking toward the river. If he were to see that bridge, he might fall off his pedestal."

Women, Militant and Peaceable

SYLVIA AND HERBERT.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: Premier Asquith's remarks to the deputation of workingwomen, whose reception was arranged by Sylvia Pankhurst, were characterized by that kind of diplomacy which consists in the employment of words to conceal thought. If they or the Pankhursts can derive the slightest encouragement from his statements, they are unusually optimistic. His promise to convey to the Home Secretary the request for the unconditional release of Miss Pankhurst may be regarded as a slight concession, but the Government probably is glad enough to let her go in the hope that she will cease her depredations.

A SUFFRAGETTE GAIN.

Ohio State Journal: Premier Asquith's consenting to receive a deputation of suffragettes is not only a distinct gain for the suffragettes, but for the Government also. The Premier's resolute purpose not to give audience to these women has greatly inflamed the situation. He could have well avoided it. He need not have granted their requests, but he could have talked with them and argued against their purpose. Conferences are generally in order. In this day and generation, it is not to be presumed that the truth is all on one side, so it is well to reason together and disclose standpoints. It is good for the soul to talk with an opponent, and it belongs to the pact of modern society that, while one person cannot always meet another, it is bad policy to wholly disdain the other. We trust that the militant situation will clear up some now and the spirit of ruin will end.

PANKHURSTS IN THE WAY.

Detroit Free Press: If the Government could break down the influence of the Pankhursts by weaning away their followers, it could then grant votes to women without stultifying itself. Possibly the Cabinet would like to be in a position to take such action, for the pressure toward parliamentary suffrage for women is becoming strong from the vast body of English women who believe in peaceful methods. Disinterested observers say the women of Britain would have had suffrage some time ago had it not been for the tactics of the militants, which make it almost impossible for a self-respecting Government to yield.

ENGLAND MUST ADVANCE.

San Francisco Chronicle: Asquith would have been recreant to his party and the country had he endangered home rule and various other principles upon which the electors gave him a mandate by listening to the siren voices of Sylvia, Christobel and Emmeline Pankhurst and introducing a woman-suffrage measure.

With many of his platform pledges filled, so far as is in his power to fulfill them, he has now the leisure in which to hear what the suffragettes have to say and accordingly consents. So far as Parliament is concerned, he was politically wise in going ahead with his program, though it is just possible that he might have saved many disturbances had he formally received the militants a couple of years ago.

Just possible, but scarcely probable, since there is no rule of reason that operates with certainty among the suffragettes. They are out to fight and as there is money in the fighting the mercenaries will continue active until England comes in line with California and other advanced countries.

BERTHA VON SUTTNER.

New York Evening Post: With the death of the Baroness von Suttner disappears from view one of the most remarkable personalities of our time, whose influence is, fortunately, destined long to survive her. To her, it may be expected, monuments will be built when the militarism she fought so ardently shall have been abolished on earth. But her great boookoo, "shrdlushrdlu earth. But her great book, "Ground Arms," will always be her truest memorial. Whether the story is true or not that a reading of this tract induced the Czar of Russia to call the first Hague conference we do not know. It is, however, certain that no other brief for peace has won so many converts or exercised so great an influence in all quarters of the globe. Her portrayal of war's horrors opened the eyes of millions to its actual nature, and may be counted one of the great forces which are steadily bringing about the emancipation of the world from wholesale murder, even though war goes on at present in its most harrowing form, as so recently in the Balkans.

ASQUITH'S RADICAL CONFESSION.

New York World: From Premier Asquith the deputation of East End working women that he received at Downing street had no reason to hope that he would pledge the Government to father a bill granting the vote to women. He has been an avowed anti-suffragist to everybody's knowledge, and the Cabinet is divided on the issue. But the working women drew from him the consoling admission that "if the change has to come, we must give the vote to women on the same terms as men."

Even Mrs. Pankhurst and other militants, when they agreed to compromise on the conciliation bill, were willing to barter away the interests of the great mass of women for the benefit of a limited class. The extension of the parliamentary franchise to women qualified under existing laws to vote in municipal elections would have affected only about 1,000,000 women, a small fraction of the whole number of male voters. Only on the ground that it might serve as an entering wedge could woman suffragists excuse their support of such a measure. Professedly, they were fighting for the principle of equality with men at the polls. Practically, they were abandoning their principles on the chance that special privileges should be secured for a relatively small number.

It is curious that this lesson in democracy to the advocates of woman suffrage should come from a determined anti-suffragist like Mr. Asquith.

The Mexican Problem to Date

OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

Philadelphia Record: There is nobody to mediate between the opposing sides in Mexico's internal conflict unless this Government formally assumes the role, as it has already done in fact. This is the end sought in the representations which have been made to the Constitutionalist junta at Washington, to Gen. Carranza at Saltillo and perhaps even to Gen. Villa. If Constitutionalist delegates should be sent to Niagara Falls there would be two mediations simultaneously proceeding at that place, one concerning Mexico's domestic affairs, with the United States acting the part of mediator, while the A B C Powers would adjust the international questions and, perhaps, reduce the complete results of the conference to a general peace protocol. This would be a roundabout way to all-around agreement, but it would serve. And it looks as if it might succeed.

THE ONLY CURE.

Detroit News: It would be a simple matter to consent to the seating of a President who would be acceptable to the Huerta delegates, to accord him the recognition of this Government and wash our hands of the whole matter, but this would merely insure the indefinite continuance of disorder. The Government of the United States seeks a cure of the political conditions, not a palliative administered to avoid neighborly responsibility. The only cure lies in the selection of some man who can command the confidence of the discordant elements and who will make a serious attempt to reform the land laws and system of taxation that are the basis of all the trouble.

WHAT ABOUT VERA CRUZ?

Washington Herald: Having sent troops to Mexico, the President may withdraw them, leaving the situation as it was before the flag incident at Tampico; but the power to declare war rests with Congress. He may not use the troops now in Vera Cruz for the pacification of Mexico by force. Nor can he afford even to risk giving Huerta opportunity to force hostilities by sudden action to further his own ends.

The President's situation is delicate in the extreme. As it now stands, it will be within Huerta's power to force a battle at Vera Cruz the moment mediation collapses, if it does collapse. Our army is there for him to shoot at, if in his desperation such a course appeals to him; and thus more American blood may be shed over the internal troubles of Mexico, with which this country should not be concerned. Obviously, the President cannot appeal to Congress to declare war while mediation is still in progress, and when it ends in failure this grave question may be determined for us by Huerta.

VILLA OR CARANZA.

Cleveland Leader: Is Villa to be supported by Mr. Bryan and Mr. Wilson or will they stick to the less formidable Carranza because he has a better title than Villa, in everything except force? This choice is evidently near. The differences between the two Mexicans are too deep to be healed though they may be patched up for the day and covered on the surface. In the light of what has happened, is it possible to imagine Villa and Carranza amicably sharing the spoils and the glory after the fall of Mexico City and the complete triumph of the revolution?

NOT HOPELESS YET.

New York Evening Post: There may fairly be said to be in the United States today hardly the glimmerings of a war-like spirit against Mexico. Now, in this age and day, when two countries honestly want peace, they get it. Japan and Russia each earnestly sought peace at Portsmouth in 1905. That was the reason they came finally and unexpectedly to an agreement. The prophecies of failure were then more numerous and positive than they are today. Nearly all the English correspondents informed their newspapers that a fiasco was certain. Only 24 hours before the treaty of peace was announced, Mr. G. W. Smalley cabled a column from Portsmouth to the London Times, absolutely asserting the breakdown of the negotiations, and declaring that the war would be renewed. Today's pessimism about Niagara may be similarly dissipated.

AFTER ZACATECAS.

Washington Times: After Zacatecas and San Louis Potosi, then, there will be nothing to stop Villa's march to Mexico City. It is possible that this actual entrance into the city, over the roads and causeways that lead to it across the marshes and partially drained lakes, may be a considerable time delayed; but this can mean only annoyance, not effective opposition. It is the history of Mexican revolts that the fighting doesn't get into the capital; it has always been vacated in time to prevent the terror of a city battle.

We will know, after Zacatecas, just how desperate Huerta can act; whether he will play the madman, or try to get away with his life and perhaps a pot of money. His chance of escape with his neck will be very bad if Villa gets hold of him; and there is small likelihood that Washington will intervene in his behalf.

NO PEACE IN SIGHT.

Washington Post: The prospect of pacifying Mexico by means of mediation is as remote as ever. Huerta and Villa cannot be made to agree upon anything but warfare. The mediators may discuss the names of neutrals and Constitutionalists, but the decision rests with the men in the field. The substitution of Angeles for Carranza and his acceptance by the United States as a suitable provisional President will have no effect upon Huerta, and therefore no progress toward peace has been made by the elimination of Carranza.

Evidently the Mexican tragedy must continue, so long as the United States will not intervene to stop the flow of blood. While the Americans talk the Mexicans fight.

A GLEAM OF HOPE.

Pittsburg Dispatch: And vowing they would "ne'er consent, consented." The A B C mediators, despite their oft-repeated declaration that Carranza would not be admitted to the Niagara Falls' negotiations unless he agreed to an armistice with Huerta, have, apparently, under pressure from Washington and to avert the collapse of the conference, invited Carranza to send representatives to meet informally the Huerta and American mediators. Huerta, it is said, has agreed to have his representatives meet those of Carranza informally and the United States is hopeful that Carranza will be as complaisant. Whether that gentleman will not think it beneath his dignity to come in by the back door is another question. Experience with him has shown that you never can tell.

If, however, he should agree and these informal but direct conferences follow, they would seem to offer the most tangible hope of success in mediation. The dickering between the Huerta delegates and Washington, virtually acting for Carranza, but handicapped by its dubious position, has apparently come to the brink of failure. Anyway the new plan gives the mediation proceedings an indefinite extension, during which Villa may find a speedier solution.

FREIGHT RATE INCREASE EXPECTED ON JULY 3RD

—DEMAR IN THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

EFFECTS IN BRIEF.

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: The outcome appears to be chiefly important in that it sustains the long and short haul clause and reasserts and broadens the discretionary authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In that sense it makes the commission a still more powerful regulative agency of Congress in the supervision of commerce between the states. The technical protests of transportation companies and the irreconcilable complaints of competitive cities are equally unavailing as long as the commission undertakes merely to establish just rates for service and without arbitrary discrimination.

In declaring oil pipe lines employed in transporting between states the product of others than their owners to be common carriers the Court, by upholding the law, at last gratifies independent producers and the outside public. The decision makes regulation practicable and necessarily that brings carrying rates into control.

In the California mineral lands cases, where petroleum rights were involved, the decision is in favor of the Southern Pacific and allied railroads for property of enormous value. In this affair the Government slept on its rights and thus lost them; and so the private litigants in this action were defeated.

PROTECTS INNOCENT HOLDERS.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The decision rests mainly on the inconveniences and injury to land titles if the clause were held to be still valid. Much of the land has been sold, some of it perhaps half a dozen times, and the present holders, having developed it, would, if the land were taken away, be subjected to great loss. This is true, but on the other hand, the inconvenience and loss to the nation in conveying land which by the grant was not valid is very important. It was plainly a question in which the loss and injury to one side or the other must be accepted. As in many other aspects of the transcontinental business, the railroads get the better of a $700,000,000 dispute.

OIL LANDS DECISION.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: The court finds that oil is a mineral, but says: "In every other case before this Court we have held that where the law says that only mineral or homestead lands are to be granted by the land officials, the officials must do their duty of ascertaining whether that land came within the law and that they could not perform their duty by inserting exceptions that the land should not pass if found later not to be within the law."

The railroads, in other words, took title as the lands were mineral or not at the time. The issuance of the patents was conclusive evidence of the fact. They were entitled to the benefits of subsequent discoveries, as an ordinary purchaser would be. Otherwise, of course, the title to none of the granted land would be fixed and improvement would be at great risk.

Congress may have erred in giving such vast holdings to the railways, but that is no reason why the Supreme Court should overrule the established law. The Government has made bad bargains before, but it has fulfilled its obligations. The Southern Pacific might have got a gold brick; it happened to get a gold mine.

"LEGAL FLUBDUBBERY."

Pittsburg Leader: In the matter of the validity of the titles to oil lands worth some $700,000,000, the Supreme Court decided that the railroads are legally entitled to their loot and that the Government, the country, the people, lose.

In course of time, when the public mind has evoluted to a higher plane of intelligence, this decision will be reversed like that on the long and short haul brigandage. In the meantime the railroads have been handed almost a billion dollars' worth of land to which they have no right whatever. That is, other than a legal right, founded upon a decision of the Supreme Court, which will be reversed some time—perhaps sooner than they think.

The public mind is shifting on these questions and with that change will come a flat demand for plain, common-sense justice, not that brand based upon legal flubdubbery which this decision is.

WONDERS OF INVENTION.

Washington Times: Just the other day we read that the last link had been completed, out somewhere in the Nevada desert, in the great copper circuit that now spans the continent and connects the telephone system of New York and San Francisco, so that the Gothamite may—at $12 the minute, if he likes talk so well—converse direct with his friend in San Francisco.

It is a great achievement; but there's no time to think about it. Today we read of the rapid perfection of the wireless telephone, so that band concerts are being transported through the ether, from ship to ship, a distance of 200 and 300 miles, with no medium save the electric waves turned loose in the atmosphere.

COCOANUTS IN PANAMA.

Chicago Journal: Cocoanut plantations are being started in the republic of Panama, the first large enterprise of that kind being located near the port which rejoices in the gentle name of Bocas del Toro—Mouth of the Bull. This particular plantation is planned with all modern conveniences, including a copra plant, and mills to use the valuable cocoa fiber for rope and matting.

If the enterprise pays—and is not seized upon by stock-market fakers—it should open the way to a great and profitable industry in Panama. Yet one may doubt whether that republic will ever produce another crop as profitable—to some people—as the personally conducted "revolution" which made it the ward of the United States.

"JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT."

Des Moines Capital: It is difficult to have the affairs of a great Government go just right. President Wilson has appointed a man by the name of Jones to be the head of the Reserve Bank Board. Jones is prominent in the Internationa Harvester Co., which is being prosecuted by th Government and personally gave $10,000 to t Wilson campaign fund. He was the instrume in raising the total of $85,000, which sum w paid to the Democratic National Committ Otherwise Jones would not have been heard Making appointments following quickly afte contributions is what the country does not like. The Democrats are not alone in their guilt. Republicans did the same. But, without regard to who does it, it is wrong. It is intimated that the Senate will reject Jones.

Noted Prima Donna Moves From Dresden to Nice Because the Winters of Germany Are Too Rigorous for Her Aged Husband.

HUNDRED MUSICAL FRIENDS GATHER FOR SONG FEAST

NICE, France, June 27.—Mme. Sembrich's new home, the "Villa Monticello," has been the center of much gayety during the season and the Mecca for musicians from many parts of the world. The splendid furnishings from her Dresden home have all been transported here, and the villa is one of the most beautiful within and without to be found in the neighborhood.

It stands high up on a hill overlooking the city and commands a magnificent view of the Mediterranean. A big garden of cypresses, palm trees and other luxuriant vegetation of the South secludes it from mere curiosity seekers.

The noted singer spends a great deal of her time out of doors. Sembrich is the most domesticated of women and a devoted wife to her now aged husband, Prof. Stengel, who was her teacher when she was a little girl in Poland. It is on account of Prof. Stengel that the Dresden home has been abandoned, the winters there having proved too severe for him, and the new home has been established in the mild climate of the Riviera.

Numerous guests come and go and there have been some wonderful little private concerts in the music room of the villa. A short time ago Sembrich invited about a hundred musical friends to come to Monticello and she gave an afternoon's program of songs.

Her old friends also enjoyed hearing her play upon the piano and the violin, in which she is almost as talented as with the voice. She studied both the piano and the violin when she was a girl and toured the Austrian provinces in concerts, playing them. It was only after these studies had extended over 11 years and she was finishing at the conservatory at Lemberg under Prof. Stengel that he discovered she had a voice. It was Liszt who heard her play in Vienna and then sing, who decided her future career.

"My child," he said, "God has given you three pairs of wings to fly through the country of music. They are all equal. Give up none of them. But sing, my child, sing, for you have a heavenly voice."

Sembrich has never been too busy to give up one of the three. Even now she practices one hour every day on the piano, one on the violin and one with her voice. As her daily regime also includes two hours of walking, she is seldom acquainted with that luxury called leisure.

On the long hall of Monticello which has high French windows and is an imposing room in itself, she has gathered souvenirs sent her from crowned heads and other admirers all over the world. On the walls hang fine pictures and there are many pieces of sculpture, jeweled boxes containing decorations bestowed by different sovereigns and large easel photographs in gold and silver frames signed by admirers.

In the music room Sembrich has photographs of herself in her favorite roles—Rosina in "The Barber of Seville," Mimi in "La Boheme," Lucia in the Donizetti opera, Violetta in "Travita," and the Countess in "The Marriage of Figaro."

There also she has photographs and remembrances from great compatriots—Paderewski, Modjeska, Jean and Edward de Reszke Modjeska, the eldest of all, was the guardian angel to this little coterie of gifted Poles and her photograph occupies a place of honor in the home of each of them.

Sembrich has been induced to accept a few pupils this season, but she is going for a grand holiday into Switzerland for the summer, to see Paderewski as usual at his villa near Lucerne and to take some Alpine Mountain trips—her best-beloved sport.

Her son, William, now 28, and a promising engraver, is often her companion on these tours. The famous prima donna puts on short skirts and carries her Alpen-stock with as much agility as if climbing were her profession. She finds it the best possible exercise and the clear mountain air renews her youth.

SPAIN'S GREATEST DANCER IS COMING TO AMERICA

MADRID, June 27.—"La Argentina," Spain's most famous danseuse and ablest exponent of the tango and other exotic steps, has returned here for a short stay after a triumphal tour of Berlin and Monte Carlo.

Massenet, the French composer, expressly wrote for her the music of a delightful ballet entitled "Espana," which was produced in Monte Carlo with great success.

La Argentina has a pleasant though not powerful singing voice, but her dancing, especially of all Spanish national and characteristic dances, was a revelation to the public of Northern Europe and the Riviera. American cities will soon have an opportunity of seeing her and judging of her merits, for after a short season in Christiania, St. Petersburg and Moscow, where she is going almost immediately, she will sail for the United States.

WOMAN LAUGHS AS GRAND DUKE IDENTIFIES HIMSELF

LONDON, June 27.—Most important among the society function of the week here was the dinner given by the Countess of Craven (Miss Cornelia Martin of New York) to the Czar's cousin, Grand Duke Michael Michaelovitch and his morganatic wife, Countess Torby, affection for whom has kept the Grand Duke in exile more than 20 years.

At dinner the Grand Duke remarked that one day last winter, while watching a golf match at Cannes, a very charming American woman among the spectators asked him:

"Could you point out the Grand Duke Michael?" He introduced himself, whereupon the woman exclaimed in a tone of contemptuous incredulity: "You, a Grand Duke? Oh my!" and she ran off.

"I never felt so small in my life," the Grand Duke confessed.

Henley Is Looking to the Americans for Its Gayety

Alfred Vanderbilt's Houseboat, Like a Palace Among Cottages, Will Be the Center of Hospitality During This Week's Great Rowing Regatta—English Hostesses Were Appealed To, but in Vain.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 27.—The Henley regatta, as a society event, is depending almost entirely upon the Americans, who are expected to flock down to support the Union Boat Club crew from Harvard in its effort to win boating laurels in the races during the first four days of July.

As usual Alfred Vanderbilt's houseboat will eclipse in its gayety and hospitality anything else at Henley during regatta week, as the promoters have sought without success to interest some of the prominent English hostesses to lend their efforts in making Henley the social function it used to be.

The barges and houseboats which formerly extended in a long string from the winning post to the start on the Buckinghamshire shore and half way up on the Berkshire shore and were crowded with guests from the most fashionable circles, have dwindled down to some half a dozen, none remarkable for beauty. The Vanderbilt houseboat looks like a palace beside a few little cottages.

King George and Queen Mary were induced two years ago to lend their royal presence to the resuscitation of Henley, largely due to the pleadings of their young daughter, it is said, and the sovereigns and Princess Mary went the whole length of the course in the historical old royal barge as Queen Elizabeth was wont to do. There was an enormous influx of society that year, but last year no benefit seemed apparent, and Henley has given up hope of support from the English as a permanent thing, pinning faith entirely upon Americans.

Aristocrats Resent Intrusion of Common Herd.

The desertion of the English is due, it is believed, to the lack of exclusiveness at Henley. Anybody and everybody can go to Henley, and all have equal rights, because the Thames is the King's highway and no gate money can be charged for admission thereto. Americans who care for the sport do not mind this, but it grates upon the nerves of the English.

The question of the hour in the columns of the "petticoat" papers, with their thousands of society subscribers, is whether an ancient British institution which makes it improper for a hostess to assume the obligation of introducing her guests to one another while under her roof, is threatened with extinction.

Certain young people, some of whom give their names while others do not, think the ruling hostesses might relax a little under the strain of modern life, and take the trouble to see that young girls have young men presented to them at the balls so that everybody could have partners and enjoy themselves.

Pretty and attractive young girls sit around in the corners of the ballrooms as wallflowers, while immaculately groomed and elegant young men wander aimlessly without the temerity to ask for dances where they have not been formally presented. Older people who have the dining-out habit sit frigid and silent where they might be amiable and talkative if they had only been introduced.

Strangely enough there has been very small response to the plaintive request for a change. In the first place, it is declared that the burden and responsibility upon the hostess would be so great as to be intolerable.

MRS. PALMER AS HOSTESS WINS NOTABLE VICTORY

American Has Duchess of Vendome as Guest and Her Ancient Foe, Infanta Eulalia, Is a Secondary Attraction.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, June 27.—Mrs. Potter Palmer achieved one of the greatest social triumphs of her long career when she gave a reception a few days ago at her Paris mansion for the Duchess of Vendome, the wife of the Bourbon Prince, whose mother was the ill-fated Duchess d'Alencon, who lost her life in the Paris Bazar fire of 1897.

Unlike her brother, King Albert of the Belgians, the Duchess of Vendome is not democratic and she has carefully avoided being identified with the international hostesses of American birth who entertain so lavishly in Paris. Mrs. Potter Palmer has scored where numerous other American women have failed.

The reception was hardly less notable for the presence of Infanta Eulalia of Spain. It is now 20 years since that historic occasion at the Chicago World's Fair, when the Infanta, the official representative of Spain, turned her back upon Mrs. Potter Palmer, as the head of the Board of Women Managers.

"I will not meet the wife of an innkeeper," said the proud Spanish Princess, in a voice loud enough to be heard by dozens of persons, thereby creating the one sensation of the fair. It remained as a permanent source of hostility between the two women.

Afterwards, acting as hostess for the late King Edward at Biarritz, in Spain, Mrs. Palmer had ample satisfaction because the Infanta was then not in favor at the court of her nephew, King Alfonso, who was not in a positon to be accepted by the hostess to royalty in Spanish territory. But in the 20 years since the Chicago meeting, Eulalia has become an ardent admirer of American people—perhaps it might more properly be said an admirer of their pocketbooks—and she has taken on the list of her intimate friends many Americans whose fortunes were founded in far humbler enterprises than "innkeeping."

She is a genius in the art of spending money. Her worst enemies agree to that. She is always in debt and the price of becoming her intimate friend is constantly increasing, as her spending capacity seems to increase at the approach of "middle life" (she was 50 last February). She takes it for granted that any rich person from a democratic land who invites her to be a guest of honor at a reception will give her as a small souvenir carte blanche at some of the big dressmakers for a week or two. Then she can go down and order whatever suits her fancy and have the bill sent to the hostess.

A South American millionaire, whose wife became so devoted to the Infanta that she invited her to lunch or dine every week or two to meet her friends received a peremptory cablegram from the husband to come home. A million to the Infanta seemed like a drop in the bucket, but the South American decided he would like to conserve the remainder of his.

Mrs. Potter Palmer had perhaps her sweetest revenge in knowing that all of the select company she invited would come principally to meet the Duches of Vendome, it having become no exciting thing to run across the Infanta at parties. The Duchess is extremely exclusive. She belongs to that world of Faubourg St. Germain which still remains practically closed to Americans. Like her sister, Josephine, the wife of Emperor William's cousin, Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, the Duchess of Vendome is a quiet, domestic woman, who likes to stay at home and look after her children and who, as a devoted Catholic, takes a great deal of time for attendance at church. She has four children, three daughters, ranging in age from 12 to 18, and a son of 9, Prince Charles, Duke of Nemours.

Her husband is contented with a modest establishment out at Neuilly, near Paris—a small house, furnished artistically, which might belong to a fairly prosperous painter or sculptor, but which no one would think was the abode of royalty. He and his wife have also an equally modest establishment in England, at Wimbledon, near London, which the Duke possesses as an inheritance from the time when Bourbons as well as the Orleanists and the Bonapartes were not allowed to live in France. The English residence, however, is seldom occupied by the Duke and Duchess. They have a chateau in the Tyrol and they divide their time between it and the little place at Neuilly.

The Duchess of Vendome, with her quiet habits and simple life, has been hopeless as an acquisition to the American hostess' ambition to entertain royalty, which makes Mrs. Potter Palmer's victory all the greater. The Duchess could not have been tempted by any amount of gorgeous display in her honor, but she has been won by Mrs. Palmer's intellectual charm and her unusual position in Paris on that account.

THE HOMECOMING OF THE COUNTRY CLUB POLO TEAM FROM KANSAS CITY WITH NEW LAURELS.

Sunday Evening Crowds on the "Sunburn Special", the Homebound Train From the Meramec Attest Popularity and Enjoyment of River Sports With the Stay-at-Homes.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

DID you ever hear of the "Sunburn Special?"

No, it is not a new kind of cold cream or lotion, but a train that comes in from stations along the Meramec Sunday evening carrying 10 coaches filled with young men and girls who have been out on the river all day, some of whom have paddled from 30 to 50 miles and are all tired out and sunburned, many sound asleep with their heads on each other's shoulders where the joggling of the train has put them, all blissfully unconscious, looking like "Babes in the Wood."

Most of the frequenters of the river go out on Sunday morning on the 7 or the 9 o'clock train. They go in groups of four and six, thus eliminating the chaperon who would be supercargo in a canoe and placating Mrs. Grundy.

They go up the river and paddle down stopping on the way for lunch—those who have not carried it along—sometimes making one of the river clubs for a noonday dinner.

Of clubs there are scores dotting the hills along the picturesque banks of the stream.

All have bathing places where the members go for a swim and all along the river from Pacific to Valley Park is just one continuous party. When you tie up for lunch or a swim, the canoes pass you by in a steady procession all the while. Everybody seems in a great good humor.

There is joyousness in the very atmosphere and a great amount of dignity that those girls take with them that makes the whole plan perfectly all right.

In the train coming home they look as fresh and dainty as when they started, and are as gay as can be.

So if any one thinks there is no summer life around St. Louis and that it is a good place to get away from, it would behoove him to go out on the Meramec on Sunday—and Saturday too—and see what a good time the stay-at-homes have.

In the review passing in canoes down stream will be seen some of the debutantes of last winter and girls who will make their bows next fall who can paddle a canoe and swim along with her other accomplishments and though staying at home during the summer, is having a regular summer resort time with more beaux than she knows what to do with.

SATURDAY will be the Fourth of July and all the Country Clubs will have their usual buffet luncheons, golf matches, al fresco dinners and dances afterwards.

The St. Louis Country Club announces a concert on the lawn in the afternoon but says nothing about a polo game which has always been one of the features of the day at the old club with all the matrons and belles and beaux sitting up on the terrace overlooking the polo field.

It will be some time before the field at the new clubhouse will be in shape and it is too bad for the team will come home tonight from Kansas City where they won a laurel or two in the match that was played there last week. And it would be so interesting to see George Simmons repeat some of the spectacular playing he did when they beat the Denver team. We have some good polo players, some day they will do something worth while and bring home some trophies.

They say the team plays great polo but they need mounts. It seems it takes an awful lot of ponies to win a match.

MR. AND MRS. PIERRE CHOUTEAU SCOTT have announced the marriage of their sister, Miss Marie Louise Keller, to John K. Erskine Jr., in New York, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament.

The ceremony was performed by Mgr Matthew Taylor in the presence of only the nearest relatives. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Scott and of Mrs. Astley Griffin, all daughters of the late George L. Keller of St. Louis. About five years ago Miss Keller went to New York, where her sister, Mrs. Griffin, has an apartment in the Ansona.

Mrs. Scott and her little daughter, Miss Marie Louise Scott, went on for the wedding and will go to Sea Gato tomorrow for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Erskine will spend the first weeks of their honeymoon at the bridegroom's camp in the Adirondacks. They will make their home in New York.

THE engagement of Miss Elizabeth, better known as "Debbie," Case and Harold Bixby, which was announced Friday afternoon, is one of the most interesting of the recent betrothals. Miss Case has never made her bow to society and will be married in the autumn instead of "coming out." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Case of 4171 Washington boulevard and the sister of Miss Virginia Case, who was one of last season's debutantes. Miss Case and Miss Ruth Bixby were graduated from Mary Institute in 1913 and instead of making their debut, went abroad with a chaperon and returned a short time ago. Miss Bixby is going to the Bixby summer home on Lake George and Miss Case is coming home. Mr. Bixby is the third son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby of Lindell boulevard and was graduated from Amherst in the class of 1913. The marriage probably will be in the autumn.

MRS. CHARLES SCULLIN of 67 Vandeventer place, her little daughter, Marie Lenore, and her sister, Miss Florence Wade, arrived Thursday in New York on the Imperator, after an absence of several months in Europe. They had embarked on the Kaiser Wilhelm II, which collided with another ship in the English Channel, June 17. They then changed ships.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Crutsinger of Kirkwood and Arthur Nevins Tumbly of Webster took place Wednesday evenig at 5:30, at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. B. F. Stemblin officiating. The color scheme, green and pink, was carried out in the bridemaids' gowns. The bride's gown was of white charmeuse trimmed with Venetian lace and a Juiet cap of lace held the veil in place. The bride carried a bouquet of orchids. Miss Irene Ochterback, maid of honor, wore a gown of pink charmeuse and carried pink rose and lilies of the valley. Misses Ruth Gauhn of Camden, Ark., and Miss Corinne Trembly, bridemaids, wore green taffeta veiled with white net. Abraham Thompson served as best man.

Misses Frances Smith, Regina Devine, Marie Hercules and Helen Kinsella, former classmates of the bride, served in the dining room. Mrs. Garnet Atwater, Miss Leontine Tracy, Miss Marian Sprague and Mrs. Edward Wilson assisted.

The young couple left for a tour of the northern lakes.

Mrs. Herbert A. Feldman of 54 Kingsbury place will depart Friday for Narragansett Pier, accompanied by her son, William G. Feldman and her daughter, Janice.

Mr. and Mrs. Amedee V. Reyburn of 4634 Lindell boulevard have gone to Colorado Springs, Col., for the summer. Their daughter, Miss Charlotte Reyburn, who has been at school in Philadelphia, went with them.

MME. ARMAND B. PEUGNET, who has had apartments at the Washington Hotel for several years, has bought Mrs. Claus Vieth's house at 4480 Lindell boulevard and will take possession of it when she returns with her daughters, Misses Lily and Clare Berthold and her grandchildren from Charlevoix, Mich., where they will spend the rest of the summer.

MISS SENTA GOLDBERG and John R. Titsworth were married at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. F. J. Mayers of Clayton, the Rev. Carroll M. Davis, dean of Christ Church Cathedral, officiating. The wedding march was played by Ernest R. Kroeger.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe meteor. Her sister, Miss Elza Goldberg, was bridemaid; Mathа Meyers was ring bearer, and Misses Viola Essen and Dorothy Boysen were ribbon bearers. The decorations were green and white.

A reception was held from 4:30 to 6:30. Mr. Titsworth and his bride departed Thursday evening for Brownsville, Tenn., where they will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Southeimer of 6044 Westminster place departed last night for Detroit and a trip East. Miss Mary Street and Miss Erma Reitz, who were the guests of Mrs. Southeimer for two weeks, have returned to their home in Paducah, Ky.

To enjoy one of Mme. de Foe's celebrated dinners at her Crystal Spring Farm on Baxter road in the county, one mile north of Clayton road, is the great attraction for automobile parties these hot evenings. They call her on the long distance Bell phone, Chesterfield 855, and in less than an hour they are on her cool porches enjoying one of her famous home-cooked dinners. Fourth of July will be a big day at the De Foe Farm.

Dr. and Mrs. William Burleigh of 4952 Delmar boulevard, and their daughter, Miss Maryrose Burleigh, departed for Providence, R. I., where they will be the guests of friends and relatives until the last of July, when they will leave for Eagle River, Wis., to spend August.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee. —ADV.

SUNSET HILL COUNTRY CLUB announces a special dinner dance Friday evening. It will make the week unusually gay with the dinner dance there Wednesday, which is always well patronized, and all the dances at that and the other clubs Saturday evening.

THE marriage of Miss Lucille Wolff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Wolff of 4317 Lindell boulevard, and Edwin J. Schlesinger of New York will take place this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride.

The day was chosen by the bride because it is her grandfather, Capt. Hecht's, eighty-seventh birthday, and he has come from Chicago for the double celebration.

Capt. Hecht is Mrs. Wolff's father and a veteran of the Civil War. Only members of the family will be present and the bridegroom's father, Louis Schlesinger, has come on for the nuptials.

Real Wonder-Worker for Wrinkled Faces

Those who have tried all sorts of so-called "wrinkle-removers" in a vain effort to lose those unwelcome traces of age, illness or worry, can scarcely find words to express their delight with the wonderful saxolite formula, once they have given it a trial. The success of this method is due not alone to its marvelous effectiveness—upon the deepest lines and crowsfeet, as well as upon the very fine ones—but also to its surprisingly quick action and its entire harmlessness. Its simplicity and its inexpensiveness are other commendable features, for one needs only dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, and bathe the face in this solution. At once a remarkable transformation is beheld.

It is not only the effect on wrinkles and creases that is so noticeable, but facial contour is remarkably improved and the face looks much younger. One should be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite. The lotion, being so refreshing, is particularly grateful to tired faces these warm, depressing days. —ADV.

Miss Stella Hafertepe of 2047 Allen avenue and Erwin J. Wernig were married Wednesday at 9 a. m. at S. S. Peter and Paul's Church in the presence of more than 500 guests by the Rev. J. Stevens. After the ceremony there was a large reception at the home of the parents of the bride. The bride wore a gown of ivory tinted crepe meteor, with a court train of Chantilly lace. Her veil was held in place by lilies of the valley.

Miss Frances Groefer served as maid of honor. She wore a delicate pink crepe de chine, trimmed in Venetian lace and rosebuds with a fish train. Miss Elizabeth Nordhoff, the bridemaid, wore a canary-colored crepe de chine, trimmed in Venetian lace and black picture hats were worn by the attendants. The flower girl wore a dotted net trimmed with bunches of blue and carried a large basket of sweet peas.

A. Wernig served his brother as best man. The ushers were John Neber and John A. Dufard.

The couple departed for a honeymoon in the North and after their return, July 6, will be at home to friends at 2047 Allen avenue.

Dr. James S. Coyle (Dentist) wishes to inform his many friends and patrons that he has moved from 3034 Easton avenue, to room 214 Delmar Building Delmar avenue and King's highway.

The engagement of Miss Miriam Flersheim, daughter of Mrs. George Walton Flersheim of Colorado Springs, to Clarence G. Donahoe of 5070 Westminster place has been announced. The marriage will be in the autumn. Mrs. Flersheim and her daughter formerly lived in St. Lous, but went West about four years ago.

BEAUTY DOCTOR

(By Clara Belle M.)

(From Chicago Examiner.)

"Speaking from my own personal experience and from observation of many whom I have successfully treated in the past two years, I should say that Madame Moneaux really owed her great success as a beauty specialist to the use of a simple preparation which is used exclusively to develop the bust, arms and neck. I became acquainted with this formula and have used it ever since, much to the delight of patrons.

"If your bust lacks development or firmness you can rely on both increase and firmness from the persistent use of a rare secret compound of oils, known to pharmacists and at toilet counters as medicated venosol. The substance comes in sealed tubes with full directions for home use and is all in all delightful and harmless.

"Apply the treatment regularly for a sufficient time, as the case may require and the most exquisite firmness and rounding development is quite certain to reward any thin, undeveloped woman."—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Home Beauty Parlor

By Betty Dean

Bessie: Economy is no excuse when, for a small sum, you can make at home a full pint of the very best scalp and hair tonic as follows: Put 1 ounce quinzoin (from your druggist's), into ½ pint alcohol, then add ½-pint water. Rub a little at a time well into the scalp and dandruff and excess oil will quickly disappear. Continued use of the quinzoin tonic will restore the soft fluff and beautiful gloss to brittle, faded hair. The timely use of this tonic will always keep your scalp healthy and your hair beautiful. This tonic is very soothing to tender, itching scalps.

Brown Eyes: For a harmless eye tonic dissolve 1 ounce crystos in 1 pint clear water and you will have as good an eye tonic as money can buy. This is excellent for tired, inflamed or aching eyes and quickly relieves granulated lids. Only 2 or 3 drops are required in the eye at a time and its use frequently overcomes the need for glasses.

Cora B: To stop gaining weight make up this simple, harmless formula at home and take a tablespoonful three times a day and you will soon be rid of that trouble. In 1½ pints hot water dissolve 4 ounces parnotis (which all good druggists have in stock). This treatment does not call for dieting and is gentle, yet positive, in reducing fat. When your weight is sufficiently reduced stop the treatment and your flesh will be solid and the skin free from wrinkles.

Teacher: You ask for a good wrinkle-eraser. I use plain almozoin creamjelly, the most effective thing I know for eradicating wrinkles and fine lines. It is made as follows: At home dissolve 1 ounce almozoin in ½ pint cold water, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. After it is thoroughly dissolved, apply generously to skin and massage lightly the long way of the wrinkle. This treatment energizes the stunted tissues under the cream and they gradually assume their proper proportions. When this is done the wrinkle will have vanished. The almozoin massage is very effective in cleansing the skin of pimples, blackheads and other blemishes.

Grace M.: Pains in the back and legs and the usual "spring fever" are frequently caused by bad kidneys, and the trouble should receive prompt attention. I make at home a body-builder and tonic of real value by pouring 1 ounce kardene (from your druggist's) into ½ pint alcohol (do not use whiskey) and adding ½ cupful sugar, then hot water to make a full quart. A tablespoonful before each meal is the dose. This gently rids the blood of poisons and puts the liver, kidneys and stomach in a healthy condition, and its timely use prevents much sickness.

Florence: I find the best treatment for faded, "stringy" hair or dandruff is to shampoo regularly with a tablespoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water which will restore its color, fluff and sheen and so invigorate the hair-roots that the hair will come in thick and long. This makes plenty of thick, cleansing lather that loosens and dissolves all dust, dandruff and excess oil. Rinsing leaves scalp and hair wonderfully sweet, clean and healthy.

Athlete: Try using this simple lotion, which will insure you against freckles and protect your skin from Spring winds. Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax (from any drug store) in either ½ pint hot water or witch hazel and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply sparingly to face, neck and arms and rub lightly until it vanishes. The spurmax lotion is superior to powder because one application lasts an entire day. Shiny skins, oiliness, pimples and other complexion upsets disappear quickly, and its use is a benefit to the finest complexion.

WOMAN'S DEATH MYSTERY

Paris Authorities Investigate Case of American.

PARIS, June 27.—The body of Mrs. Edith Winship Stewart, wife of David Stewart of Baltimore, remained in the morgue today awaiting the autopsy ordered by the city physician after her sudden death in a hotel here Thursday night.

Mrs. Stewart is believed to have succumbed to an overdose of a narcotic she was accustomed to using to alleviate neuralgia pains.

Mrs. Stewart was a daughter of William Boblitz and was born in Baltimore in 1878. She had lived in Paris for several years.

But Whom Would They Marry?

BERLIN, June 27.—Dr. Hans Curadre, a specialist in sociological science, contributes an article to a local newspaper in which he advises married life as the most beneficial for men, and single blessedness for women.

HOME-COMING IS PLANNED

Edward Card, superintendent of the City Rescue Mission, has returned from a five months' furlough and home-coming programs in his honor have been arranged.

The Christian Endeavor Union, numbering more than 3000 young persons from about 60 Protestant churches in St. Louis and suburbs, will visit the mission Thursday night to celebrate "Christian Endeavor Home-Coming Night."

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Letters which I daily receive from girls and women indicate that my advice is appreciated and really wonderful transformations are made by the creams, emollients and toilet necessities which I have recommended. Many who have been indifferent are beginning to see the wisdom of aiding nature and caring for the skin and hair. It is a duty every woman owes to herself—to keep young and beautiful.

Millicent asks: "I am 18 years old and healthy, but my face, hands and arms are anything but pretty. My skin is dark, sallow and unhealthy looking. What shall I do?"

Answer: I will answer in such a manner that others may benefit by my advice. First, discontinue using toilet soap to cleanse face and hands. Use a saponified vegetable oil called gloriol glowene, obtainable in sealed tubes. Use it as a "water massage," and you will be gratified by its wonderful cleansing and softening effect on the skin. Each night before retiring use the "water massage" and follow it with a thorough patting and rotary massage, using gloriol emollient, which is a skin and flesh food unequaled for producing beautiful plumpness and color. Apply on face, hands and arms, according to directions which accompany each jar.

The morning toilet should be made by bathing the eyes only with cold water. Then apply the vanishing gloriol balm and again massage until it is all absorbed. This is very fragrant, cooling and pleasant to use, and a fresh application should be made at any time before going out into the weather. Gloriol powder may be used lightly to deaden the shine, if any.

The foregoing is a scientific treatment which will in a short time transform an ordinary face into one of beauty—beauty of color, beauty of plumpness and beauty of health.

Mrs. T. B. writes: "I wish you would be kind enough to give me the formula for a good homemade hair tonic. I am losing my hair and it looks dull. My scalp itches all the time."

Answer: Simply get one-half ounce hairwand powder in a sealed package. Empty into a pint bottle. Fill the bottle with soft, pure water, shake well and apply with the tips of the fingers, thoroughly massaging the scalp. Avoid anything containing alcohol.

Alice M. asks: "Do you think it safe to take something to reduce obesity? If so, what is best to use?"

Answer: Very beneficial results are obtained by many of my friends who have used five-grain phythyrin tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes. Physicians of my acquaintance commend these tablets, and I believe them to be the best reduction remedy extant.

Madame X asks: "Please recommend something to take off or destroy superfluous hair. I have a small patch on my chin and it is very embarrassing."

Answer: I advise you to obtain a sealed vial of fluvol powder. It is harmless, and full directions come with it. It acts instantly, and destroys the hair without harming the skin.

C. W. D. writes: "I am vain enough to want to improve my appearance by filling out the hollows in my neck and shoulders. Also would appreciate advice on how to round the bust and arms."

Answer: A regular massage with medicated venosol, each night according to directions, which are to be found in each tube, will soon fill the hollow places and round out the bust and arms to normal. Use the patting and rotary massage movements. Many actresses and society women indorse this treatment.

Answer: The best and surest method is to treat the blood for its impurities by taking one-grain tablets quinoxide, which may be obtained at most any well-stocked pharmacy. These tablets have a purifying and whitening effect on the skin, and are perfectly safe to use according to directions in each tube.

Mrs. B. B. asks: "What can I do to keep my hair up? In spite of my care, it comes down in short, ugly strands all about my face and neck."

Answer: Try using gloriol wavolene. I use it regularly, as do many of my correspondents. It keeps the hair in curl or wave for days at a time and is said by many to promote a natural curl and wave if repeatedly used.

Geo. D. asks: "My wife and I are afflicted with dandruff, itching scalp and falling out of hair. We have tried various remedies in vain. Will you kindly tell us what to use?"

Answer: Use plain yellow minyol to massage the scalp once or twice a week, and in less than a month you should have no more trouble. To prevent a return use the hairwand tonic advised for "Mrs. T. B." in these columns.

Mrs. O. C. T. asks: "Tell me, please, what is the best soap for shampooing the hair?"

Answer: I do not advise either "soap or eggs," as they are neither fit to wash the hair if you value its health and luster. Gloriol liquid shampoo is by far the best shampoo that one can use. It is a treat to use it.

Miss Lelia B. asks: "I am using the balm and emollient and think they are perfect. What face powder should one use?"

Answer: Of all face powders I have used, I like the gloriol because of its refined purity and odor of lilac. Send two stamps for my booklet, "Beauty Truths." All my readers are invited to send for it.

Miss P. C. C. asks: "What can I do to increase my weight about 15 or 20 pounds?"

Answer: To increase the weight take three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets to increase assimilation and nourishment. This is the most successful remedy for the purpose that has ever been discovered. —ADVERTISEMENT.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR OPERA HOUSE STOCK REACH $100,000

Chairman Faust Reports Sum Exclusive of $50,000 Offered by Late Adolphus Busch.

D. C. NUGENT SUBSCRIBES

Chairman George W. Simmons Says Building Will Be for People and Plan Will Be Practical.

It was announced yesterday by Chairman Edward A. Faust of the Founders' Organization Committee that the opera house subscriptions now total practically $100,000. This is exclusive of the $50,000 offer made by the late Adolphus Busch, which probably will be revived.

Faust said: "The progress made in a comparatively short time, during the season when so many of our influential people are absent from the city is extremely gratifying. It has been decided to carry on the work of securing subscriptions right along instead of waiting until the end of the vacation season, as had been planned."

It is estimated that the building will cost between $500,000 and $600,000.

Dan C. Nugent Subscribes.

The most recent subscription received was from Dan C. Nugent, who wrote to Chairman Faust as follows:

> I am very much interested in yours of the 22d, detailing your plans for the building of an opera house in St. Louis and I am heartily in sympathy with you and the committee in this undertaking.
>
> I will be glad to be one of 30 to subscribe for $10,000 worth of preferred stock.
>
> Wishing you every success, and with kind regards, I remain, yours very truly, DAN C. NUGENT.

George W. Simmons, chairman of the Opera Committee and a member of the Founders' Committee, who was one of the first to subscribe $10,000 toward the opera house fund, has issued the following statement:

"I have been interested in working on grand opera in St. Louis during the past five years, from largely the same motive that I have worked in other public matters, most recently the production of the Pageant and Masque, namely—for the growth and development of St. Louis along proper lines, to make it the business and social center of the entire Southwest.

"The St. Louis Grand Opera Committee has labored under the almost prohibitive handicap of the small seating capacity of the Odeon, to keep alive in St. Louis the desire for grand opera until such times as the people of the city were ready to erect a suitable building for the production of this and other similar entertainments.

Great Auditorium Needed.

"I have always realized, of course, that a very small proportion of the productions in a St. Louis opera house would be devoted to grand opera, but have felt the need of an auditorium for many other purposes, sufficiently large to make it possible for all of the people of St. Louis who wanted to hear good music or good opera, or witness a large dramatic production such as is staged in other large cities of the country, to do so at a satisfactory admission fee.

"During the past five years we have produced $6 opera because we could not make expenses at the Odeon at lower prices. We realize that there were many thousands of St. Louisans who should have been afforded the opportunity of attending these productions at $1 or $2 a seat—but it was not possible to arrange it that way, hence the committee did the only thing they could do—kept on producing opera at high prices, until they felt sure of sufficient public support to erect a suitable building.

"That time has now arrived and I feel confident that the people of St. Louis will voluntarily purchase sufficient stock in the projected opera house, receiving the benefits which accompany the stock ownership of the building, to make it possible to erect in time for an opening in the fall of 1915 a building which will be a credit to the new St. Louis—and suitable for productions of opera, symphony concerts, lectures, conventions and theatrical productions of all sorts.

For Benefit of People.

"If there is any one lesson which we have learned from the Pageant, it is that the people of St. Louis are ready to pull together and do almost anything—provided it is for the benefit of all the people and not for only a few.

"Selecting a central location, sufficiently near the Grand avenue car line to make it accessible from both North and South St. Louis, and sufficiently near the east and west-bound lines to accommodate those citizens living in the eastern and western parts of the city, and with a seating capacity sufficient to bring, at reasonable prices, ample revenue for almost any kind of productions—it looks as if, aside entirely from the civic patriotism which would cause subscriptions to this enterprise, that on purely a business basis it can be operated at a profit not only sufficient to cover operating and carrying charges, but also to show a small return on the investment as well. In other words, the time is just right. St. Louis needs a theater or auditorium of this sort which shall be a commercial success. The committee having this matter in charge has determined to submit a practical detailed plan, and if the people of St. Louis now want such a building that plan can be speedily carried out."

Whether steps will be taken to compel the sugar interests concerned to pay that sum has not been decided, but Overman declared the investigation would be the basis of legislation to regulate the use of the franking privilege.

"La Vendetta," a Music=Melodrama of Corsican Life, Scores Paris Success

Its Music Is by Jean Nougues, Composer of "Quo Vadis," and Its Libretto by De Flers and De Caillavet, Famous Playwrights—Tells Story of Blood-Feud Ending in Tragedy—Other Footlight News.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

BY far the most important event of the present stage season in Paris is the smashing success scored by "La Vendetta," a music-melodrama of Corsican life, adapted from Lorrel-Lecandey's novel by De Flers and De Caillavet, the famous French playwrights, its score by Jean Nougues, whose grand opera version of "Quo Vadis" has given him a high and firmly established station among modern composers.

Both the book and the music of the new work are credited with excellence distinctly out of the ordinary, and the first performance of the piece at the Gaiete Lyrique was the signal for a unanimous chorus of sincere praise from the Parisian critics. It is declared to be a tremendously emotional music-drama, gripping its audiences from start to finish, and the prediction is made that it is in for a long Paris run sure to be followed by its production in London, New York and other world-capitals.

The story told in "La Vendetta" is typical of Corsican life and character and, while exciting, is said not to be overdrawn in its incidents and motive. Giuseppe Ceccaldi, brother of Dominique Ceccaldi, brigadier of gendarmes in the village of Evisa, has been killed by Gian Batista Ordini. For seven years thereafter Ordini has succeeded in escaping from justice. He has left behind him his wife and his son, Michele. The son, arriving at man's estate, falls in love with Rinella, the beautiful niece of the murdered Giuseppe Ceccaldi. The girl cares nothing for him, but is leading him on with the hope of learning the whereabouts of his father, her uncle's murderer. Young Michele is warned by his friends that his love for Rinella is not only hopeless but dangerous. He laughs the warnings to scorn.

The beguilements of Rinella's weaving around Michele finally prove a web that ensnares his father, as the girl intended. Gian Batista Ordini secretly returns to his native village to see his beloved wife and son. He is kept in hiding by them. But, in a moment of weakness caused by the spell which Rinella has thrown over him, Michele, the son, reveals the place of his father's concealment. The house is surrounded by gendarmes. Ordini is captured. As he is being interrogated concerning his crime, a pistol shot is heard from outside. Michele, the son, has killed Rinella, for love of whom he has been betrayed into surrendering his father to a shameful death.

The curtain falls on this stirring denouement. The play's action is said to tell the story with uncommon directness. Composer Nougues' music, of the new school of intense dramatic utterance, is pronounced genuinely powerful in emotional faithfulness to its theme. The work now is being produced to crowded houses.

"Love Cheats," a new play by Basil Dean, produced as one of the most notable and significant offerings of Miss Horniman's repertoire season at the Coronet Theater in London, has failed miserably, the ascribed reason being that the English public is weary of the unduly serious drama, and is demanding more entertainment and less preachment.

The title of the play was taken from a speech by the erring heroine's mother. Warning her daughter against too trustful a surrender to love, and remembering a sad romance of her own with a "gentleman" in her dairymaid days, this Mrs. Hansford voices the disillusioning declaration that the lovemaking of most men is merely fun, and that men do not hesitate to cheat in playing with a girl's affections.

The play's story finds its setting in a Dorsetshire fishing village, and five of the seven characters in its little cast speak a West Country dialect, and are types of their somewhat remote rural environment. Some gay London visitors have come down during the holiday month of September. Young Arthur Gwyther is among the number. His father, it seems, had known the old fisherman, Michael Hansford, in past years, and this gives the son an immediate intimate footing with the Hansford family. He improves the opportunity by flirting with pretty Esther Hansford. The suspicions of Andy Grinter, a young fisherman in love with Esther, are aroused. Watching the two, he finds them embracing and kissing one another by moonlight. Disturbed by him, Esther and her London lover take refuge in her father's workshop.

What happens in that place of refuge is too plainly suggested in the play's next act. This opens with Andy Grinter telling Esther that he knows of her sinful love for Arthur Gwyther, half throttling her on a sofa and threatening violence to her lover when they shall meet. The girl's father brings young Gwyther to an accounting. The latter tells him plainly that the difference between his station and that of Esther forbids all thought of marriage, and, instead, offers the father a check for 100 pounds. After some show of reluctance old Michael Hansford accepts this "salve" for the wound to his family honor, rather pleased to have scored such a profitable deal with the young London philanderer.

Then follows a painful scene between Arthur and Esther, at the close of which Arthur slinks away and Esther and Andy are brought together again. "They've sold us like sheep!" exclaims Esther bitterly—and with this little speech of vain protest the play's last curtain falls.

With its proverbial weakness for melodrama, the London playgoing public now heartily is relishing the thrills of "The White Hope," a play of the prize ring, the central figure of its story being a certain "husky" pugilist known as Fighting Nixon, and the "big moment" that when Fighting Nixon manages to reach, in an aeroplane, the scene of his great fistic battle with Tiger Smith in spite of the villain's plots to prevent his appearance in the ring.

The new melodrama fairly throbs with excitement. Its action opens at a reception given by Judith Langdale, Baroness von Reinberg, an adventuress, in conjunction with the Earl of Hillsdale, her impecunious partner. The reception takes place in a den of infamy, where Hillsdale, to gain control of the girl's fortune, is holding Mavis Moore, a young actress, until he shall so blacken her name that he can dictate his own terms to her. John Stanmore, a wealthy Australian sportsman, arrives and, though until now "smitten" with Judith, he falls honestly in love with Mavis and becomes her champion. To gain revenge on Stanmore, the scoundrelly Earl arranges a prize-fight between Fighting Nixon and Tiger Smith, the former being heavily backed by Stanmore, and concocts a plot to make Fighting Nixon forfeit the purse and saddle a heavy loss upon Stanmore. Then follows a series of vastly pulse-quickening happenings—a safe robbery, the wrecking of a railway express train over the edge of a cliff, a shooting scrape, and, finally, the aeroplane flight of Fighting Smith to the arena of the National Sporting Club in London just in time to confront Tiger Smith in the ring and to win the victory that means the complete foiling of the villain and the triumph of virtue over vice.

This, of course, is the most conventional of melodrama plots, but the London playgoing public fairly dotes on conventional melodrama and, as a result, "The White Hope" promises to be one of the biggest popular hits of the season.

Mlle. Polaire now seems to be scoring a Paris success in Edmond Guiraud's three-act drama, "La Sauvageonne," which is running at the Bouffe-Parisiens to capacity audiences.

The play's story derives its chief interest from an extremely daring and perilous situation. Its action begins with the poet Jean Lormier, his mistress, Renee d'Angennes, and his young daughter, Suzy's meeting in the former's apartments. Since her mother's death Suzy has been brought up by a family of the name of Dorsola, but now is visiting her father, and, though a good and innocent girl, has come to suspect the nature of the relations existing between him and Renee, who is an actress. The daughter is jealous of her father's mistress. In order to placate her, on a certain day when he has invited a man friend and Renee to lunch with him, Lormier takes the girl off to a restaurant, leaving his friend with Renee. Upon his return he finds that an eminent dramatic critic also had dropped in and that Renee, for her professional advantage, had flirted outrageously with this critic. There is a bit of a quarrel.

Suddenly the disturbing truth comes into evidence that Suzy, during the long period when she was ignorant of the fact that Jean Lorimer, the famous poet, was her father, had fallen in love with him when he went to visit her as "a friend of her father's." Almost immediately, then, the further truth is developed that Suzy is not Lormier's daughter, the real daughter having died and old Dorsola having substituted Suzy for the purpose of continuing to receive money from Lormier. Happily, however, the play's author does not insist upon marrying the erstwhile daughter to her "former" father, but, by a sudden and unexpected turn of the story, creates another and less repellant ending for his play.

GRACE VAN STUDDIFORD in "The Golden Butterfly." Park Theater. St. Louis' favorite comic opera prima donna now reappears in one of her biggest successes, supported by an excellent cast. Carl Haydn, leading tenor of the Park Summer Opera Co., appeared with Miss Van Studdiford in the original production.

The supporting company is headed by Miss Venita Fitzhugh, another St. Louis favorite. Others in the cast are Maud K. Williams, Alice Hills, Mr. Natanson and Roger Gray, the new leading comedian who succeeded John E. Young. Miss Van Studdiford is said now to be in her best voice, and an excellent production is promised, under the direction of Charles Sinclair, formerly one of Henry W. Savage's stage managers, and with a big and well-trained chorus.

BATHING BEACH, Kahnsky's Hungarian Orchestra, cabaret performances on the Villa stage, new pike and other amusement features. Delmar Garden.

"I Did Not Believe Your Advertisements About the New Edison Diamond-Disc,"

Said a Lady Visiting Our Music Parlors at 1124 Olive St.

"I thought the Edison was no different than other well-advertised sound-reproducing machines; I thought the Edison had that same artificial tone I disliked so much."

This Is a Revelation to Me!

The Edison Diamond-Disc reveals a naturalness of tone that is almost uncanny.

I cannot see how anyone would buy anything but an Edison now, still there are some people who are tone deaf and will buy anything that produces noise. There's a difference between noise and music.

We owe a great deal to Mr. Edison, who, after many years of labor, brought to perfection this instrument that reproduces tones pure and true to the original.

Are you a lover of real, good music? Then hear the Edison, immediately.

The main difference between the Edison and other sound-reproducing instruments lies in the overtone or tone colors—overtones give that quality and roundness—without overtones the voice sounds thin and reedy. Overtones are elusive and difficult to record, just as color is difficult to photograph.

It remained for Mr. Edison to accomplish the recording of overtones.

the Keokuk Dam corporations.

The city has a street railway to Chain of Rocks, but it must limit its use to employes because the charter does not permit the municipality to operate a public utility for the use of the public.

The old charter binds St. Louis to the service of the public utility corporations. They are free to work their will so far as the city is concerned.

By reason of the helplessness of the city under the present charter the political bosses and their henchmen in office have not only served the Big Cinch, but have packed the city hall with incompetent spoilsmen and barnacles.

The machinery of government is inefficient and cumbersome. It is costly.

By reason of the helplessness of the city under the present charter the city is unable to provide needed public improvements.

The expense of all public improvements must be paid for out of the general revenue or through costly bond elections.

ALL of these evils and obstacles to progress under the old charter are tales that have been told many times over.

THE NEW CHARTER WILL GIVE THE PEOPLE OF ST. LOUIS THE UPPERHAND.

It will give them power to control public utilities directly.

It will give them power to construct, purchase, own and operate public utilities, and to supply every municipal need.

It will break the power of the political bosses in the city hall, and eliminate the spoilsmen and barnacles.

It will make it easier for the people to initiate good measures and defeat bad measures.

It will enable the people to remove corrupt and unfit public officials.

These provisions which free the city and give the people power to enforce their will cause the bitter, malignant and unscrupulous campaign against the charter.

ALL the exploiters of St. Louis, all the men and the allied interests which have preyed upon the helplessness of the St. Louis people, and want to retain their power and privilege to plunder the city are combined to beat the new charter.

They are working underground, pretending not to oppose the charter or to favor it; they have hired men of ability to invent ingenious lies and misstatements for the purpose of confusing and misleading the minds of the people.

These paid advocates are trying to divert public attention from the vital issue of the charter and to magnify minor defects.

They are trying to frighten the timid and the ignorant with false statements about taxation and the cost of government under the new charter.

They are twisting the best points of the new charter into terrifying tyrannies and oppressions. They are pleading the faults of the old charter against the new charter.

We shall not attempt to answer their lies and misrepresentations. They multiply like flies. We merely want the people to understand the real issue between the old and new charter and the meaning of the conscienceless campaign against the new charter.

IT is shameful that citizens of St. Louis should sacrifice the city's progress and the public welfare for profit. It is shameful that able St. Louisans should lend aid to the betrayal of the city by attempting to deceive the people.

But it would be profoundly unfortunate and saddening if a majority were misled by lies into rejecting an opportunity—probably the last in 10 years—to free the city from bondage to its oppressors, to give it power to accomplish all that the community needs and to put the city on an equality with other cities which have cast off their antiquated, cumbersome, costly and corrupting systems of government.

WE appeal to the old men who have suffered from helplessness under the Old Charter; we ask them to strike corruptions and oppressions, and to accomplish the things needed for the community by voting for the New Charter.

We appeal to the young men who must bear the municipal burdens in the future, to help give the city the freedom and the power to work out a great destiny and provide for the public welfare.

We appeal to business men to equip the city with a modern progressive goverment having power to deal efficiently with all municipal problems.

We appeal to wage-earners to enable the people to enjoy adequate cheap transportation, cheap and efficient light, healthful, beautiful surroundings, and to enforce justice in the laws and honesty in office.

We appeal to all citizens to wipe out the reproach of inefficiency and backwardness, to take the city out of the rut of inaction and give it equal opportunity with our municipal competitors.

For ten years the people have been struggling to rid the city of the incubus of the old charter. They have felt their helplessness.

The people have elected two Boards of Freeholders, who have framed two charters.

The first of these charters, vastly superior to the old charter, was defeated by the public utility corporations and the political bosses on account of the sweeping powers it conferred on the city to control, own, and operate public utilities and on account of the merit system.

Many honest citizens were deceived and misled by false statements and misrepresentations to vote against the charter. Many voters were apathetic.

The second charter, better than the first, embodying all of its merits and more, awaits action on Tuesday. Will those who prey upon municipal helplessness, who exploit and plunder the city and oppress the people, triumph again through deception of the ignorant and the apathy of the intelligent?

It depends upon you, voters of St. Louis.

Your vote will decide whether the city shall remain in bondage or shall have the freedom and the power to go forward.

CORONER TO QUIZ WOMAN HELD FOR MAN'S DEATH

Police Say Finding of Spectacles in Room of Accused Has No Significance.

STAMFORD, Conn., June 27.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle, who is under $25,000 bond awaiting the result of the inquiry into the death of Waldo R. Ballou, had recovered today from her nervous collapse of two days ago. On Monday she will be interviewed in private by Coroner Phelan.

Tests of various stains on clothing, floor and furniture will be reported to the Coroner Monday. The police say that the finding of Ballou's spectacles in Mrs. Angle's room has no significance.

Mr. Robert Fowler, Okarche, Oklahoma, writes:

"To any sufferer of catarrh of the stomach. I am glad to tell my friends or sufferers of catarrh that seventeen years ago I was past work of any kind, due to stomach troubles. I tried almost every known remedy without any results.

"Finally I tried Peruna, and am happy to say I was benefited by the first bottle, and after using a full treatment I was entirely cured.

"I am now seventy years old, and am in good health, due to always having Peruna at my command. I would not think of going away from home for any length of time without taking a bottle of Peruna along for emergency.

NEW "DIVAN-BED" DAVENPORT

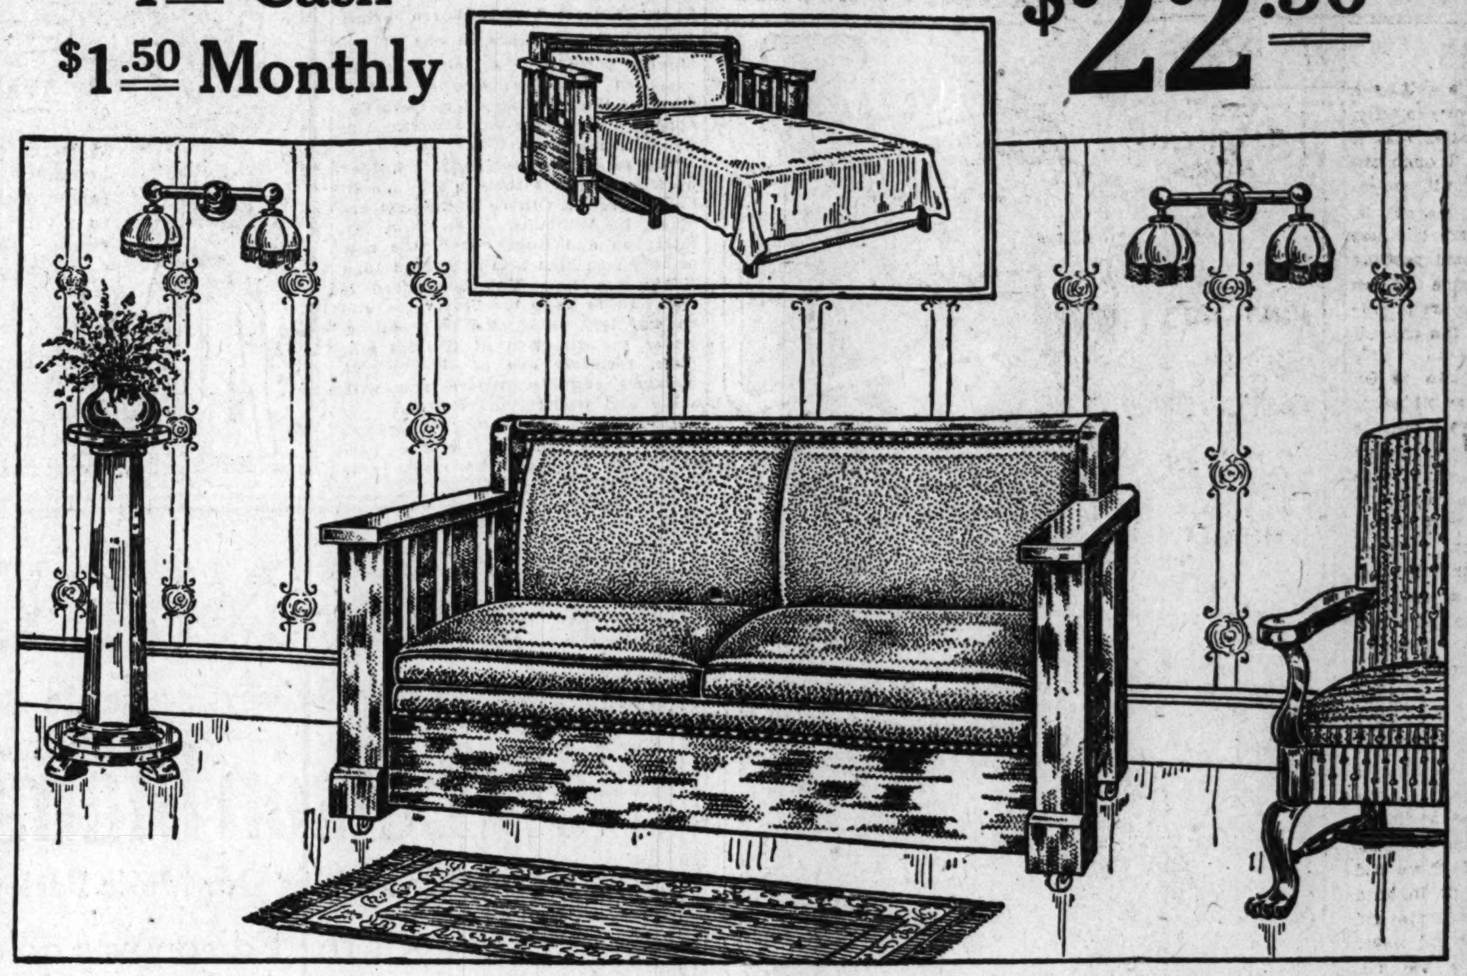
$1.50 Cash

$1.50 Monthly

$22.50



The Divan-Bed Davenport—

IS quite different from anything you have heretofore seen in this line—it is a very neat and attractive Settee that can be used in the Parlor, Library or Sitting Room—it takes up much less space than the old style Davenport—yet opens up into a large and restful bed.

The Construction—

THE frames are of solid oak, in Colonial design, with broad arms and heavy posts—the seat and back are upholstered in imitation leather that looks like real leather, and will wear almost as well.

Presto—and It's a Bed—

THIS Bed-Davenport is made on a new principle—the spring, mattress and bedding are under the seat and come into position when the seat is turned, so you do not sleep on the upholstering, as is the case with nearly all other Bed Davenports.

Has Regular Bed Springs—

A GREAT feature about this Bed-Davenport is the set of broad, comfortable springs which support the mattress when the davenport is open. The mattress is removable so it can be cleaned, aired and turned.

Our Price—Including the Springs "Without the Mattress"—Is $22.50

THIS offering clearly illustrates the unusual buying advantages which this store, with its associate stores in various cities, enjoys in the furniture market—it's a real $40.00 value which we are able to offer you at $22.50.

Note the Terms—

ALL we ask is $1.50 cash and this handsome Divan-Bed Davenport will be delivered to your home—and you can pay the balance on easy terms of $1.50 a month. Open an account with us this week.

Last Word for New Charter

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

FRIENDS: The air in the park is getting a little bad, and I shall speak very briefly. I want to say for the new charter that if we adopt it we shall not have to go through another charter campaign. I know that will appeal to you. Irrespective of what the charter is, we shall be done with the whole sorry business if it wins, and can resume the pleasant pastime of seeing one another upon our nice side. If you will look over the names of those who are prominently identified with the fight on the charter you will find that we have in St. Louis a standing opposition to whatever the city tries to do. Whether we want to complete the free bridge or build a tramway to the moon, we have about the same people against us every time. Look through those names, and see how many of them were ever identified with any progressive movement in this community. We had those people with us just once—when we voted on prohibition. I have been in St. Louis a good many years, and that was the only time I ever saw us all move as one man toward any given point. We have gotten a few things through, but only when the opposition wasn't working right. It has beaten us more times than we have beaten it, and it will beat us Tuesday if we don't get together and go to the polls. I could assure you that we are going to win easily, and that there is no great necessity for getting everyone out who wants to see the charter adopted; but that would only be a pleasant fiction of the sort to which the opposition has resorted. We need every vote we can get, and if we had to have a two-thirds majority, as we do in bond elections, we would just as well stay home and wish the other fellows luck. We would never win it in the world. The weather is too hot. Cranks are too active.

NOW, friends, I shall not see you again before we vote. I want simply to ask you to consider in these last few hours what is credible of the charter and what is not. Men will tell you some of the worst cock-and-bull stories ever turned loose upon a credulous community. They will tell you that under the new charter only property owners may sign initiative and referendum petitions; that none but redheaded men may hold public office, and that school teachers can give the water cure in cases where the pupil does not respond to kind words and reason. The way to arm yourself against this sort of thing is to circulate a few canards of your own. When you see a man who looks as if he will believe anything you tell him, take him aside a moment and tell him that if the new charter is adopted the weather will change right away. That ought to fetch him. It is even more credible than some of the lies the anti-charter people are circulating at this stage of the game. If that doesn't fetch him, sound him a little, and learn what he is interested in. If he is a baseball fan, tell him if the new charter wins, all three of our baseball teams will win pennants in the big leagues and we shall have a three-cornered fight here for the championship of the world next fall that will shake the planet. Don't be above doing to the other fellow what he is doing to you. The real weakness of our fight is that we have too many principled people in it. We ought to have some of the unprincipled people on the other side with us. Our people insist upon conducting themselves in a thoroughly honorable and straightforward manner, as if we were already operating under the new charter and all evil in the community had been summarily cast out. Don't make that mistake, friends. We are still under the old charter. Fight the devil with fire. That is politics. It is unfortunate that the new charter should have to be dragged into politics, but it would be a great deal more unfortunate if it went down and out because we were afraid to get our hands soiled. This is not a balloon race, friends. It is a political fight.

THERE is just one man whom we have to fear. That is Gen. Apathy. The General is the greatest fighter in history. He could have licked Caesar with a fly-flipper. He has it on Villa so many ways from the base of supplies that the terror of the Mexican revolution wouldn't know which direction to look for his horse and which way for his meals. If each of us will drag somebody with us, we will be fighting the General in the only way that ever promises results. He loses his head under that sort of thing quicker than anything else. Suppose you start out for the polls on next Tuesday morning. You meet a neighbor. That is inevitable. Why not sound him. Is he going to vote? If so, how? If he is not quite sure, why not lay hands on him in a diplomatic way and work him around? A vote in the hand is worth four or five around an electric fan, especially if it is a very hot day. Be sure the other side will be out. They never forget. They don't even delay. A man who has swallowed one of those fairy tales about how taxes are to be increased in a hundred different ways under the new charter will be hammering around the polls before the door is open. It is a vital matter with him. It is an even more vital matter with us, if we could only realize it. Whether we have a single legislative body or a bicameral body matters little. What we need is a new charter. Dr. Hill, who used to fight us, says the way to get at it is to figure that if we are not voting for the new charter we are voting for the old one. He cannot conceive of anyone voting for the old charter, once he looks at it that way. The trouble is that the opposition will not look at it that way. It will look at it through a thousand half-baked fallacies, through indisposition to do anything to help the city to its rightful place among the big cities of America, and through about 100 degrees of heat in the shade. Now, friends, adieu. Keep your powder cool, and don't waste your ice.

Goethal's Schedule Didn't Allow Two Extra Swallows of Coffee

WASHINGTON, June 27.

COL. GEORGE W. GOETHALS works on a schedule that is timed almost to the second. When visitors at the canal go about with him they find that if they are not on time they get left.

"The boat goes in 25 minutes," Col. Goethals will announce, "and this reception will last just 24 minutes." Those who linger too long saying good-by are left.

A congressional committee of which Congressman Fitzgerald was chairman, was inspecting the canal work. One morning Fitzgerald came in from a long, dusty tramp and was very hungry. The committee was to go to the Pacific end of the canal that day and he had to eat rapidly to catch the train. He ate rapidly, but not rapidly enough, and was left. When the committee returned at night they asked him how he missed the train.

"I had my watch in my hand," he said, "and allowed myself plenty of time to keep on our schedule. But I forgot and took two more swallows of coffee than I had figured on. That upset my whole calculations."

A WESTERN Senator came to Washington at the beginning of his term with a reputation for being a shrewd politician, but it soon developed that he was a little green when it came to questions of conventional attire. He visited a tailor soon after he landed in the capital and ordered a new outfit of clothes, including a dress suit and dinner coat.

The tailor fixed him up, told him how and when to wear the clothes and advised him that a silk hat would be necessary with the dress suit.

In the Senator's home town a silk hat would have probably caused the town marksman to throw an egg or some other article, but realizing that he must uphold the dignity of the Senate, he purchased the hat.

At the next White House reception he appeared in full regalia. No one from the effete East had anything on him. But he walked to the reception instead of taking a cab and on the way it began to rain. Before he reached his house the new silk hat was a sorry-looking affair. The next day he stopped to tell the tailor that he had ruined his hat.

"What happened to it?" asked the tailor.

"It got wet," said the Senator.

"Well, call up the hatter and have him send for it and iron it out," advised the tailor.

"Why, can it be fixed up?" asked the Senator.

"It can," the tailor replied, and the Senator left to find the hatter.

SPEAKER CHAMP CLARK is anxious to find out why it is that all the people in Fort Dodge, Io., have small necks. When Clark was doing the Middle West Chautauqua circuit, he was billed to jump from some lake town in Michigan to Fort Dodge. He thought it would be nice to go as far as Chicago by boat so he had his baggage put aboard and he stopped to chat with the captain.

He asked what time the boat reached Chicago and was informed that the Chicago boat had left 30 minutes before and that this one went to Milwaukee.

It was up to Clark to go by train and when he arrived in Fort Dodge his baggage was in Milwaukee and the Speaker set out to buy some clean linen.

Clark wears a 17 1-2 shirt and an 18 collar. He hunted all over the town and could not find anything larger than a 17, either in collars or shirts. And the only 17 shirt in town was pink. He bought the shirt and with the aid of some cotton string, he managed to make himself look fairly presentable.

A few years later he was again in Fort Dodge. He thought he would see if the size of collars had increased any, so he stepped into a clothing store and asked for an 18 collar.

The clerk told him they had none. When asked why they did not keep full-grown collars the clerk said that they had never had but one call for an 18 collar, and that was by a Chautauqua speaker who had been there some years before.

ST. BONIFACE CELEBRATION

German Folk Songs and Address on Program for Today.

District League, No. 1, Catholic Union of Missouri, will hold a celebration today in honor of St. Boniface, apostle of the German Catholics, at St. Boniface Church, Michigan avenue and Schirmer street.

The meeting will begin at 5:30 p. m. A religious service will be held at 7:30 p. m., followed by a social in the school yard. The Rev. H. Hussmann of St. Henry's Church will deliver an address in German, and Harry J. Jacobsmeyer will speak in English. German folk songs will be sung.

BILL TO FIREPROOF THEATERS URGED BY CIVIC LEAGUE

Six Buildings Found Unsafe Since M. A. C. Fire, Would Have to Be Rebuilt.

LAW IS TERMED DRAWBACK

Charter Doesn't Provide for Inquiry Into Such Disasters, Civic Officials Declare.

With the Missouri Athletic Club fire as an object lesson, the Civic League introduced last week into the House of Delegates a bill requiring the reconstruction of all theaters to conform to the new theater regulations adopted in 1906.

There were six large theaters constructed prior to that time which investigation by the Fire Department, Fire Prevention Bureau and the Building Commissioner immediately after the M. A. C. fire showed to be unsafe. Although this official investigation was made of the theaters, lodging houses and other public places where people congregate, no action has been taken by either branch of the Municipal Assembly, nor has any action been shaped by any public official. The Building Commissioner has required certain minor changes in theaters, but the law remains unchanged.

The Building Commissioner introduced a bill regulating theaters before the Assembly adjourned in April, but it was pigeonholed in committee. Several new bills are now in committee of the Council, but none of them really attempts thoroughgoing prevention of theater firetraps. The Civic League's bill will require all old theaters, constructed prior to 1906, to meet the same standards of public safety as theaters built since that time. The date fixed for complying with the proposed ordinance is July 1, 1915.

In a formal statement, executive officers of the Civic League say, "No more telling indictment of our present system of city government can be made than to point to the apparent paralysis following the worst fire disaster in the history of the city, when 31 men lost their lives in the Missouri Athletic Club fire. Because of the impossibility of fixing responsibility under the present charter, practically nothing has been done since that catastrophe to remedy conditions in this city.

"The present charter does not fix responsibility for investigating and remedying such matters on any one official. It splits the power between the Fire Department, Building Commissioner and the two branches of the Assembly. We are not criticising present officials, but the present system of government.

"If the people of St. Louis really want responsible and efficient government, if they want to prevent in the future such horrors as the Missouri Athletic Club fire, let them rally to the support of the proposed new charter to be voted on Tuesday. It not only gives St. Louis an up-to-date framework of government, in which responsibility will be definitely fixed, but it makes special provision for the prevention of fire by creating the office of Fire Marshal."

The new theater ordinance was drawn by the League's attorney, A. Holt Roudebush, former Associate City Counselor, in consultation with former Building Commissioner James A. Smith, chairman of the League's Housing Committee, and Augustus Abbott, chairman of the Public Safety Committee.

The Civic League, in introducing the bill, did not expect action before the summer adjournment of the Assembly in July, but sought to afford the basis for immediate action in the early fall.

COURT SAYS SACCHARIN MAY BE USED IN DRINKS

Decision of Higher Tribunal Knocks Out State Law as Discrimatory.

The Missouri Supreme Court last week handed down a decision in favor of the use of saccharin in soft drinks, holding that it is not harmful when so used and that legislation against its use in such drinks is discriminatory.

About three years ago the Legislature passed a bill prohibiting the use of saccharin in such drinks. A year ago a test case was made against the Empire Bottling Co. of St. Louis. In the opinion handed down, written by Reuben F. Roy, Commissioner, and concurred in by all the members of the court, it is stated that one would need to drink about 12 pints of the defendant's soda water in 24 hours before there would be any danger from the use of saccharin.

Continuing, the opinion says that whether or not saccharin is deleterious, the statute is an arbitrary discrimination against the makers of soda water, inasmuch as its use in other foods and drinks is not prohibited. "If the Legislature regarded saccharin as deleterious to health," the opinion says, "it should have excluded it from all foods and drinks and not merely from non-alcoholic drinks. If the purpose was merely to prevent the sweetening of non-alcoholic drinks, it should have prohibited the use of any kind of sweetening in such drinks."

SUSPENDS PATROLMAN WHO SOUGHT DIVORCE

Chief Young Removes Oscar Friede as Result of Charges Made by Wife.

Patrolman Oscar Friede was suspended by Chief Young Saturday on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, as a result of testimony, last Tuesday, by his wife, Louisa J. Friede, 4855 Goethe avenue, in a divorce suit filed by Friede, which was dismissed.

Mrs. Friede testified her husband showed her a number of special assignment letters to explain his absence, but never would let her have possession of them. She said she found one torn to bits in the back yard one day, and piecing it together, saved it until she appeared in court, where she produced it as evidence. It was written on police department stationery, and bore a signature of Chief Young, which the Chief pronounced a forgery.

Formal charges, to be preferred against Friede before the Police Board, are being prepared by Inspector McMullen. Friede denied to Chief Young that he had shown the alleged letters to his wife.

DOG AS FIRE ALARM AROUSES WELLSTON

The residence of David Mullenary, 1516 Wellston avenue, Wellston, and eight barns and sheds were destroyed by fire at 2:30 a. m. yesterday. The barking of a dog gave the alarm which aroused several hundred neighbors. They organized a bucket brigade and after much effort got the fire under control before the fire departments of Wellston and St. Louis arrived.

The dog which gave the alarm is owned by Mrs. Frank Kelly, who lives next door to the Mullenary home. Mrs. Kelly heard its frantic barking and went out to quiet it. Discovering the flames, she awakened Mrs. Alvin Sterrett who aroused Constable Peter Bruno, and he in turn fired a revolver to arouse the neighborhood.

In a short time many were out with buckets, while others plied streams from garden hose. None of the Mullenary family was home at the time of the fire.

ere Indications Lung Trouble

Continued coughs, fevers and night sweats are among the symptoms of serious lung trouble. Eckman's Alterative is most beneficial in bringing relief,, in many cases, complete recoveries. Read this:—

Schell City, Mo.

"Gentleman:—I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pleurisy in my lungs. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Alterative. I paid no attention to him then. I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did and when I got there I steadily grew worse. Then I remembered what had been told me about your medicine. I began taking it. Appetite soon improved, fever and night sweats stopped and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."
(Abbreviated)
(Affidavit) W. F. BOMAR.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., and leading druggists. Write Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet of recoveries.

ly finish their common school education and thus start in life with a double icap. They lack the education which help them to succeed, and they are tely hindered in all of life's activities by their affliction.

The child who stammers is laughed at ridiculed by the other children in school. The child who stammers is slow recite, no matter how well it may know lesson, and thus sooner or later is neglected by its teacher. Being unusually tive, children who stammer soon develop a dislike for school, and eventually out before their education is completed. Statistics prove this.

know what these children suffer, and know the handicaps under which they for I myself stammered for 20 years. After years of disappointment and discouragement in my efforts to be cured, I the way to cure myself.

freeing myself from my own af, I have devoted my life to the of others. I have established the Institute for Stammerers, and I written a 68-page book, which is to you, in which I tell the story of life and what I suffered as a child.

In this book you will find a statement my mother telling how she grieved my affliction—how everything that was done to restore me to In this book you will how I cured myself and how I can any person of normal intelligence, years of age or over, who will follow my simple instructions. INSPECTION SHOWS FOUR HARMFUL FLIES IN ST. LOUIS

Following the Trapping of 5,000,000, Health Officer Issues Descriptive Bulletin.

EACH VARIETY EXPLAINED

House Fly, the Least Vicious, Likely to Cause Death in Family Any Time.

A catalogue of the flies has been issued by Dr. G. A. Jordan, Assistant Health Commissioner. It describes the different kinds of flies which the Health Department found in its collection of some 5,000,000 caught in traps within the last month.

The information prepared by Dr. Jordan appears in the latest bulletin of the Health Department. He says there are four varieties of the pests in St. Louis, as shown by close inspection. The most common and the most dangerous type, he said, is the house fly. The bulletin continues:

"The common house fly lights on dead carcasses and loathsome masses and then flies to the cream pitcher. And there its presence may mean a funeral in the family.

"It carries germs of typhoid, dysentery, diphtheria, infantile paralysis and tuberculosis. The house fly does not bite. It simply sucks at the skin. But it conveys the deadly germs on its feet and body.

"On the contrary, its relative, the horse or stable fly, is a vicious biter. It carries infection from any animal or human being that may have disease. In addition to the diseases which the common house fly transmits the stable fly adds every disease found in the blood, including erysipelas, scarlet fever and typhoid.

"The blue bottle fly does it work by lighting on dead animals or decomposing matter and then lighting on food. It lays its eggs on meat and foodstuffs, which the housefly does not usually do.

"The venomous little green fly that carries infantile paralysis from limberneck chickens was among the varieties found in the catch, a very inconspicuous insect, but as destructive to life as the bite of a cobra.

"All these flies have one characteristic in common. They lack intelligence. They are easily caught in a properly constructed trap. The traps used by the department are the result of long experiment as to specifications. The traps we use are built on the principle that a fly must have a free pathway to the bait. After eating it will fly upward and reaching the sides of the cone will walk up to the opening and enter the trap. Then he is caught. No fly seems to have the brains to find that opening again and few flies ever walk downhill.

"The traps now coming into use are proving they can make St. Louis a flyless city if all will co-operate."

"OL CLO'S MAN'S" HEIRS DIVIDE $1,418,738

NEW YORK, June 27.—The United States Trust Co. filed its final accounting yesterday of the estate of Benjamin Hart, who made his fortune in New York as an "old clothes" man and died in Paris worth $1,500,000. The accounting shows that though the estate was put to great expense defending the will, there remains $1,418,738,98, all in municipal and industrial bonds.

When Hart's will was offered for probate, early in 1910, it was contested, owing to Hart not being a resident of the United States and therefore his heirs could not have a will probated here. A letter from Hart was produced in which he had written he did not want to be a citizen of this country and hated "Teddy" Roosevelt.

The person most concerned in the contest was a French Cabinet Minister's daughter Hart had adopted. This woman, Mme. Isabela Luchessa Gabrielle Josephine Hart Guilleman, claimed one-half of the estate, but was defeated.

Fort Worth Newspaper Carries 555 Columns of Advertising for "Ad Men."

When the delegates from Fort Worth, Tex., to the Ad Men's convention at Toronto, Canada, passed through St. Louis, they were proud of the fact that they had earned their way by helping the Fort Worth Star-Telegram get out its big special edition in their behalf. This edition of the Star-Telegram comprised 146 pages, in eight parts, and was published June 14. The special edition was a work of art from a typographical point of view. The Star-Telegram in the edition reproduced a check for $2000 which had been paid for a special train to carry the delegates from Fort Worth to the national convention of the Advertising Men's Clubs. This entire newspaper is the first regular edition of a publication edited and published entirely by advertising men.

BREWERS WILL SUE TO STOP PRISON ICE SALE

Jefferson City Firm Will Assert It Cannot Compete With State Institution.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 27.—Irwin and Peters, attorneys for the Capital Brewing Co., will ask the Cole County Circuit Court Monday to enjoin Warden McClung of the penitentiary, and members of the State Prison Board to prevent the selling and giving of prison-made ice to the wholesale and retail trade of Jefferson City and Cole County.

The brewery company has been supplying the capital and adjacent territory with ice for years and the petition declares it is unable to compete with prison ice, which is made with State machinery and convict labor.

[illegible] TO REVISE ST. LOUIS COURT PROCEDURE FAILS

LEGALITY IS QUESTIONED

Judge Kinsey Avers Move Is Against the Law and Must Be Authorized by Legislature.

A proposition of the St. Louis Bar Association to revise the rules of procedure in the Circuit Court with a view of expediting the administration of justice in civil cases was rejected yesterday by the Circuit Judges in executive meeting.

Ten of the 12 Judges were present, Judges Withrow and Jones being the absentees.

The vote stood five to five on changing the rules. The law requires that any revision proposed must be by vote of a majority of all the Judges.

As Judge Withrow is known to be opposed to the change, while Judge Jones favors it, it is not believed the change as suggested will be adopted at any subsequent meeting.

The Judges have had the question of revising the rules under consideration more than a year. Lawyers had investigated the systems in effect in Kansas City and Cleveland and recommended the revision be adopted according to the practice in those places. The judges appointed Adolph Troll, an expert in court procedure, to visit these places and he reported favorably.

Then Judges Grimm, Hitchcock and Jones were appointed on a committee to draft a new set of rules. Several weeks ago they submitted recommendations along the lines suggested by Troll. It was proposed to make the Judge of Court Room No. 1 presiding Judge, whose duty it would be to assign the cases to the other eight civil divisions. No case was to be assigned until it was definitely ascertained whether it was ready for trial.

The presiding Judge also was to pass on all preliminary motions and pleadings in each case. He also was to hear applications for emergency writs.

Judges Grimm, Taylor, Hennings, Hitchcock and McQuillin voted in favor of adopting the recommendation of the committee. Judges Kinsey, Koerner, Cave, Rassieur and Fisher voted against it.

The Judges in favor of revision said they believed it would have the effect of doing away with clogged dockets and enable the Judges to get rid of cases within reasonable time. The other Judges said they did not believe the law permitted the Court to make the proposed change. Some of them declared they did not regard the system as good as the present one, by which the Circuit Clerk assigns all cases.

Judge Kinsey declared he did not want to be classed a "stand-patter," that he favors some change to expedite trials, but he did not favor the one proposed. He claimed that there is considerable complaint in Kansas City regarding the system. Furthermore, he said, the revision was against the law.

On motion Judges Rassieur, Cave and Fisher were appointed a committee to prepare a bill for presentation to the next Legislature which would empower the Circuit Court to make radical revision of its rules.

The Judges at the same meeting also were divided on the question of appointing a successor to Hugh Fullerton, who resigned as Chief Probation Officer of the city. Judge Grimm made a motion that a competitive examination of applicants be held. There was a tie vote on this.

Some of the Judges said that the appointment should be filled with the one who stood high in the examination when Fullertan was appointed four years ago. Judge Grimm replied in this event Thomas Dwyer should get the appointment. This was not received favorably.

Then someone put in nomination Jesse P. Smith, deputy probation officer. There was a deadlock on this also and the matter went over until the next meeting.

GROCER ALLEGES PRICES ARE "FIXED" IN ST. LOUIS

When Wholesaler Can't Buy Goods He Complains of Jobbers to Circuit Attorney.

The Circuit Attorney's office yesterday began investigation of charges that the Cudahy Packing Co., Proctor & Gamble, the Corn Products Co. and other large corporations are violating the anti-trust law by conspiring to fix prices.

James M. Anderson, a wholesale grocer at 813 Spruce street, told the Circuit Attorney the companies had refused to sell their products to him because he sells at a discount below the list price. He said that sometimes when he ordered goods he would be told the supply was exhausted, but that he had no difficulty in having the same orders filled by sending them through other jobbers.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Spencer sent a letter to C. H. Lorenz, president of the St. Louis Syrup and Preserving Co., asking Lorenz to come to his office and discuss the charges made by Anderson. Lorenz is local agent for the Corn Products Co. Anderson alleges he is one of those who refused to sell him goods.

The complaint originally was made to Attorney-General Barker, through Excise Commissioner Thomas L. Anderson, attorney for James M. Anderson. Barker recommended that complaint be made to the Circuit Attorney in St. Louis.

To Our Stockholders and the Public:

We announce that the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Company is an independent St. Louis organization and is not connected directly or indirectly with the H. B. Claflin Company or any of its affiliated stores, nor do we owe moneys to any of said stores, except fourteen thousand ($14,000) dollars upon current merchandise accounts to The H. B. Claflin Company, nor do any of said stores owe us any moneys whatsoever.

The Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Company has, since its reorganization, been financed entirely in St. Louis. The only circumstances that might be construed as a connection with the Claflin organization are—

First — Mr. John Claflin is a personal stockholder of this Company;

Second—In order to accommodate our patrons visiting in New York we have had for several years an arrangement with James McCreery & Company by which they might have the privilege of a charge account at the McCreery store.

Any statement or report contrary to the above-stated facts is false and without foundation.

A Remarkable Clearance Sale of Women's Summer Dresses

One of the most important clearances that we have ever had will be held in our Costume Department, beginning tomorrow morning.

We have been through our stock of Summer Dresses and have greatly reduced the prices on many of them. To these have been added a large and fortunate purchase from a manufacturer who supplies us regularly with dresses of his production. So low are our prices for this sale that we will not send any of them on approval.

Lot No. 1—Dresses Valued Up to $8.50

In this group will be found Crepe and Voile Dresses from our regular stock, including All-white, Black and White Combination and Colored Combination Dresses. Some of these garments are slightly soiled, but they are all remarkable values at the prices at which they are offered. Values up to $8.50, sale price $3.95

Lot No. 2—Dresses Valued Up to $14.50

This lot consists of a number of smart French Crepe and Corded Voile Dresses in all-white and striped effects. These garments show the popular long tunic and are trimmed with organdy, net and lace and have stylish girdles of moire and velvet; sizes 32 to 44. Values up to $14.50, sale price $8.75

Lot No. 3—Dresses Valued Up to $18.50

In this particular lot will be found some extremely stylish Dresses in bolero and Russian tunic effects, including those of all-white, awning stripes and white and colored combinations; many have dainty vests, and collars of organdy and batiste and stylish girdles of moire, satin and velvet; sizes 32 to 44. Values up to $18.50, sale price $10.95

Lot No. 4—Dresses Valued Up to $39.50

In this group you will find French Voile Dresses trimmed with real Irish lace in the most charming patterns; also handsome Ratine Costumes with Bulgarian collars and cuffs and [illegible] batiste vests.

A number of pretty French Crepe Frocks are also included.

These garments are somewhat soiled from handling and display and are really worth up to $39.50, sale price $18.50

Lot No. 5—Dresses Valued Up to $75.00

In this last group are Costumes of Lace, Embroidered Net, Embroidered Batiste (some French handmade), French Crepe and Novelty Crepe and Batiste.

These are somewhat soiled or mussed from display and there are only one or two of a kind. Values up to $75.00, sale price $29.50

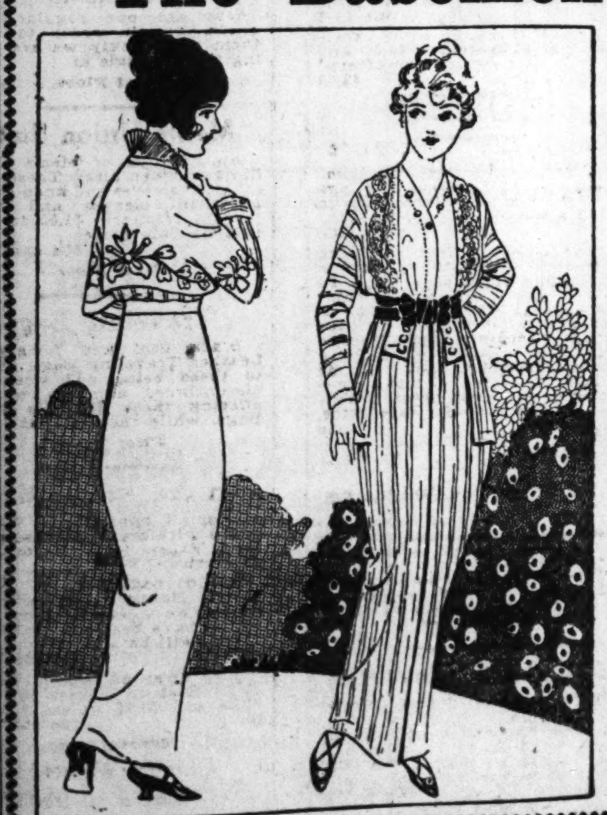
The Basement July Clearing Sale of Outer Apparel—Drastic Reductions!



The order has gone out to "clear-the-decks" in the Basement Garment Section. Those in charge are going to see how thoroughly and quickly the task can be accomplished.

And accordingly tomorrow's July Clearing Sale presents the most remarkable collection of bargain offerings of women's and misses' outer apparel that we have ever before offered in a like event in this section.

$5 Choice of ANY Silk or Cloth Suit, Monday. $5

No matter if the former price was $15, $18 or $20—choice of the entire lot!

This is as extraordinary an offer as we have ever printed in connection with the Basement Garment Store's July Clearing Sale.

The Suits are for women and misses and come in moire, crepe, poplin, serge and novelty cloth.

The styles are those which have been the season's most popular ones—the coats have kimono sleeves and the tier skirts are shown in abundance.

Choice of plain or trimmed styles, and they are in all colors and in all sizes, for women and misses, at the extraordinary low price of $5

Oklahoma Central to Be Sold.

McALESTER, Ok., June 27.—Judge Ralph E. Compbell in the United States District Court, has signed an order for the sale of the Oklahoma Central Railroad on July 31. The road was placed in the hands of A. E. Ramsey of Muskogee as a receiver, several years ago, and was later leased to the Santa Fe with the option of buying. It is probable that the Santa Fe will buy the road.

ORCHID DISPLAY AT ITS BEST AT SHAW'S GARDEN

Cattley Variety Are Furnishing Many of the Blooms and Are Best in Morning.

The largest and most magnificent display of orchids ever made in St. Louis is on view in the Orchid House of the Missouri Bontanical (Shaw's) Garden. The display in bloom is largely of the Cattley orchids—the Mossias variety—which is the commercial orchid. It is a native of Colombia.

These are seen to their best advantage early in the morning, when they shed their exquisite perfume most lavishly, to attract the butterflies. The fact that these floral beauties reside in a glass house in St. Louis does not alter their natural habits. Late in the afternoon the orchid of this variety is almost odorless. One plant has 16 flowers, all perfectly developed.

The cinnamon orchid, a small plant with exquisite yellow blossoms, so called because its fragrance is like that of the aromatic spice, is one of the flora novelties, as is the braided orchid. The last named has minute odorless white flowers, but the form of the stems are attractive.

There are also a number of varieties of the "Slipper" orchids in bloom. One is strongly suggestive of a masculine shoe, the long sepals giving the flower the appearance of an untidy shoe with dragging laces. On examination of the label the suggestion of the masculine shoe is quite justified, as it bears the masculine name "Parishii." It is a native of Burma.

In the Aroid House are to be found a number of interesting plant forms. One is bearing flower spikes, which resemble a red-hot poker. It is a native of Central America. The rattlesnake plant is attractive in form.

The Missouri Botanical Garden is open every week day from sunrise to sunset and every Sunday afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock. The manageemnt invites the public to visit the gardens. Guides will be supplied for special parties.

Photo finishing by Hyatt's experts is best. Developing now 10c a roll, any size. 417 N. Broadway.

Nature Never Intended Woman to be Sickly

As a matter of fact it is her right and her duty to enjoy perfect health and strength—to be just as strong and healthy as man—perhaps more so—in view of the fact that it is she who brings into the world the offspring.

Every woman can be strong and healthy. Don't resign yourself to a delicate life.

If you suffer from headaches, backaches, nervousness, low spirits, lack of ambition, or have lost all hope of being well again—it's more than an even chance that you will speedily regain your health if you will try

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

This famous remedy is the result of years of patient research by a physician who has made women's peculiar ailments a life study.

Since its introduction—more than forty years ago—thousands of women in every part of the globe have testified to its wonderful merits. You, too, will find it beneficial. Try it now. Your dealer in medicines will supply you or you can send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box. Address V. M. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

OUR FIRST JULY CLEARANCE SALE

¶No Shopworn Goods ¶No Last Year's Lines

We Have Been in Business Only Eight Weeks. This is of most remarkable significance in connection with this clearance sale.

It means there are no shopworn goods or last season's lines to be put into the clearing sale lots with the hope that they will go.

We opened this new store eight weeks ago with new, fresh, clean, stylish 1914 lines. As a matter of fact, the majority of these clearing sale offerings have been in our store no more than two weeks.

We Made No Special Purchases for This Sale. It is a genuine closing out of our own lines in preparation for the coming season. Not a garment is reserved from our entire stock—everything we have goes at a reduced price.

SAMPLES OF NEW U. R. TRANSFERS ARE DISTRIBUTED

TWO KINDS WILL BE USED

Company Provides Long Rides for Nickel, but Prevents Round Trips.

The new transfers—officials of the United Railways Co. do not call them "universal" transfers—will be put in use Wednesday on all the United Railways lines.

Samples of the single and double transfers were distributed yesterday by conductors, to give the public a chance to study them. The samples were dated "July 0," so that they will not be good for transportation.

The single transfers for all lines are green and the double transfers lavender, other colors having gone out of fashion with the company. Bruce Cameron, superintendent of transportation, explained the new system to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

The passenger, on paying his fare, will tell the conductor the last line on which he wishes to ride. If the line named is one which directly intersects the first line, a single green transfer, much like the present ones, will be issued.

But if two or more changes are required to get to the line named, the lavender double transfer, punched by the conductor to indicate the most direct routing to that line, will be issued.

The Double Transfer.

Each double transfer consists of two slips folded back to back, so that they register the same when punched. When the passenger makes the first change, he hands in the first slip, and when the second change is made, the second part of the transfer is used. If there is a third change, the conductor who gets the second part of the transfer will issue a new single transfer, punched for the last line indicated by the original transfer.

The conductor will punch one hole in the name of the first line for which the transfer is good, and two holes in the final line. Any intermediate line between the first and final lines will be punched once.

As an example of a two-change trip: If a passenger gets on a Grand avenue car, and says he wishes to go to a point on the Vandeventer line, the conductor will use a lavender double transfer, and will double-punch Vandeventer, and single-punch Olive or Laclede, or whatever line is to be used between Grand and Vandeventer. The passenger will then give one transfer slip to the conductor of the Olive or Laclede line, and the other to the Vandeventer conductor.

As an example of a three-change trip: If a passenger boards a Union car and asks for a transfer to take him to Carondelet on the Broadway line, the conductor will use a lavender double transfer and will single-punch Olive, single-punch Jefferson and double-punch Broadway. The Olive conductor will take the first half of the transfer, and the Jefferson conductor will take the second half and will issue a green single transfer to Broadway.

Have Choice of Routes.

Passengers will have their choice of intermediate routes, Cameron says, unless the intermediate routes they choose are too roundabout. But it will no longer be possible, as it is under the present system, to ride some 26 miles for a nickel by taking the Bellefontaine line at its southern terminus, transferring to the Taylor line, riding the length of that line and taking a second transfer on the Manchester line to Maplewood. The passenger will hereafter have to transfer from the Bellefontaine line to the Manchester line downtown, and go by the direct way.

The company has been careful not to take a chance on giving passengers what its officials term a round trip for one fare. They do not like the term "universal transfers," because they think that name may sound as if the new transfer were a sort of endless chain affair, with stopovers and return privileges.

Nn each transfer is printed a reference to the court decree, obtained recently by the city, which required the company to install a new transfer system. The reading matter on the transfer, aside from names of lines and time marks, is:

"This transfer, issued under rules of company and decree of Circuit Court, good only at intersections punched, within time and in direction punched, not accepted unless properly punched, not good for round trip, not transferable to another." The name of "James Adkins, Treas.," is signed.

July Clearing Sales

THE FIRST SUMMER CLEARANCE IN OUR NEW HOME—a notable occasion for ECONOMISTS. It is a CLEAR-AWAY OF SUMMER STOCKS of the first magnitude and of far greater proportions than any we have heretofore held & is planned on a scale to rival in its value-giving the REMOVAL SALE of a year ago. Throughout every section of the store decisive price mark-downs have been made & so general are reductions that most anything one might wish is to be had at substantial discounts. The extensive stocks of fresh, new, desirable merchandise & the radical price abatements make this let-go of Summer stocks of the greatest importance & helpfulness & warrants the attendance of thrifty people Monday morning at 8:30.

CARRANZA AID CHARGES ANGELES IS HUERTA AGENT

Breceda, Secretary to the Constitutionalist Head, Issues Statement at Washington, Alleging That Angeles Stirred Up Strife Between Villa and Chief.

ALLEGES ATTEMPT TO USE VILLA AS TOOL

Angeles Said to Aspire to Provisional Presidency—Villa, Says Breceda, Has Put Off Discussion of Grievances Until Cause Triumphs.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Alfredo Breceda, private secretary of Gen. Carranza, leader of the revolutionist forces in Mexico, issued a statement here tonight, charging that Gen. Felipe Angeles had stirred up the recent contention between Carranza and Gen. Villa and that Angeles was in reality an agent of Gen. Huerta.

Breceda's statement, issued after a long conference with Luis Cabrera, one of Gen. Carranza's representatives here, who is earnestly working for participation of the Constitutionalists in an informal peace conference with delegates to the Niagara Falls mediation, admits a breach in the Constitutionalist ranks that probably cannot be healed unless mediation should succeed.

Breceda's Statement.

The Breceda statement in full follows: "Public opinion in the United States has been greatly misled in the matter of the attitude of Gen. Villa toward Mr. Carranza, and consequently I find it necessary in view of the knowledge and direct acquaintance that I have of the facts to issue a statement in order to make known the real situation of the Constitutionalist leadership.

"The troubles between Villa and Carranza have not all the importance that has been supposed and can be composed when the real causes of the break become known. Villa, who had been the leader showing the most spirit and vindictiveness in the war against Huerta, had appeared always in an entirely subordinate character to Carranza and entirely submissive to Carranza in spite of persistent attempts made to make him appear as holding personal ambitions and as disloyal toward Carranza.

"Villa always had continued being loyal toward Carranza and had it not been for the interference of Felipe Angeles, who is the chief author of the happenings occurring lately, there never would have been any differences. Whenever the insubordination of Villa is spoken of we ought to say the insubordination of Angeles.

Rebels Accepted Angeles.

"Gen. Angeles was a commander in the Federal army. He was sent on a mission to Europe by Huerta. He stayed there until October, 1913; then he asked to join the ranks and the colors of the Constitutionalist army. Angeles was accepted. He received money for his family and for his trip. He was welcomed by Mr. Carranza, who, in view of Angeles being a technical military man appointed him sub-secretry of his War Department. His nomination was well accepted by the revolutionary leaders, as they considered him entirely educated in politics under the Federal ideas. As a matter of fact, he always tried to keep apart from Mr. Carranza and the revolutionary leaders.

Change in Villa's Attitude.

"The trip of Carranza from Sonora to Chihuahua coincided with the beginning of the military activities against Torreon, and then, yielding to the wishes of Villa, Angeles was sent from Sonora to help Villa in the investment of Torreon.

"Since the arrival of Angeles near Villa, a change in the attitude of the latter was felt, nearly all the acts of Villa meaning disagreement with Carranza, such as the imprisonment and attempted shooting of Gen. Chao, which were due to the advice of Angeles.

"On June 12 Carranza asked Villa to send some reinforcements to Natera, who was at the time investing Zacatecas. Villa, acting under the advice of Angeles, refused to send such reinforcements unless he could take charge of the assault, doing it all with his own forces. Carranza insisted. Villa refused again and in a fit of anger tendered his resignation as military commander of the Northern division.

Attempts to Patch Break.

"Carranza found himself obliged to accept the resignation, but, wishing to follow democratic proceedings, he consulted the officials who were under the orders of Villa, that they could choose by themselves their active leader. But officials influenced by Angeles, refused to appoint a substitute and agreed to support Villa as their leader, and they are thus in an attitude of disobedience towards Carranza.

"Carranza was acquainted with the real causes of the attitude of Villa

Ten Reasons Why the New Charter Should Be Adopted

Vote for the NEW Charter Because—

1. It provides for Home Rule of police, excise and elections.
2. It establishes the eight-hour law in public work.
3. It creates a Public Safety Department empowered to take effectual measures to protect life, limb and property.
4. It creates a Public Welfare Department, in which are concentrated all branches of the government dealing with sanitation, health, recreation and the relief of poverty and disease.
5. It enables the city to make needed improvements on a system of special assessment which equitably distributes the cost, according to benefits, at the least possible expense and inconvenience to the taxpayers.
6. It gives the people the power to insure good laws and defeat bad laws through easier conditions of initiative and referendum.
7. It gives the people the power to remove negligent, incompetent, misrepresentative and corrupt public officers before the expiration of their terms of office.
8. It concentrates power and responsibility for the conduct of the government upon a few officials, who can be held to strict accountability by the people.
9. It breaks the power of the political bosses by substituting the merit for the spoils system.
10. It breaks the power of the Big Cinch by giving the people control of all public utilities by regulation, or by construction, purchase, ownership and operation of public utilities such as street railways, telephones, gas and electric power and light. It enables the city to supply all the needs of the people. It enables the city to construct or acquire utility plants with bonds issued on the property and the earnings, thus relieving the taxpayers of the burden.

Vote Against the OLD One Because

1. It does not provide for Home Rule.
2. It perpetuates an antiquated, cumbersome, irresponsible and costly form of government.
3. It hampers public improvements and compels the taxing of the whole city for all public improvements except streets and sewers. Its taxing system is impracticable and unjust.
4. It maintains the spoils system and packs the city hall with incompetents and barnacles.
5. It makes it difficult for the people to initiate and pass good measures and to defeat bad measures. The percentages for the initiative and referendum are high.

RING HELD BY CAR RAILING, WOMAN'S FINGER TORN OFF

Peculiar Accident Happens to Mrs. Samuel Barg, While Alighting at Clayton.

A ring of many metals welded together, which was worn as a charm against rheumatism, caused an accident at Clayton last night in which Mrs. Samuel Barg's little finger on the right hand was torn from the socket. She is 48 years old, and the wife of a retired merchant.

As she was leaving the street car near her home on St. Louis avenue she grasped a handrail, along which her hand slid down when she stepped on the running board. Just as she was stepping to the ground, the ring caught in the socket of the rail, and her weight of 170 pounds was thrown upon the little finger, on which the ring was worn. The strain tore the finger from the hand.

She was put back on the car, which ran at full speed to the office of Dr. G. E. Eggers. He treated her, but said that the finger could not be sewed back on.

MAN AND SISTER HELD UP IN FOREST PARK

Robber Masked With Handkerchief Levels Pistol at Them on Highland Drive.

A highwayman whose mouth and chin were masked with a white handkerchief robbed Walter H. Dreimeyer, 3510 North Eleventh street, at the point of a pistol in Forest Park at 9:30 o'clock last night.

Dreimeyer and his sister, Miss Myrtle Dreimeyer, were strolling along Highland drive, when the robber suddenly stood before them and demanded Dreimeyer's purse. He obtained $11.50 in cash and a watch and chain valued at $20.

Then, commanding the couple to stand still until he was out of sight, he ran away. Dreimeyer is a conductor on the Broadway line.

SEAMAN ESCORTED OUT OF ANNAPOLIS, FIRED IN DISGRACE

Mississippian Convicted of Impersonating Another in Examination Is Discharged.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 27.—M. P. Harris of Mississippi, a young enlisted man in the navy, tonight was escorted to the boundaries of the Government reservation at Annapolis and there dishonorably discharged from the service because he had impersonated another man in an examination for admission to the naval academy as a midshipman.

Harris won a designation from United States Senator Williams to take the entrance tests under a new plan of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, on the part of enlisted men. He passed the tests and later took the place of T. B. Longre, also of Mississippi, and passed the first examination for him in Virginia. When Longre appeared at the Naval Academy to take the physical test the deception was discovered because his handwriting did not agree with that in the first examination papers.

Although kept in ignorance of the investigation by the academy authorities and told that he was suffering from a slight physical defect, Longre left Annapolis when publicity was given to the affair and did not return.

The Naval Academy authorities recommended a court martial for Harris, but the ruling of the Secretary of the Navy was for dishonorable discharge. Harris had been a prisoner aboard the prison ship Reina Mercedes since the discovery of guilt.

Longre's case has been referred to the Civil Service Commission at Washington.

BUSINESS MAN SHOT; KILLS ROBBER, DIES

DETROIT, June 27.—John Burbank, president and treasurer of a local hardware company, was shot and killed late tonight by a supposed highwayman, whose body was found a block away from the place where Burbank fell.

Burbank is believed to have shot and killed his assailant after he himself had received four bullet wounds which proved fatal. A revolver was found by each body.

FOUR MONTHS' REST ORDERED TO GIVE ROOSEVELT HEALTH

Physicians and Family Agree That Colonel Must Quit Work to Avoid Breakdown.

HAS ENLARGED SPLEEN

Progressive Leader Will Conduct Campaign From Home, Won't Give Up All Duties.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 27.—All existing doubt as to the health of Col. Theodore Roosevelt was in a large measure disposed of today, and tonight his intimate friends and members of his family agreed that only a four months' rest cure would save him from a physical breakdown.

At Oyster Bay it was said that the condition of the Colonel almost surely would eliminate him as a possible candidate for Governor of New York.

The conclusion that his condition was bad, if not really seriously, was reached following a most thorough examination made of him on Friday night by Dr. Alexander Lambert and the official announcement followed that Mr. Roosevelt is an ill man, his spleen having become enlarged as a result of malaria contracted in the Brazilian jungles. The examination also showed a weakening in vitality.

Diagnosis Made in Secrecy.

The examination took place at Sagamore Hill, Dr. Lambert motoring from New York and employing secrecy in his visit. Dr. Lambert prescribed absolute rest for July, August, September and October, warning the Colonel that only such care can possibly restore him to health.

It was explained that an enlarged spleen frequently accompanied malaria and that rest and quiet were the only cure for such a condition.

On the heels of Dr. Lambert's diagnosis and advice it was decided to curtail the Colonel's campaign work as much as possible where the interests of the Progressive party will not be endangered.

The Colonel was urged to abandon his trip to Pittsburg next Tuesday, but he refused to consider this advice and is going. He explained that arrangements has been completed to receive him there and he doesn't feel that to abandon the trip would be justice to those who had prepared for his coming.

It had been planned for him to make two speeches in Pittsburg, the first in Exposition Hall and the second at an overflow meeting in Machinery Hall. Because of the Colonel's weakened condition, the second speech will not be made.

Colonel Roosevelt returned from a horseback ride this evening at 6 o'clock and, standing on the porch of his home in his khaki riding suit, he looked much like the Roosevelt of old, except to those who have long known him. A critical examination of his appearance showed that his neck was thinning and he has aged. But his manner was just as buoyant and his laugh as hearty and ready as before he went to Brazil.

"I think the doctor takes too gloomy a view of my condition," he said. "He urges me to take a rest of four months. That would be too long. The campaign practically would be over by that time." He shook his head as though doing nothing for four months was simply out of the question. However, it is known that Col. Roosevelt will drop all heavy work for the present, although the campaign will be directed to a large extent from Sagamore Hill. It is not thought possible to keep him resting after the campaign gets going in earnest, and in the early fall it is believed he will plunge in.

While he is resting during the preliminaries of the campaign the work in New York State will be in the hands of Theodore Douglas Robinson, the Progressive State chairman, who is the Colonel's nephew, and Francis W. Bird, New York county chairman.

Heavy Work Taken by Others.

The preliminaries in the national campaign will be arranged by Representative Weinbaugh of Illinois, while each state chairman will do the heavy work of getting the ball rolling.

Col. Roosevelt had expected to go to California and take active part in the campaign there. This trip had been planned for the near future. A wire was sent yesterday to the Progressive leaders on the Coast, telling them of the Colonel's condition.

Word came back that he could be spared and the Western trip was abandoned at once.

At the same time the Progressive leaders of the State and nation were informed of the Colonel's condition. It was explained to them that his mind must be kept off business and political affairs.

In the future the number of visitors at Sagamore Hill will be greatly curtailed and every precaution taken to give him the rest of physician insists he must have.

SUFFRAGISTS FILE PETITIONS TO TAKE CAUSE TO POLLS

Women From 11 Congressional Districts Present Signatures to Secretary of State.

25,000 TO 30,000 NAMES

St. Louis Delegation Is Led by Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer—Others to File Soon.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 27.—About fifty suffragists, representing 11 congressional districts, visited the reception room of the Secretary of State's office at the temporary Capitol this afternoon and presented to Gov. Major and Secretary of State Roach petitions containing between 25,000 and 30,000 names, demanding the submission of an equal suffrage amendment at the next general election.

The St. Louis delegation, led by Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer, publicity manager for the Missouri Equal Suffrage League, arrived on the noon train and opened headquarters at the Madison Hotel.

Delegations from other parts of the State arrived on early afternoon trains, and at 2:30 o'clock Secretary of State Roach and Mrs. Walter McNabb Miller of Columbus, president of the State organization, led the march to the Capitol.

Gov. Major, who was in St. Louis yesterday and came to Jefferson City on the same train with the suffragists, was waiting at the Capitol. The filing ceremony was brief and business-like.

After a short address of explanation, Mrs. Miller introduced Mrs. Otto Mathews of Macon, who filed petitions from the First Congressional District.

Miss Clara Dunn of Monroe City, president of the College Equal Suffrage League, presented petitions from the Second District. Representatives from the Third District announced their petitions had not been completed.

Mrs. D. B. Winter of St. Joseph filed the signatures from the Fourth District. Mrs. J. A. D. Adcock of Warrensburg filed petitions from the Sixth. Mrs. H. C. Shelton of Eldon filed for the Eighth, Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer for the Tenth, Mrs. W. C. Fordyce of St. Louis for the Eleventh, Mrs. Sarah Spraggon of St. Louis for the Twelfth and Mrs. E. M. Blanton of Carthage for the Fifteenth.

Mrs. Miller said she had been notified by suffrage leaders in districts where petitions were not ready to file today that their work was being rushed and the petitions would be completed and filed before July 3, when the time limit expires.

Documents Neatly Wrapped.

In receiving the petitions, Secretary Roach told the women the documents were the most neatly wrapped and nicely arranged petitions ever presented to his office.

The largest petition was that from the Tenth District. The number of names required in the Tenth was 4061. The number filed was 4485.

The number in other districts ranged from 1696 in the Eighth to 3852 in the Fifth.

Mrs. Moyer said the number of signatures filed from the three St. Louis districts exceeded the number required by more than 2000.

Signatures Required by Law.

The law providing for the submission of constitutional amendments by initiative requires the signatures on petitions of at least 5 per cent of the votes cast in each of at least 11 congressional districts at the last general election, which is equivalent to about 25,000 names.

The law further provides that the PARIS, June 27.—Jack Johnson still is the champion heavyweight pugilist of the world. In a battle fought under circumstances and surroundings most peculiar to Americans the black champion was declared the winner over Moran tonight after twenty hotly contested rounds. Moran put up a strong defense, although the negro punished him unmercifully, cutting his face and closing his left eye. At the conclusion Johnson appeared weakened but declared he was not the least tired.

At the end of the twentieth round, Carpentier, the French champion, who acted as referee, formally declared Johnson the winner. The crowd fully approved the verdict by cheering wildly.

Moran immediately left the ring to have his wounds attended, while Johnson remained at the ring receiving congratulations. "You see I am not a bit puffing or winded," said Johnson and his statement was absolutely true. There was not a scratch on his body.

The fight was quite as much a social affair as a sporting event. It drew a large gathering of men of all ranks and women of title to the Velodrome d'Hiver, where the 20-foot ring was pitched.

It was an amazingly international crowd. Several hundred Americans were in the best seats. They included Mortimer Schiff of New York, former Senator C. W. Watson of West Virginia, Richard Croker Jr., Ogden Mills, Herman B. Duryea, Alfred Vanderbilt, D. A. Reid and E. H. Thomas, all of New York; E. C. Brown of Chicago.

Spencer Eddy, former American Minister to Argentina, sat near the ringside. Three hundred feet behind him sat the Duke of Westminster, while not far away, were the Earl of Sefton, Louis Barthou, former Premier of France; the Marquis de Lafayette, the Duke d'Uses, Marquis de Breteuil, Baron James de Rothschild and Count Clary.

Former Sultan Present.

Here and there were dark faces, some of them negroes from Segal, Dahomay and West Indies. Two negro members of the Chamber of Deputies of Guadalupe showed interest in the battle, while other dark faces included Prince d'Huleep Sinds of India and Omer Sultan Pasha of Egypt.

Most of the men and women were in evening clothes. There were hundreds of beautiful and stylishly gowned women and many members of high society.

In the front row and directly facing the ringside sat a little, young woman, wearing a small fortune in diamonds and other precious stones. Her gown was the latest Parisian dressmaker's creation. She was bare-headed. In her right hand she carried a large gold vanity case the center of which was an immense letter "J" set in large sparkling diamonds. She was the wife of the colored champion. "Jack is all right, he will win surely. He trained faithfully. When the battle is over my Jack will still be the world's champion," she said to me. "I am here as his mascot."

The women appeared to take as much interest in the fight as their male escorts.

The women craned their necks and their gloved hands joined in applauding the two pugilists as they struggled up and down the ring, feinting, dodging and hammering each other. Among the women were those who bore such great names in French society as Baroness Henry de Rothschild, the younger Duchess de Ezès, the post Princess de Lucinge, the Duchess de Rohan, Princess Morcuzieff and Countess de Proumiere.

Johnson's white wife cried out shrilly from time to time: "Hit him, daddy!" "Come along, Pop!" "Now, then, Jack, let him have another."

3 BAND CONCERTS TODAY

Three band concerts will be given in the parks this afternoon. Bambrick's band will open the season at Tower Grove Park with a concert at 3. Frederick Fischer's band will play in Forest Park from 3:30 to 6:30. Vogel's band will give its first concert of the season at O'Fallon Park.

From now on both Fischer's and Vogel's bands will give daily concerts in parks. Heretofore this season only Fisher's band has played.

KING GEORGE'S HAT ALMOST KNOCKED OFF BY MILITANTS

England's Rulers Are Bombarded With Paper Leaflets at Entrance to Hyde Park.

LONLON, June 27.—Militant suffragettes circumvented the police today and bombarded King George and Queen Mary with leaflets at the entrance to Hyde Park.

A bundle of the papers struck the King's hat and knocked it sideways, while the Qeuen's parasol caught another shower of pamphlets.

Two women were seized by the police and carried away, struggling violently.

After the shower of suffragette literature, the King and Queen treated the incident with good humored indifference, which they always exhibit when they are objects of suffragette demonstrations. The King smilingly tossed one of the bundles of papers into the roadway, and their drive continued unchecked.

The crowd showed a very different spirit. Quick to resent what was regarded as an insult to their imperial majesties, the spectators made a rush for the women who would have been badly mauled had not the police rallied around them. Two of the women were particular objects of the crowd's wrath, because they were most conspicuous in throwing the bundles at the royal carriage. They were arrested more for their own protection than because of their offense. They were taken to the police station and charged with insulting behavior, but were released on their own recognizance.

NEW ORLEANS REPORTS BUBONIC PLAGUE CASE

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—Health officers announced tonight that a case of bubonic plague had been discovered in New Orleans.

Charles Lundene, a Swede, 40 years old, who has been in the city 11 days, is the victim. Where Lundene came from has not been learned.

He was taken ill several days ago in a lodging house, and later removed to a hospital, where physicians pronounced him suffering from the plague.

"Kiss, I will win," said Moran. Mrs. Tappe, richly gowned, planted a kiss on his lip. Referee Carpentier, a witness, was not influenced by etiquette.

It was 10:15 when wild cheering announced the approach of the heavyweights. First to appear was Johnson wearing a long, black striped dressing gown, followed by his attendants. The French people like Johnson and they cheered him vigorously.

No sooner had Johnson climbed under the ropes than Moran put in his appearance. He looked more like a boy alongside the heavy negro. Johnson walked round the ring and stopping over to where his wife was seated greeted her with a broad grin.

Then spying Louis Mann, the American actor, Johnson called to him. Mann climbed to the ring and both shook hands cordially, Mann wishing the negro good luck.

Moran appeared somewhat nervous. Billy Brady, the theatrical manager, stepped in the ring and whispering in Moran's ear, made the 'white hope' grin.

Dan McKittrick, with Willie Lewis, advised Moran. Johnson evidently needed no advice.

Throughout the entire fight George Considine, who was seated next to Moran's corner, kept up a running conversation with the negro with the evident purpose of rattling him. Johnson smiled good naturedly, but once called out: "Hello, Mr. Jim Corbett." The audience soon became disgusted with that method of "getting his goat" and toward the end when Johnson was punishing Moran savagely Considine kept quiet.

Moran made a strong play for Johnson's belly, but the negro did not seem to mind his punches. Once Moran dealt Johnson a powerful left to the jaw, which would have knocked out an ordinary fighter, but the negro just showed his gold teeth and grinned.

The fifth and sixth rounds were declared Moran's, but in the rest Johnson showed decided superiority. There is no doubt the negro today is still the greatest ring general. As the crowd left the building there were on all sides expressions of sympathy and admiration for Moran's excellent fight against the more powerful negro. Surely Moran made good his promise as a possible white hope.

It was announced that the gate receipts exceeded 200,000 francs ($40,000).

Many of the French spectators, who seemingly did not understand the fine points of boxing, voiced their objection to infighting, but cheered any resounding harmless whacks.

There were times when the audience became dissatisfied and hissed because of the large amount of footwork indulged in by Moran. Once Johnson put down both hands and looking at Moran in utter astonishment and with disgust written over his black countenance called out: "What do you call that, promenading?"

Negro Gets $35,000.

Johnson had an advantage in weight of 10 pounds, Moran weighing 206 pounds, while the negro tipped the scales at 216. Johnson is 36 years old, however, while Moran is only 27. The negro is an inch and a half taller than Moran.

Johnson was a 2-to-5 favorite in the betting before the fight tonight. The negro received $35,000 of the purse, while Moran received only $5000. The amounts would have been the same had Moran won or the fight been declared a draw, according to the agreement, made before Johnson consented to fight.

After the fight Johnson pointed out that no champion of his age ever defended the title and won. He appeared little the worse for the battle.

Says Moran Has Hard Punch.

"They thought I couldn't last 20 rounds," he said. "Well didn't I? I'm satisfied. I have done nothing for two years except ride fast. In another six weeks I will be ready to box anybody.

"Moran? He has a real hard punch with either hand. I know, because I have been there. If they always landed, there isn't anybody who could stand up against him. He is a good boy, all right, and I enjoyed the fight. Carpentier was a firm referee."

It was the first time a French champion had refereed a big match and Carpentier expressed great pleasure at the experience. He thought it one of the best fights he had ever seen.

Moran Expected Draw.

Asked if he would like to take on Johnson, Carpentier said: "Johnson is a little bit too heavy for me at present."

Moran, in his dressing room after the fight, said:

"At the worst, it should have been a draw. I was the aggressor throughout the whole 20 rounds and I was not hurt. The cut over my eye is only an old one reopened; it was received in training. I believe I had the best of practically every round.

"The blow that really hurt was one on my nose and for this Johnson was warned. That stopped my breathing and sent the blood trickling down my throat. That was the only real hurt Johnson gave me. I shall return to my camp and train for another fight. My manager has one in mind."

TIMEKEEPER SAYS MORAN'S LEADING WAS HIS UNDOING

Negro's Victory Described as One Not to Boast On—His Followers Surprised That Moran Stayed Limit.

By WILLIAM H. ROCAP,

Official Timekeeper Moran-Johnson Fight.

PARIS, June 27.—Johnson retained his title tonight, but the victory was little to boast of. Moran carried the fight to the champion, who refused to lead. This aggressiveness cost Moran the fight.

The Pittsburg heavyweight was always over-anxious. In the fifteenth round he moved around the ring inviting Johnson to lead, but the latted stood in the center and dropped his hands and invited Moran to mix it up. Moran did, and before Johnson could guard, Moran caught him with a left and right before the bell rang.

The bout was spoiled in the last two rounds because Johnson was not trying.

Moran showed he could punch in the first round, when he caught Johnson with a right lead. The blow landed on the cheekbone and raised a large lump. Johnson was wary of Moran's right thereafter and took no chances. He boxed carefully and let Moran set the pace. Johnson was content to block and catch Moran coming in with a left hook and right uppercut.

Johnson showed flashes of his old-time cleverness by blocking and jabbing with left and right hand uppercuts. All were well-timed, but they lacked speed. He let Moran do the bulk of the leading. His younger opponent fell into the trap.

On points Johnson had twelve of the twenty rounds. Two were clearly Moran's—the sixth and fifteenth—while honors were even in the other six. Moran lost a great opportunity in the thirteenth when he caught Johnson flush on the jaw with a left hook. He stepped away and made Johnson miss a vicious right uppercut. Johnson in approbation of Moran's skill, stood in the center of the ring and clapped his gloved hands. Moran could have caught him with a straight right lead but was too slow.

Moran made a wonderful showing for a fighter who was declared to be entirely out of Johnson's class. The Pennsylvanian was badly battered from the tenth round right down to the finish, but displayed rare stamina and stuck on grimly until the end. In the twelfth round his face was bleeding and he was having trouble breathing. It looked like a knockout any minute. But Moran rallied gamely and held up well. In the final rounds of the bout he was literally stalling for time. The crowd yelled while Moran hung on in the last two rounds, but Johnson was unequal to the task of putting his adversary away.

Johnson came out of the fight practically unscathed. Moran got to him hard in the infighting, landing many [illegible] blows in the clinches. At other times Moran got across some stiff face and head punches. But invariably Johnson smiled and brushed off Moran's punches with little concern and with no damage done. To all intents the fight was square and on the level. The champion rushed the fight in the closing stages, hoping to put over a knockout punch.

Moran Blinded After Tenth.

There was not a single knockdown during the fight. Nor was there what looked like a finishing blow. Johnson indulged in plenty of hard hitting, but Moran absorbed all the punishment and came back after more. The challenger fought under a disadvantage after the tenth round. He was bleeding from cuts on the nose and under the left eye and at times was blinded. Johnson slammed Moran's crooked nose repeatedly, but Moran shook his head and bored in again.

Plainly the sympathies of the crowd were with Moran. Every time he landed an uppercut on Johnson's face or rammed the champion in the infighting the crowd cheered vigorously. They kept shouting encouragement to the Pennsylvanian continually. Toward the end of the fight, however, when Moran was weakening and hanging on to save himself, the old Roman spirit of a finish fight asserted itself and the crowd jeered Moran and cried to Johnson to "put him out."

End of Fight Dramatic.

The end of the fight was dramatic. Johnson had worn Moran in the fifteenth and nineteenth rounds with crashing blows to the jaw and stomach. At the start of the last round they shook hands and squared off for the finish. Johnson ripped across several stinging uppercuts and Moran reeled. It looked as though Johnson would score at least a knockdown. Moran rushed into clinches to save himself and tried too belabor the champion with body blows. Johnson tried ineffectually to hold Moran off, at one time Moran's head resting on the champion's chest.

Johnson swung right and left body blows and Moran came back with a few feeble stomach punches. Then the bell rang with both men on their feet. Referee Carpentier immediately pronounced Johnson a winner on points and the crowd signified its approval of the verdict.

Supporters of the champion were downcast over the result. They never expected the fight to go the full 20 rounds. Gloom prevaded the Johnson camp, for it was generally conceded that since Moran, a mediocre fighter, had stayed 20 rounds, the impression would prevail that Johnson had gone back and there would be plenty of challengers for the heavyweight title among fighters of greater strength than Dan McKettrick's plucky protege.

Story of Fight By Rounds Shows How Negro Retained the Title

PARIS, June 27.

By Associated Press.

ROUND ONE—Moran found an opening and landed first to the stomach and head. Johnson succeeded in landing on Moran's jaw. They mixed it hard, Johnson landing on the Pittsburger's stomach. End round.

ROUND THREE—Johnson gave Moran several terrific uppercuts to the jaw, while Moran responded with several jolts to the negro's stomach. Johnson landed a hard jolt on Moran's eye and followed with hard knocks cn the body. Johnson crowded Moran, who stumbled against the ropes as time was called.

ROUND FOUR—Johnson drew first blood with a right to Moran's nose. The negro smiled confidently as he met Moran's attack. Both led at the same time, each landing on the other's head without harm. Johnson landed on Moran's face as the gong sounded.

ROUND FIVE—Johnson appeared fresher and confident as the round began. Moran landed hard on Johnson's jaw, and the crowd cheered. Johnson retaliated with several blows to the body. Moran blocked several hard uppercuts and landed lightly on the negro's solar plexus, which amused the crowd.

In a clinch Moran pounded Johnson's stomach, landing five or six blows and blocked more uppercuts from the negro. Johnson landed a hard right to the jaw. Both fighters did fine work.

ROUND NINE—Moran sent a left hook to the body, while Johnson landed one on the head and several hard ones to the jaw. Johnson rushed the fighting somewhat. Moran receiving a left on the jaw.

ROUND TEN—They mixed it immeiadtely at the opening of the round. Johnson was successful in the fighting. The referee told the men to break away. Johnson sent one to Moran's nose. Moran's cut Moran's nose and mouth. The referee warned Johnson, while the crowd hooted the negro. Hard fighting was resumed. It looked as though Moran was weakening. This was all Johnson's round.

ROUND ELEVEN—Moran landed one on Johnson's head. The negro then rushed the Pittsburger and received another warning for holding. Moran sent three hard blows to the body, the negro retaliating viciously with blows to Moran's jaw.

ROUND TWELVE — Johnson succeeded in landing several uppercuts to the jaw and a straight left to the nose and also over the eye. Moran was breathing hard and it did not seem that he would last long. Moran cleverly dodged a hard swing to the jaw.

ROUND THIRTEEN — Moran led, but could not land effectively. Johnson sent one to Moran's jaw. The Pittsburger landed on the negro's jaw, drawing a cheer. Johnson stood smiling, and then sent a hard right to Moran's jaw.

ROUND FOURTEEN — Moran tried hard but unsuccessfully for the negro's jaw. Several of Moran's blows brought smiles from his opponent. Moran ran into a punch on the nose and in making a futile swing at Johnson he ran into the ropes.

ROUND FIFTEEN — Moran avoided the negro, who stood still, laughing, Moran landed hard to the negro's face while the latter rushed him to the ropes.

ROUND SIXTEEN — Johnson forced the fighting. Moran landed on the stomach and the negro sent a left to Moran's nose. He followed this with five more in lightning succession to the same place. Moran landed two straight lefts to the chin.

ROUND NINETEEN — Moran went after Johnson infighting and holding at the same time. He did no damage, however. His tactics caused adverse comment, Referee Carpentier frequently separating the men.

ROUND TWENTY—They shook hands. Each tried for a knockout. Johnson sent several hard rights to Moran's face. He then landed with left to Moran's head, Moran's head rested on the negro's chest. Moran swung wildly and then Johnson landed frequently and at will. Moran was hanging on and tried ineffectively for the negro's body. The gong then rang and Johnson was declared the winner.

VANITIE BEATS DEFIANCE AND WINS PRIZE CUP

Cochran Yacht, With Resolute Out of Way, Outsails Her Other Competitor.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 27.—With Resolute retired for 10 days for repairs, Vanitie and Defiance today raced on the Sound again in the lightest of airs. The Cochran yacht won without difficulty.

A minute after the two crossed, virtually bow and bow, Vanitie took the lead and gained on nearly every leg as they reached and beat twice around a 15¼ mile triangle. At one time Vanitie was nearly two miles ahead, but a slight increase in the breeze late in the afternoon enabled Defiance to regain much of the lost distance. The difference between the two at the finish was 14 minutes and 3 seconds. On corrected time Vanitie beat Defiance 7 minutes 42 seconds.

The accident to Resolute was not serious, but the loosening of the cap on the bowsprit and the slackening of the bobstay were deemed sufficient to take her back to Bristol. Resolute will met her rivals again off Newport on July 7, under the auspices of the Eastern Yacht Club.

The other two yachts will race off Larchmont on Monday. The race today was the second for the cup offered by Commodore Harold Vanderbilt of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, and under the conditions of the gift it goes to Vanitie.

Petitions Filed to Let Missousi Vote on Suffrage

Secretary of State shall examine the number and form of the signatures and if they are correct and sufficient shall apply to the Attorney-General for an appropriate heading for the amendment. He must then give it a number, in the order of its filing, which in this case is 132.

The suffragist amendment is the first to be submitted this year by the initiative. Four others have been submitted by referendum and eight were submitted by the Legislature.

When the list is completed the Secretary of State will certify them to the county clerks, advertise them in the newspapers and they will be submitted to the voters at the polls.

St. Louis Delegation Carry Pennants on Trip to Capital.

Armed with signatures of thousands of voters, indorsing the proposed constitutional amendment granting the vote to women in Missouri, eight suffrage advocates left St. Louis for Jefferson City yesterday morning, to present the petitions at the State Capitol.

The signatures were obtained during a vigorous campaign of a year throughout the State, and represent a large excess over the required number. More than 10,000 were obtained in the three local districts.

In the delegation were Mrs. George Gellhorn, vice-president of the Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer, secretary; Miss Charlotte Rumbold, Mrs. Sarah Spraggon, Miss Mary Bulkley, Mrs. B. F. Burch, Miss Edna McGrath and Mrs. Catherine Dalton.

The petitions were neatly encased in white pasteboard boxes, wrapped in tissue paper, and tied with yellow silk ribbon. Large quantities of sufffrage literature and pennants were carried on the trip and attracted much attention.

Autopsy Clears Up Baltimore Woman's Death in Paris.

PARIS, June 27.—Mrs. Edith Winship Stewart, wife of David Stewart of Baltimore, who died suddenly in a hotel here Thursday night, was suffocated by an inrush of food into the respiratory organs, according to physicians who performed an autopsy tonight.

Mrs. Stewart was a daughter of William Boblitz, and was born in Baltimore in 1878. She had lived in Paris for several years. It was at first thought her death was caused by an overdose of a narcotic which she frequently used to alleviate neuralgic pains.

CLARK FOR VOTE FOR WOMEN; SAYS THEY WILL WIN

Speaker Tells Suffragists He Will Vote for Cause if It Is Submitted in Missouri.

BRYAN BEATS A RETREAT

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Woman suffragists representing their sisters in 38 States descended on the Capitol again today seeking support from Congressmen. Speaker Clark told them that woman suffrage was as "inevitable as the rising of tomorrow's sun."

Vice-President Marshall, pressed to make a more definite stand on the question, naively intimated that his wife would not let him. Secretary Bryan, when waylaid by an enthusiastic suffragist as he was wending his way through the Capitol's corridors to discuss affairs of state with a Senate committee, took refuge in the elevator. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association; Jane Addams of Chicago, and Mrs. Desha Breckinridge of Kentucky, vice-presidents, pleaded their cause to both Vice-President Marshall and Speaker Clark. Mrs. Breckinridge, a granddaughter of Henry Clay, said she hoped the Vice-President would help the woman suffrage cause. The Vice-President interrupted:

"I've got to remember my wife, and I don't want to get separated from her."

This remark was interpreted by the suffragists to mean that Mrs. Marshall is opposed to the movement.

Three Hundred Petitions.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Chicago said the delegation wanted their petitions sent to the Senators by messengers.

"I will do that for you," said the Vice-President, and calling pages, he ordered that the petitions be distributed.

The women presented 300 petitions for woman suffrage in the form of resolutions adopted by suffrage organizations and mass meetings at the time of the nation-wide demonstrations on May 2. The suffragists requested that all petitions be laid before Congress before July 8. The women explained that the petitions were strictly nonpartisan. The petitions ask for legislation which will "insure to women equal political rights with men," but do not advocate adoption of any particular pending measure.

Dr. Shaw told both the Vice-President and the Speaker there was a demand for woman suffrage throughout the United States. She said that, since the nation-wide suffrage demonstration on May 2 she had attended the meeting of the International Council of Women at Rome, representing 7,000,000 women from widely separated countries, and that, when a resolution for woman suffrage was presented there, every vote was cast in its favor.

Suffrage Desire Universal.

"This shows," she said, "that the desire for suffrage is not merely from this country, but from all over the world. The method of securing universal suffrage state by state is too slow and, unless we can get Congress to encourage the movement, it will be greatly delayed. Therefore, we are demanding that Congress shall pass some form of law. We are not stipulating what that law shall be, but we desire some law that will give the states the support of Congress."

Miss Addams pointed out that in Chicago there were municipal questions of importance on which women voted.

"More than one-third of those eligible to vote," she said, "have exercised that privilege.

"If you women are going to run the world, I hope you will improve on the efforts of the men," said Speaker Clark. "For 6000 years men have been trying to run the world and some think they have made a bad mess of it. My own judgment is that you can get results quicker through the states. At the rate you are going now, it looks to me as if you might get it in three, four or five years. My own position, and I might as well make that clear to you now, because I have to do it some time, is that I think women should vote. Whenever it is submitted in Missouri I am going to vote for it."

"Vote for the Best Men."

"This is not because all women are fitted to vote and I may add that I would not like to say all men are fitted to vote. If you ever do vote, I hope you will vote for the best principles and the best men."

Dr. Shaw called Speaker Clark's attention to the fact that under the initiative and referendum the suffrage question was being submitted to the voters in Missouri today. A telegram was sent to Missouri suffrage leaders, informing them of what the Speaker had said.

"Your father came across with his suffrage support," a friend suggested. "He wouldn't have dared come home if he hadn't," she smilingly replied.

UNVEIL CARNEGIE STATUE

DUNFERMLINE, Scotland, June 27.—A statue of Andrew Carnegie was unveiled in Pittencrieff Glen, one of the city parks, today. The park was presented to the municipality in 1903 by Carnegie, together with an endowment of $2,500,000.

A feature of the day's exercises was the singing by a choir of 500 voices accompanied by a band of the anthem, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men."

SALEM ALARMED BY SECOND FIRE IN A HIGH WIND

Blaze Checked After Destroying Two Houses—Rain Causes Suffering.

SALEM, Mass., June 27.—The city became excited for a time tonight when a general alarm was sounded for a fire which was not subdued until it had destroyed two houses and badly damaged a third on the western side of the burned district. A brisk wind blowing over the glowing embers of Thursday's conflagration carried the sparks high and far over the undamaged portion of the residential quarters.

Militiamen dropped their police duties and turned fire fighters, carrying hose up ladders and assisting the regular firemen in other ways. Prompt action of the fire department and the militia made it certain within an hour after the fire was discovered that there would be no further spread.

While the cause of the blaze was not definitely decided it was believed to have started from a spark from the still glowing embers of Thursday's fire.

Shortly before 10 o'clock a heavy drizzle of rain set in. From the point of view of the fire fighters this was desirable, but it promised much distress in the tent colonies. The relief committee at once began preparations to provide adequate shelter.

The state police, under deputy George C. Neal, began today with the city officials an investigation of reports from several sources that a number of the smaller fires which contributed to the destruction of one-half of Salem during Thursday's conflagration were of incendiary origin.

An effort was made also to determine the cause of the main fire, which started in the Korn Leather Works.

While the police were looking into the cause of the fires, the State and the city relief committees, working together, perfecter their organization. Edmund Billings, collector of the port of Boston, who is a member of the State committee, tonight declared that nearly $1,000,000 would be needed for adequate relief.

This was pay day for hundreds of mill operatives who lost both homes and employment by the fire. Some of the firms were unable to make payments, as their records were buried under smoking ruins. Others not only paid the wages due but added extra money for the married men.

BUTTE MERCHANTS PUT GUARDS IN STORES

"Gunmen" Who Go to Anaconda Seeking Moyer Do Not Find Him There.

The city outwardly was quiet today as it has been since the last riot of Tuesday night. The new independent union of miners, formed in opposition to the Western Federation, reported it had signed up 2239 members of the 9000 metal miners here.

Edward Duncan, son of the Mayor, testified at the inquest over Ernest J. Noy, that while he was in the hall the night Noy was killed, President Moyer was armed, as were almost all other men in the room. Duncan quoted Moyer as saying:

"A person would be a fool to come to this meeting without being armed."

Many witnesses testified reluctantly. All who entered the Coroner's office were searched for weapons. None were found.

On good authority it was stated seven "gunmen" of Butte went to Anaconda last night to kill President Moyer, who did not go to Anaconda, as he had announced he would.

SMOKER'S PIPE EXPLODES

Cartridges Had Become Mixed With Tobacco

Louis Adam of Belleville will in the future be more careful when he fills his pipe with tobacco. Adam resides on Mascoutah avenue and when his wife, Mrs. Mary Adam, and the children retired he concluded to enjoy a quiet smoke. He filled his pipe and settled back in his easy chair on the front porch.

He touched a match to the tobacco and the smoke began curling up. Then suddenly there was an explosion. A policeman heard the report and hastened by thinking someone had taken a shot at burglars. He found Adam much frightened and only the stem of the pipe in his mouth.

It developed that several cartridges filled with bird shot had gotten mixed with the tobacco and Adam got one in his pipe. Not a single shot struck the smoker.

Two Brothers Arrive From Keokuk After Close Call.

George McRae, 19 years old, and his brother, Don McRae, 21, of 5655 Vernon avenue, left Keokuk last Monday in a rowboat, on their way to St. Louis, arriving here Friday evening, having traveled more than 200 miles. They slept two nights in the boat.

At Quincy, Ill., they had a narrow escape from death, running into a bridge boom, which one of them caught with an anchor. After holding on to the boom for a long time they succeeded in attracting the attention of a night watchman, who came to their rescue.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—President Wilson has approved the sentence of dismissal imposed on Maj. Benjamin M. Koehler of the Coast Artillery Corps, by a courtmartial.

Koehler was in command at Fort Terry, Plum Island, New York, when sensational charges were brought against him and the trial was held behind closed doors.

TEN MEN INDICTED, ALLEGED TO HAVE RUN HANDBOOKS

"Cooney" and "Chick" Heib, Tom Kearney and J. J. Foster Among Those Accused.

Ten alleged handbook operators were indicted by the June grand jury yesterday as the first result of an investigation into gambling conditions in St. Louis which was begun last Tuesday, after complaints had been made that certain police officers had received protection money from big gamblers.

Circuit Attorney Harvey believes the indictment of the handbook makers will lead to disclosures as to what police officers, if any, are being paid by gamblers for protection.

One report under official investigation is that a member of the Police Department makes handbook bets in St. Louis every day and always wins. Another is that a member of the department has an interest in a line of taxicabs which is used liberally by the gambling fraternity.

Ten Men Are Indicted.

The men indicted yesterday are: Joseph J. Foster of 4216 Washington boulevard, proprietor of a book store at [illegible] Washington avenue, where ten men were arrested in a raid June 15, six counts; Harry Brockmiller, 4101 Delmar boulevard, two counts; Clayton R. Woods, 3911A Labadie avenue, two counts; Conrad P. Heib, alias "Cooney" Heib, [illegible] Hotel, president of the Empress Amusement Co., operating a theater at [illegible] Olive street, two counts; William [illegible] of 3904 Ashland avenue, two counts; "Chick" Heib of 3104 Cass avenue, two counts; Frank Cummings, one count; James Cummings, one count; Tom M. Kearney, 407 Walnut street, two counts; Louis Rosenthal, 2207 North Broadway.

According to Circuit Attorney Harvey a handbook was operated at Foster's book store and Harry Brockmiller and Clayton R. Woods were associated with Foster in conducting it; Louis Rosenthal's book was at his billiard hall, 2207 North Broadway; the Heibs' had theirs at 620 St. Charles street; Tom Kearney's book was at 407 Walnut street and Frank and James Cummings took bets in a cigar store.

After Deputy Sheriff Rice had telephoned to as many of the indicted men as he could reach and told them they had been indicted, all of them except James Cummings went to the office of Circuit Clerk Echterhoff and gave bond.

Professional Bondsmen on Hand.

Professional bondsmen were close at hand to assure the release of the indicted men. John P. Collins, liveryman and professional bondsman, who is a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Twelfth District, signed Kearney's bond.

Ferd. Warner and John P. Boy, Democratic politicians, qualified as sureties for Rosenthal. The other bonds were all signed by Arthur Lancaster, professional bondsman.

The present grand jury plans to hold sessions until Tuesday and then adjourn until September, when the gambling investigation will be resumed.

Circuit Attorney Harvey expects that some of the handbook men will disclose inside conditions and the relations alleged to have been established between gamblers and members of the Police Department in St. Louis. He said most of the information on which the indictments rest was obtained from men who were taken in the raid on Foster's place June 15, but that he has other sources of information.

Within 15 minutes after the indictments were returned yesterday Police Commissioner John J. Sheahan and Justice of the Peace James P. [illegible] hastened to the office of Assistant Circuit Attorney Bishop and after conversing with him they said they would see Circuit Attorney Harvey later. They would not discuss the reason for their visit.

Men Taken in Raid Notified.

The principal witnesses examined by the grand jury since the investigation began Tuesday were those arrested in the raid of Foster's book store. The names and addresses given by them when they were arrested were: [illegible] Bergen, 4005 Olive street; George [illegible], Broadway Buffet; William Roberts, [illegible] Park avenue; William H. Thomas, [illegible] South Sixth street; John Norton, [illegible]ner place; Charles R. Woods, [illegible] Hotel; Harry Anderson, [illegible] street; Tom Woods, 410 Market street; Charles Spreen, 2005 North Broadway, and Harry C. Brockmiller, [illegible] avenue.

Detective Peter Wells, head of the gambling squad, and his assistants, Detectives Murphy and Breen, were kept waiting outside the grand jury room each day, but were not called in. Charles Enyart, a saloonkeeper at Eighth and Market street, also was kept waiting in the ante-room.

LEMP BACK FROM JAPAN WITH A NEW MUSTACHE

Charles A. Lemp, first vice-president of the William J. Lemp Brewing Co., has returned from a voyage to Japan and Hawaii. When he departed he was smooth shaven, but he brought back a mustache and goatee.

Lemp was accompanied by Frederick Ewing. They spent seven weeks in Japan and made a six-day stop at Honolulu. He says he was struck by the cleanliness of the Japanese and the quiet masterly way in which Japanese mothers control their children without ever spanking them.

Lemp goes abroad annually and hopes in time to visit every country in the world.

Eighth and Locust streets, 12:15 to 1:15 p. m. Speakers—H. S. Caulfield and Selden P. Spencer.

The new city charter election will be held Tuesday.

The polls will be opened in each of the 474 voting precincts at 6 a. m. and will close at 7 p. m.

The voters will have 13 hours in which to go to the polls and cast their ballots. As but a single word will have to be marked from the ballot, less than one minute will be required for voting.

Reports received at the headquarters of the New Charter Campaign Committee yesterday indicated that thousands of voters have postponed their vacations so that they could exercise the privilege of casting a vote in favor of the new charter.

The campaign for the adoption of the charter will be conducted vigorously to the last moment tomorrow night.

Several speeches will be delivered in different sections of the city this afternoon. Special arrangements have been made for the meeting tomorrow at Eighth and Locust streets. Former Judge Henry S. Caulfield and former Judge Selden P. Spencer will both be at the meeting to answer any question that may be asked.

Meetings Held Last Night.

Charter meetings were held last night in many sections of the city. Mayor Kiel, Charles H. Daues and Charles Hertenstein, union labor representative on the board of Freeholders, spoke before the Twenty-seventh Ward Republican League Club at a meeting at [illegible] Florissant avenue.

The Fifth Ward Democratic Club had a big meeting in the streets at High and Morgan streets, at which Hertenstein, Selden P. Spencer and J. B. Vashon spoke.

Mayor Kiel, in an address before about 450 persons at a "charter lawn party" given under the auspices of the Twenty-seventh Ward Republican League Club at the residence of Otto G. Koerning, 6473 Florissant avenue, vigorously urged the adoption of the new city charter.

The present charter, he pointed out, was drawn up 38 years ago, before the advent of electric light and telephone; before commerce and industry had wrought vast changes in the city's mechanism and life. The growth of St. Louis, he said, demanded a new charter and if the present one were not adopted St. Louis would decline from the fourth city of the country to the sixth.

To Save City's Reputation.

"For years St. Louis has been looked upon from the outside as an old fogy city," he said. "We can't afford to let such a reputation go forth longer. All the leading cities of the land, to meet conditions wrought by progress, have adopted new charters, most of them selecting the single house legislative body on the principle of bringing the administration into the hands of as few men as possible who must of necessity be the mediums of the people."

He explained that under the new charter the initiative, referendum and recall offered full protection; that if those in office did not fulfill their duties, the way would be open for quick impeachment and the selection of competent officials. He said he had worked arduously in support of the new charter, not because of personal interest, but because he believed it would bring a new era of progress and prosperity to St. Louis.

His remarks were indorsed by Charles Hertenstein of the Board of Freeholders, John Schmoll, chairman of the Republican City Committee, and William H. J. Harris. Moving pictures and music by an orchestra were interspersed during the program.

The parks and playgrounds meetings, at three different parks, were well attended, and much interest was shown by the audiences in the explanations of the new charter by the speakers.

The first meeting was held in Hyde Park, Blair avenue and Salisbury street, at 7:30 p. m.; the second in the Fairgrounds playground at 8:15 p. m. and the third in O'Fallon Park at 9 p. m.

The battery of parks and playgrounds speakers toured the street in decorated automobiles and was accompanied by a band of singers and a bugler. A few minutes after the bugle call was heard in each park a crowd of people assembled and the speeches were delivered.

Charter Advocates Expect Victory.

Such widespread interest has been aroused in the new charter during the campaign that the leaders of the charter movement are confident that the charter will be adopted at Tuesday's election by a substantial majority.

The anti-charter campaigners have stopped at nothing to try to create sentiment against the charter. They have distributed literature attacking the Board of Freeholders, the newspapers and the charter advocates.

Much of the literature circulated has been of an anonymous character, and the Charter Campaign Committee is of the opinion that it has not been effective.

The Campaign Committee yesterday distributed among Chairmen Fitzsimmons of the Democratic City Committee, Schmoll of the Republican Committee and Gibson of the Progressive Committee blank commissions for challengers and watchers.

As the Anti-charter Campaign Committee is not a political organization, it has no power to appoint challengers and watchers.

The chairman of the three committees have promised to issue the commissions, so that the challengers and watchers may occupy places inside of the polls.

28th Ward Club Indorses It.

The proposed new city charter was unanimously indorsed and its adoption urged at a meeting of the Twenty-eighth Ward Republican Club in the Hamilton Hotel last night.

Police Judge Karl Kimmel, Joseph B. Thomas, Linn Brokaw and Wilbur B. Jones spoke.

Concrete Example of Injustice New Charter Will End

KING'S highway boulevard, extending from North St. Louis to South St. Louis, which was constructed by a bond issue against the property of all of St. Louis, will be completed within a short time.

Real estate men offering property for sale on this boulevard in recent advertisements said:

"Every foot of property along this magnificent thoroughfare will advance rapidly in value."

The owners of the property will derive the principal benefits from the construction of the boulevard, but all of the people of the city, under the old charter, will have to pay their share of its cost.

Under the proposed new charter only the property directly benefited will have to pay the cost of such improvements. The theory of the framers of the charter was that the people who derived the benefits from such improvements should pay the cost, and that those people who derive no direct benefits should not be taxed.

The proposed new charter will remove the injustice of the burden of district improvements. Under the same system as provided in the new charter Kansas City has constructed the most magnificent boulevard system in the United States and the property owners who benefitted from the improvements were only too glad to pay the cost. The boulevards increased the value of their property greatly in excess of the cost of the improvement.

95 CITY BODIES INDORSE CHARTER

The proposed new City Charter has been indorsed by 95 different business, civic, labor, political, district and improvements organizations.

Nearly every organization in St. Louis has not only strongly approved the charter, but has pledged its members to work for its adoption at the special election to be held Tuesday. The organizations that are fighting the Charter are limited to a few labor unions controlled by Socialists, and some other organizations without influence.

Here are the organizations that have indorsed the charter:

SOME DEMOCRATS ARE OPPOSING NEW CHARTER

Members of the Citizens' New Charter Campaign Committee expect that several members of the Democratic City Committee, which as an organization strongly indorsed the new charter and pledged its members to work for its adoption at Tuesday's election, will knife the charter and do everything they can to defeat it.

Several members of the committee are known to be opposed to the charter, although they did not oppose its indorsement by the organization as a body.

Among the members opposed to the charter are: Andrew W. Sheridan of the First Ward, John T. Soy of the Second Ward, John P. During of the Nineteenth Ward and City Treasurer Henry C. Menne.

It was announced at the meeting of the city committee last Tuesday that only two members voted against indorsement, and that after 26 other members had voted for indorsement, all the members of the committee would work actively for the passage of the charter.

Sheridan, who is a candidate for Recorder of Deeds, said yesterday that he was going to vote against the charter, but that he was not going to do any work against it. He said he was against the charter because Jesse McDonald and Thomas J. Rowe, members of the Board of Freeholders, did not sign it.

DRYEST JUNE RECORDED IN 43 YEARS IN ST. LOUIS

Bureau Shows Rainfall Here Since March 31 Is 12 Inches Below Normal Average.

MERCURY RISES TO 101

June this year has been the dryest in the history of the St. Louis Weather Bureau, which has been keeping an official record of rainfall for 43 years.

Since May 25 last the total rainfall in St. Louis has been only 23 one-hundredths of an inch and in June, thus far, the rainfall has been only 8 one-hundredths of an inch. The average St. Louis rainfall in June for 43 years has been 6.37 inches.

May was more than twice as wet as June, and yet it did not come near the month's average. On May 4 and 5 there was a fall of one-half inch. The rain of May 28, which looked like a cloud-burst to thousands assembled to witness the Friday night performances of the St. Louis Pageant and Masque was only 9 hundredths of an inch.

There was a fall of three-hundredths of an inch May 29, making the month's total 62-hundredths of an inch.

Temperature Reaches 101.

April played its part in causing the spring and early summer of 1914 to break all records for dryness. The rainfall in that month was one inch and 92-hundredths, as against a 43-year April average of 3.88 inches. Since March 31 the total rainfall in St. Louis has been only 2.62 inches. This is nearly 12 inches below the normal average for the three months.

June so far also has come within one degree of producing the highest St. Louis temperature ever recorded in the month. At 2:45 p. m. Friday the official Weather Bureau thermometer registered 101 degrees.

Another Unusual Record.

The hottest June day in the history of the Weather Bureau was June 29, 1901, when the temperature reached 102 degrees. In the last 43 years only four Junes have been as hot as the present one. Last year's highest June temperature was 99 degrees, on the 20th, and last year's hottest day was July 18, with a maximum temperature of 102.

Another record established by the present month was a period of three consecutive days in which the temperature never fell below 80 degrees at any hour of the day or night. These days were Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of the week just closed.

Unusual Conditions Produced.

St. Louis' longest early summer hot spell also has produced other unusual conditions. On June 20 early risers were comfortably cool in a 6 a. m. temperature of 58 degrees. When they started for their homes at 6 a. m. they were sweltering in a temperature of 91 degrees. There have been days when it was only moderately warm until sundown and then uncomfortably hot through the night, with temperatures above the 80 degree mark at 3 a. m.

The 6 a. m. temperature on June 18 was 68 degrees and at 8 p. m. the official thermometer registered 84 degrees. The next day started with a 6 a. m. temperature of 70 degrees. At 1 p. m. it was 95 degrees, and then there was a sudden drop which carried the temperature down to 74 degrees at 8 p. m.

Causes of the Drouth.

Montrose W. Hayes, the St. Louis weather forecaster, last night told a Post-Dispatch reporter that three causes could be assigned for the abnormally dry and hot spring and summer here. One of these is an unusually extensive area of high barometer pressure in the Southern States. The downward pressure of the upper air has caused the heat in the lower strata to spread northward and over a large area, just as pie crust dough on the kitchen table spreads farther as more pressure is applied to the rolling pin.

Another reason, he said, is that there is an almost total lack of the usual low pressure areas in the Southwest, which are always relied on to cause summer rains in St. Louis. The air in the southwest at this season is usually under light pressure and rain clouds from the gulf easily pass through it.

This year the air of the southwest, under high pressure, is like a wall about the Mississippi Valley and the rain clouds cannot penetrate it.

A third reason for the drouth, Hayes said, is that low pressure areas moving toward the Mississippi Valley from Montana, the Dakotas and Nebraska have similarly found it impossible to break through the high pressure barrier here and have been diverted to the northeast and the lake region.

7 DIE FROM HEAT IN ST. LOUIS AND EAST ST. LOUIS

Twenty Cases of Prostration Also Are Reported—One Man Succumbs in Hotel.

Seven deaths from heat were reported yesterday in St. Louis and East St. Louis.

Louis Maas, a laborer, 35 years old, fell unconscious while working in a sewer on Bingham avenue at 4 p. m. and died a few minutes later in a store at 4118 Gravois avenue. He lived in an Italian settlement on the Manchester car line.

Patrick Joyce, 60, a laborer, 2201 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, died at 2 p. m. at the Henrietta Hospital. He was found unconscious in his bed in the morning.

Fred M. Possell, 62, a salesman, of Buffalo, N. Y., was found dead in the morning in his room on the sixth floor of the American Hotel. He was an agent of a lumber firm in Quincy, Ill.

Charles W. Kempert, a Street Department inspector, fell dead at his home, 4118 Pleasant street, at 2 a. m., as he started to the kitchen to get a drink of water. He was 44 years old.

Michael Kucan, 38, a laborer, was found dead at 7 a. m. in his room at 2213A Franklin avenue. He went home ill the night before.

The body of John O'Brien, 56, a laborer, was found at 8 a. m. in his room at 811 Walnut street.

Henry Steinmeyer, 58 years old, a porter, fell unconscious on Florissant avenue yesterday afternoon, and died at 9 p. m. at the city hospital. He lived at 2246 Harris avenue.

More than 20 cases of heat prostration, besides those resulting fatally, were reported in St. Louis yesterday.

12,667 GALL STONES REMOVED AT ONE TIME

RED WING, Minn., June 27.—What is believed to be a new surgical record for the removal of gall stones in one operation was established at St. John's Hospital here today when three physicians of the hospital staff removed 12,667 gall stones from Henry Hadler of Zumbrota township.

Surgeons say that the stones measured all the way from the size of a pin head to a hazelnut and one entire afternoon was spent in counting them. According to medical journals the best previous American record was near 8000 gall stones removed.

The recovery of the patient is anticipated.

ESCAPING NEGRO IS SHOT BY PATROLMAN

Arrested on Suspicion, Breaks Away and Is Hit in Leg

Robert (Bud) Madden, a negro, was shot in the leg while fleeing from two policemen near Jefferson avenue and Market street at 10 o'clock last night.

Patrolmen Burke and Bentley had arrested Madden on suspicion that he knew something of a recent robbery. When they approached a patrol box he broke away from them and ran. They pursued him. After each policeman had fired a shot he fell. He was taken to the City Hospital.

WIND AND SPARKS CAUSE SIX FIRES; OLD COUPLE SAVED

Policemen and Neighbor Rescue Man and Wife Sleeping in Home.

High wind in and about St. Louis yesterday afternoon was the cause of three fires when locomotive sparks were blown into combustible structures.

The Chicago & Alton Hotel at Venice, Ill., close to the eastern approach of the McKinley Bridge, caught fire at 1:30 p. m. from a locomotive spark, it is believed, and was destroyed. The Hotel was a two-and one-half story frame structure of 22 rooms. The strong wind blew the flames against the McKinley system feed wires in front of the hotel, snapping them and tying up interurban trains for half an hour.

At 4:15 p. m. a locomotive spark is believed to have ignited the board roadbed of the Fourteenth street viaduct over the terminal yards in Mill Creek Valley, tying up car traffic. At the same time, and probably from the same cause, a pile of old ties in the railroad yards near the viaduct caught fire. The wheat crops, hay sheds and farm machinery of Fred Kroeger and Henry Feungeld, a mile north of Fenton, St. Louis County, were destroyed by fire late in the afternoon when a spark from a threshing machine was blown into a hay stack.

Old Couple Rescued.

Ernest Withop, an invalid, 80 years old, and his wife, 75 years old, were rescued as they slept in the ir burning home, 3445 Kosciusko street, at 5:30 p. m., yesterday, by Patrolman Ernest Minden and C. J. Parker of 3740 Cote Brilliante street, who had to break in a door to reach them.

The fire started in a shed at the rear of the home of Charles Rethmeyer, 3440 Kosciusko street, and the high wind spread the flames in a few minutes to the two homes and the dairy barn of Henry Hanneklau, 3440 De Kalb street, where 18 cows and horses were stabled. After placing the Withops in the care of neighbors, Patrolman Minden, assisted by several passersby, barely had time to lead the cattle and horses from the burning stable barn.

It was believed the fire started from a locomotive spark from the Iron Mountain tracks, about 150 feet east of the Rethemeyer shed.

Fire at Coffin Factory.

Fire damaged the stock in the lumber yards of the St. Louis Coffin Co. at 1830 Chouteau avenue, about $500, at 5:45 p. m. yesterday. Sparks ignited sheds belonging to Henry Randolph and O. W. Thie at 1814 and 1830 Papin street, damaging them to the extent of $200 each.

An alarm was sent in from 1431 Papin street, but before the department could respond a four-family flat belonging to Mrs. Ann Momson was damaged about $400. It is believed the fire originated in a defective flue.

Olive Car Injures Man, 60.

While crossing the street in front of 5642 Delmar boulevard, Saturday afternoon, Thomas Scanlin, 60 years old, of the Home Hotel, Sixth street and Franklin avenue, was struck by a westbound Olive car. He was taken to the city hospital, badly bruised.

Typhoid Epidemic in Jamaica.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—A typhoid epidemic has broken out at Kingston, Jamaica, according to State Department advices from Vice Consul Bundy. It was stated travelers were in danger and Americans were warned.

3 NEGRO BANDITS KILL 2; WOUND 1 AND STEAL $2200

Lumber Company's Clerks Slain and Payroll Cash Taken; Posse After Highwaymen.

LAUREL, Miss., June 27.—Hundreds of men tonight are searching the country near Stevens, Miss., 20 miles south of here for three negro highwaymen who late today shot and killed two employes of the Gilchrist-Fordney Lumber Co., seriously wounded a third and escaped with the company's weekly payroll of $2200.

Those killed were J. V. Simmons and Rees Fitzpatrick, clerks in the office of the lumber company. Wyatt Robinson, another clerk was wounded by a bullet that shattered his shoulder.

The holdup occurred just outside Stevens station, where the three clerks boarded a railroad motor car for the company's logging camp, six miles away. They had gone but a short distance when they came on an obstruction on the track. When the men alighted the negroes opened fire, killing Fitzpatrick instantly, Simmons, fatally wounded, died a short while afterward. Robinson fell wounded. The negroes took the money and escaped.

Badly wounded, Robinson made his way back to Stevens and gave the alarm, a posse was quickly formed and a special train was sent from here with a large party to join in the hunt. The highwayman's victims were prominent young men of this place.

SLAYER SHOT TO DEATH

Unidentified Italian Kills Man and Wounds Others.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—An unidentified Italian was shot and killed at Smithfield, near here, today, after he had killed one of his countrymen, perhaps fatally wounded another man, and less seriously injured a number of other persons.

Armed with a hatchet the man suddenly appeared at the house of an Italian coke worker and killed him before he could make an outcry. Dashing down the street he attacked a number of pedestrians who managed to escape. Martin Hope was standing in the doorway at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Omer Sutton, when the man struck him down and then attacked Mrs. Sutton. L. V. Morgan, from his house across the street, saw the attack and killed the Italian. He was a stranger in Smithfield.

U. S. MINISTER'S ALBANIA CHARGES STARTLE EUROPE

Bryan Doubts Report That Envoy to Greece Made Statement Telling of Anarchy and Asking Powers to Create Neutral State of Kingdom.

SAID TO HAVE CALLED KING SMALL POTATO

Story From Athens Says Williams Alleges That What Powers Are Now Doing in Prince of Wied's Land Is "Horrible Crime."

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—George Fred Williams, American Minister to Greece, is reported to have condemned in startling terms the present Government of Albania and thus has set all Europe talking.

The State Department has not received any official confirmation of this and Secretary Bryan does not credit the story, which comes from Athens.

Minister Williams has been to Albania. Some time ago he got the State Department's permission to visit that country to investigate the condition of certain American citizens residing there. No report of this visit has been made.

Alleged to Have Called It Crime.

Athens dispatches say Williams sent to the newspapers there a story of his inquiry, in which he is quoted as saying that he considers conditions in Albania anarchical and the present regime impracticable because of antagonism. It is said that he has appealed to the powers to organize a neutral state with an essentially local government.

What the powers are now doing in Albania Williams is reported to have called "A horrible crime."

The Prince of Weid, Williams says, according to the Athens story, is a pretty small potato.

"Found Six Silent Warships."

"My first effort was to find the Albanian Government. I found none, except six warships, and they were silent. Five ostensible governments were in sight. First, the six great powers, with all the power; second, the commission, with control of the civil administration and finance; third, the Dutch gendarmerie with control of the military; fourth, the Prince, without any power remaining; fifth, the Ministry, with no powers. Each of these governments was fighting with every other save the first, which apparently is so discordant within itself that it had abandoned all the rest to their fate."

It is alleged that the report of Minister Williams caused a sensation in Athens. A rumor that he had offered to be mediator for America was laughed at here, but it is believed now that there is something in the report from Athens.

Vienna Police Order Enlisting of Troops for Albania to Stop.

VIENNA, June 27.—The police at 2 o'clock this afternoon notified the Sculptor Burschner that the enlisting of volunteers for Albania must stop immediately.

An appeal to the Viennese in behalf of Prince William of Albania appeared in a newspaper yesterday and since then more than 5000 have volunteered, 2000 being enlisted.

No pay was offered the volunteers, only traveling expenses, arms, uniforms and subsistence being promised. Naturally a large majority of those who presented themselves were from the unemployed, but still all professions and all classes were represented, especially university students. There are American doctors in the list.

13 MEN LEAP FROM FIRE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 27.—Fire in J. R. Thomas Sons' wholesale grocery building late today caused a loss of $100,000.

The fire was caused by an explosion. Thirteen men leaped from windows. A. D. Thomas, member of the firm; George Brittan, Walter Duncan and Jacob Landgrave, employes, were injured.

Carranza Aid Charges Angeles Is Huerta Agent

and, consequently, he ordered the immediate discharge of Angeles from the position he held.

"Attempts have been made to patch up the break and to induce Villa to recede from his attitude. Nothing has been obtained until Villa realized that most of the revolutionary leaders had assured their loyalty to Carranza and that the real purpose of Angeles was to use him as a tool for his ambition to become provisional President of Mexico. Then Angelos' purpose became vain.

Discussion Postponed.

"In view of this revelation, Villa has decidedly agreed to postpone the discussion of his grievances until the revolution has triumphed. Carranza has also considered that the campaign against Huerta must be the chief purpose and that it would be impolitic to spend time in an attempt to subdue Villa. The attitude of Villa fostered on the inside by Angeles, has been encouraged on the outside by certain foreign elements who had time to impress upon the American people and government that Villa is the chief factor in the Constitutionalist revolution.

"The principal foreign element doing this work in favor of Villa are two intimate friends of Mr. Lazaro de la Garza, financial agent of Villa. One of them is a fellow of many doubtful connections in the United States and he claims to have in Washington people to help him in official circles. The other one is an American who has posed during several months as a confidential agent of the State Department for the revolution, but who as a matter of fact has only been a political attache and advisor of Villa in international matters. The attitude of this man, who is an intimate friend of De la Garza, has led Villa and Angeles to believe that they could count upon the sympathy and the support of the Washington Government, which to a great extent contributed to encouraging the insubordination that existed in the interior.

"Carranza is the first chief of the Constitutionalist army, according to the plan of Guadalupe, which is the law under which the revolution is carried on. This leadership was given to Carranza by all the military leaders who supported the revolution and by all the subservient followers who have ratified this leadership when they formed the revolutionary movement. This leadership cannot be taken from Mr. Carranza unless by agreement of the majority of the military leaders.

"The military forces composing the Constitutionalist army are not Villa's forces, as is sometimes understood, and one wonders how much of the army is outside of Villa's forces.

"The leaders acting under Villa and who are supposed to back him are the following: Eugenio Augirre Banavides, Tomas Urbina, Jose Rodriguez, Manuel Garcia, Severiano Ceniceros, Orestes Pereyra, Martiniana Servin and Mateb Almanza.

"The number of soldiers composing Villa's troops is about 12,000. Outside of Villa's division, Gen. Angeles has his own body of troops, composed of 1500 Federal soldiers and officials who have surrendered or deserted to the Constitutionalists and who are bound to increase in number as Angeles advances.

"The forces which are outside of Villa's and Angeles' divisions and who have expressly manifested their adherence to Carranza are:

"On the Pacific slope under orders of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, the following: Salvador Alvarado, Manuel Dieguez, Lucio d'Lanco, Ramon F. Iturbe, Manuel Carrasco, Rafael Buelna, Benjamin Hill and Filipe Riveros.

Men of High Standard.

"These leaders are all of them of a much higher standard morally and in military talent than any of the Villa generals. They have a total force conservatively estimated at about 22,000 men.

"On the East Side, under the orders of Gen. Pablo Gonzales, are: Antonio I. Villareal, E. Mungula, Teodoro Elisondo, Cesaro Castro, Francisco Coss, Envesto Santos Coy, Jesus Davilla Sanches, Andres Saucedoa, Euallo, Gutierrez, Luis Gutierrez, Garrea Torres, Luis Caballeo and Jesus Carranza.

"These leaders together have more than 20,000 men.

"In the center of the country there is Eanfilo Natera, Triana, Garrillo and some others composing an army of nearly 10,000 soldiers. There are several other leaders in the central and southern parts of Mexico, who have no connection whatever with Villa, but who recognize Carranza as their leader. They are Candido Aguilar, Augustin Millan, Gertrudis Sanchez, Antonio Portas, Luviano, etc.

"The number of soldiers under these leaders is not estimated in order to prevent exaggeration and keep within conservative limits. Such is the condition of the Constitutionalist forces."

Mr. Breceda and Mr. Cabrera after the publication of this statement said they had received no instructions from Gen. Carranza to accept the invitation to confer informally with the delegates at the peace conference regarding the internal affairs of Mexico. Both, however, intimated there was a probability of such a conference and that it might occur next week.

Await Liberal Leader.

They were awaiting the belated arrival in Washington of Fernando Iglesias Calderon, leader of the Mexican Liberal party and a friend of Gen. Carranza, who is expected tomorrow.

During the day Mr. Zubaran, chief of the Constitutionalist agents here, was in communication with Gen. Carranza at Monterey. Several messages were received from Carranza, the last one asking for some further information with reference to the proposed informal conference.

In view of these messages, John R. Silliman, the American Vice-Consul at Saltillo, was called into conference by the Carranza agents here and it was intimated that Mr. Silliman might go back to Saltillo to confer with Carranza. Silliman saw Mr. Breceda late in the day, but would not discuss his mission. He said, however, he had known Breceda at Saltillo when Gen. Carranza was Governor of the State.

One of the Constitutionalist representatives tonight said he believed the proposed informal conference between their agents and those of Gen. Huerta and the United States regarding provisional government plans, would begin next week. He also said that Buffalo would be the scene of the conference. Administration officials also expressed confidence that the informal conference would be held.

News Embargo Prevents Real Knowledge of Villa's Movements.

EL PASO, Tex., June 27.—A news embargo was established today. While predictions were made that Gen. Villa had started his troops toward Aguas Calientes, the next probable point of attack, this was not verified in any particular by official or press dispatches. A private telegram from Villa was received from Zacatecas under date of today.

Adrian Aguirre Benavides, a member of the House of Deputies under the Madero administration, today was refused permission by Gen. Carranza to visit Tampico to engage in some business connected with oil concessions on the east coast. The incident occasioned much speculation here. Benavides was one of Villa's advisers during the time William S. Benton and Gustav Bauch met their deaths at Juarez, causing diplomatic representations to Carranza from England and the United States. He since has held court positions under Villa at Juarez.

1000 Soldiers Advance on San Luis Potosi.

TAMPICO, Mexico, June 26 (via Laredo, Tex., June 27.)—Thirty-one cars with upward of 1000 men, ammunition and supplies, began the advance on San Luis Potosi today after Gen. Jesus Carranza returned from a reconnaisance and reported favorable traveling conditions. Four sources are now concentrating forces against San Luis Potosi.

Rebel Officer Hangs 50 Federals, Said Trees Were Too Bare.

NACO, Ariz., June 27.—The recent capture of the village of Santiago de Esquinlas in the territory of Tepic, by a regiment of Constitutionalist troops, resulted in the hanging of 50 Federal soldiers and sympathizers, according to reports which reached Naco today.

The executions were said to have been a whim of the Colonel in command, quoted as having said the trees in the plaza "looked too bare."

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—The Mexican Government today gave permission for John R. Silliman, vice-consul at Saltillo, to return to his post. This was in response to a request made by the Brazilian minister at the instance of the State Department at Washington.

When Silliman left Mexico, the Brazilian minister promised that he would not return without permission of the Mexican Government. Last April he was arrested at Saltillo, held several weeks and finally was permitted to return to the United States. It is expected that he will now proceed to Saltillo by way of Laredo and Monterey.

GIRL HURT ON FIRST RIDE ON MOTORCYCLE

Elsie Bridges Collides With Another and Both Victims Are Found Unconscious.

Miss Elsie Bridges, 20 years old, of 4063 Olive street, taking her first ride on a motor cycle, collided head on at 10 o'clock last night with a motor cycle ridden by Walter E. Nichols of 3700A Potomac street, at the intersection of the Olive and Stoede roads, St. Louis County.

Both were struck unconscious, and a farmer, Leo Amen, found them lying in the road. He got a lantern and stopped the first automobile which passed, which took them to the office of Dr. G. E. Eggers in Clayton, five miles away. Miss Bridges escaped with bruises, but Nichols suffered a concussion of the brain. He was sent to his home in an automobile.

CAR PASSENGERS AID IN PICKPOCKET CHASE

With Police They Capture Pair Suspected of Robbing Man on Trolley.

Two men suspected of being pickpockets were chased and captured by street car passengers and policemen after they had jumped from a Grand car at Grand and Cass avenues at 3:15 p. m. yesterday.

At the Dayton Street Police Station they said they were Harry Hardesty, 24 years old, of 4221 North Grand avenue and Frank Mitchell, 32 years old. Mitchell said he had no home.

The men jumped from the car when Julius Siemsku of 7952 Overbeck avenue cried out that his pocket had been picked. He told the police a purse containing $52 was missing from his pocket.

Siemsku and several other passengers pursued the fleeing men. Mitchell was captured at Cottage and Spring avenues by Policeman Donahue.

Hardesty jumped into an automobile being driven by C. Sudbeck of 2706 North Fourteenth street. After riding two blocks he leaped from the machine and sought refuge in a chicken house in the rear of James Taylor's residence at 3632 Cote Brilliante avenue where he was captured by two policemen.

HARMON SHADES GRINER IN FINAL PIRATE BATTLE

CORSAIRS MURDER BALL

Four Triples and Two Doubles Included in Grist of 11 Hits Off Griner.

PITTSBURG, June 27.—The Pirates woke up today and sent the Cardinals home with only one victory out of the four games played. Today's score was 4 to 2 in favor of the home team.

Griner was on the mound for the Huggins crowd, and did not put up such a classy article of pitching as Doak, Perritt and Sallee had done in the previous games. He was nicked for 11 hits, two of them doubles and four triples.

A funny mixup in the fifth inning saved him from more scoring than the one run the Pirates secured. Carey led off with a triple and Mowrey followed suit. Viox then hit down the third base line and Mowrey was hit by the ball on seemingly foul territory, but Umpire Eason, who was right at the base of the play, called him out, although Umpire Quigley had called the hit foul. After much wrangling the umpires got together and Quigley changed his decision to suit that of Eason, and declared Mowrey out and Viox safe at first, giving him a hit. Wagner flied to Wilson and Viox, evidently forgetting there was only one out, legged it for home so that Wilson could have made a double play unassisted if he had wanted, but he threw the ball to Jack Miller for the out.

Harmon Strong in Pinch.

Bob Harmon faced his old-time comrades and was strong in the pinches. The only Cardinal to get more than one hit was an ex-Pirate, Jack Miller, and he brought Dolan home with the first run of the game with a fine triple to left center. Jack scored the other run himself in the sixth, when he singled and scored on Butler's double.

All but Robinson of the famous trade of last winter were in the game and their work was closely watched by the fans. The people here are still skeptical as to the wisdom of Clarke in letting Miller go, and the latter's work this week has made Fred Clarke look bad as a trader. Jack's pep and general all-around play is what pleases his friends here, and he has a lot of them at the game whenever the Cardinals appear at Forbes Field. Sallee made Koney look bad yesterday by passing Wagner to take a chance on the big Pole, and he got away with it at that. Today he tried to score Wagner on the squeeze play, but raised a weak little fly to the pitcher, and the Dutchman was easily doubled.

Mowrey Falls Down.

Mowrey's work did not look as good as his understudy, Joe Leonard, the day before yesterday. Mike came up in the second inning with the cushions crowded, but could not hit the ball out of the infield. However, he later came across with a triple with a man on third.

The game only went seven innings, as an agreement had been made to call it at 5 o'clock to allow the Cardinals to catch a train for home. The arbiters did not wait until 5 o'clock, but called off operations 10 minutes before time, right after the Pirates had scored their last two runs.

The boys passed up the shower bath and jumped into their clothes as fast as they could and were driven to the station in time to get the 6 o'clock train for St. Louis, where they play a double-header tomorrow with the Cubs. The latter are going at a great pace, but Manager Huggins expressed himself today as being confident of taking them into camp. The Cardinals' record for the trip is 11 victories and 8 defeats.

There's No Place Like Home.

Their stay in Pittsburg this week has been exciting, to say the least. The papers have accused them of being mixed up in scandals involving the sanctity of a certain man's home, butting in on a fashionable golf club and getting run out, and even flirting with Federal League agents. The boys have nothing to say about these charges, and Huggins says "forget it," but nevertheless they are glad to get back to their home soil.

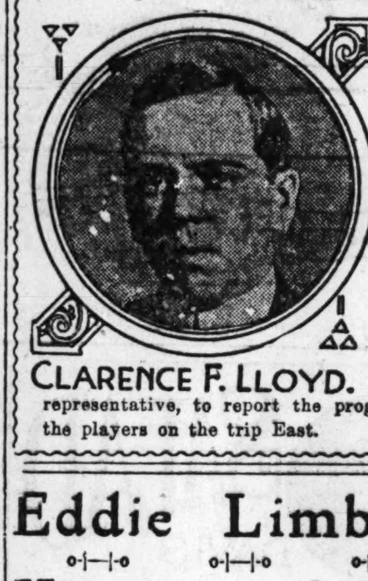
Post-Dispatch Staff Reporter to Make Trip East With the Browns

MANAGER BRANCH RICKEY'S St. Louis American League team is arousing the interest of the country by its remarkable spurt from last place in 1913 to a near-championship position. Starting today, when the club opens in Chicago, at the start of a long campaign away from home, the real test of the club's strength will come.



CLARENCE F. LLOYD.

The team goes to every other city in the circuit, and if it comes back in as good a position as when it left, it will have a great chance to make a pennant bid in midsummer.

That the readers of the Post-Dispatch may be kept in touch with every detail of the invasion, the Post-Dispatch is sending Clarence F. Lloyd, a staff representative, to report the progress of the club and the doings of the players on the trip East.

Eddie Limberg Defeats Kenney for Golf Title

Brilliant Playing in Final Round of Championship Culminates in Victory for Youthful Triple A Star on 38th Green, 1 Up.

EDWARD A. LIMBERG, youthful Triple A golfer, won the championship of the local links yesterday afternoon, as a result of his victory over Christian Kenney, of the Glen Echo Country Club, 1 up in 38 holes, on the Glen Echo links. The match was one of the fiercest fought finals ever played in the city championship, and brought out some brilliant golf.

That the outcome of the match was a surprise is expressing it mildly. Limberg played for the first time in the final of a tournament of any consequence and faced a tried golfer, one who has met and defeated the best. In spite of this and with the odds against him, he outplayed, outgeneraled, and in the end out gamed his opponent.

Kenny Evens Score.

Kenney, who has won a name for himself because of his calmness under fire, held true to his reputation and played a great up-hill match, forcing his opponent to play two extra holes, after he was four down with but eight to go. In the face of defeat, he refused to concede Limberg the match but steadily climbed up until he was one down at the thirty-fourth.

He lost on this green and with but a pair of holes to play was two down. However he proved equal to the occasion and through a wonderful exhibition of golf, annexed the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth, pushing the match to one additional hole, at least. The first over-time cup was completed in equal number of strokes. Limberg won the thirty-eighth and last, turning the match with a beautiful 8-foot putt.

The day was anything but ideal for golfing. A high wind handicapped the play of both players throughout, but in spite of this a brilliant exhibition was given by both men. Until the final nine holes in the afternoon, it was thought that record medal scores would be turned in. However at about this time a miniature gale blew up and both players had to play the wind. Limberg's total for the opening 18 holes, a 75, was three under bogey but only beat Kenney's score by one stroke. At the end of the morning play the match score was 2 up for Limberg.

Kenney Twice Stymied.

The golfers teed up at 10 o'clock. Kenney won the toss and his drive was to the right and in the tall grass. Limberg drove to the edge of the green, overran on his approach, and then holed a 16-foot putt. The best Kenney could do was make the cup in four. Limberg seemed to take confidence at his first win and played good golf for the next few holes. The second and third were halved but Limberg took the fourth. On this hole a great deal of ill-luck must be credited Kenney. He had an easy half at the worst, but luck was against him on the green and he was laid a dead stymie. Limberg took the hole, a four against Kenney's five. The same break occurred on the next hole. Kenney drove a perfect ball while his opponent sliced to the left. However on the green he was laid another stymie giving him a half instead of a well deserved win.

The sixth and seventh were halved, some brilliant golf being shown by both players. Kenney took the eighth when he holed a 20-foot putt from the edge of the green. This was undoubtedly the prettiest shot of the day. Kenney also took the ninth hole when Limberg missed an easy 4-foot putt. Limberg was one up at the turn.

Four Holes Halved.

The first two holes coming in were halved, at four apiece. Kenney was even up for the first time in the match on the twelfth, when he gave another remarkable exhibition of putting. This was short lived as Limberg took the fifteenth and sixteenth and retained a lead of two up. In the morning play Limberg outdrove, out-putted, and outplayed Kenney at every department of play.

Limberg had the honor to open the afternoon play and again made a beautiful drive. He played the first hole to perfection and as the first time made a three and took the hole, against Kenney's four. No. 2 was halved but the youthful Eddie took three, when his opponent went in the grass. Four was halved but Kenney took the long hole, No. 5, and again had Limberg only two up. Limberg took the next hole, while the following three were halved, completing the first nine holes of afternoon play at three up.

The opening hole of the homeward journey was halved, while Kenney took the eleventh after playing a pretty iron shot from the rough.

The twelfth hole was played poorly by both golfers, Limberg taking a six and Kenney a five. The next was halved at four, and Kenney took the following one putting him one down. Fifteen was holed in five strokes by each player. Kenney had a great chance to close the breach at sixteen but failed. He outdrove Limberg and was ten feet from the hole in three. However he took three putts while Limberg went down in five. With but two holes to complete the match and Kenney two down, it seemed as if the match was over. On the drive for the seventeenth hole Limberg went in the rough while Kenney sliced to the lake. Both made pretty shots for the approach but were a trifle short. The putting, however, was excellent and Kenney took the hole, when Limberg missed the cup by inches. The eighteenth was won by Kenney when he ran down a pretty put for a four. Limberg fared poorly on this hole as a good hit ball caroomed in the rough.

Limberg Shows Metal.

The first additional hole was halfed when both players holed eight foot putts. Both drove off well for the cup that proved to be the decisive one and were at the edge of the green on the second shot. Kenney tried to hole out a long putt on his third shot but overran. Limberg played safe and laied up about eight feet from the hole. On his fourth Kenney failed while Limberg holed out and the match was won.

A large gallery followed the match. In the finals of the other matches, the results were as was expected. In the consolation class, Arthur Stickney defeated Sid Overall, five up and four to play.

In the driving contest, Morgan Nugent lead the field with a drive of 325 yards, while C. A. Jobes won the putting contest that has been in progress throughout the week. Summaries:

Class A—J. H. Overall defeated R. S. Kennard, 5 up, 3 to play.

MANY HONORS FOR TRIPLE A STARS

SATURDAY, June 27, was a great day for the St. Louis Amateur Athletic Association. In three branches of sport, golf, tennis and baseball, the members of the Forest Park organization proved their metal.

First and foremost, Eddie Limberg, by defeating Chris Kenney in the final championship round of the city golf tourney at Glen Echo, brought the coveted title to Triple A for the first time in the history of that organization. And furthermore, with L. M. Watts' victory in Class B of this same tournament, the A. A. A. golfers won two of the four class finals into which they had worked their way from the qualifying round, an unprecedented record.

In the opening round of the Central States tennis meet on the Forest Park courts, the old Triple A "tennis trust" came out easy victors.

Finally in a contest of the national pastime, on their own diamond, the A. A. A men defeated the Third National Bank nine, 7 to 6.

TRIPLE A TENNIS 'TRUST' MEMBERS WIN IN TOURNEY

McNIEL WILL NOT PLAY

Young Chicagoan, Expected to Furnish Keen Competition, Fails to Enter.

By Ralph Bryan.

In the twenty-four matches played in the opening round of the annual Central States Tennis Tournament yesterday afternoon on the Triple A courts, the "old guard" of the local tennis world held its own in easy style. Each member of the Jones-Hoerr-Van Reppert-Holthaus combination won his initial match without being pushed to any great extent.

A great deal of disappointment was felt among the followers of the tourney when the news was given out that Kenneth McNeil, the Chicago lad who lost to Drummond Jones in the finals of last year's tournament, would be unable to compete in the present meet on account of illness. The young Chicagoan was counted on to furnish a good bit of competition for the Triple A "tennis trust," and his failure to show will cut out, in a large measure, that element of uncertainty that is the marrow of any good tourney.

His place as a bidder for high honors will most likely be taken, however, by another outsider, W. A. Horrell, from Pasadena, Cal. This dark horse plays a smashing game, and his control of the Lawford he uses is counted upon to create much havoc in the matches.

Wind Upsets Players' Form.

The day was not an ideal one for tennis, due to a strong west wind that swept the courts and made accurate play well nigh an impossibility, and it was on account of this that all but three of the doubles matches were postponed to tomorrow.

Drummond Jones, holder of the title for the past three years, took his first match from H. M. Woods, of Indianapolis, 6—1, 6—3, while Rollie Hoerr, Jones' mate in the doubles, won straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, from F. M. Corwin.

Arthur Van Reppert, playing against M. D. McDonald, was made to go three sets before winning, but after losing the first, 2—6, came back and won the remaining two, 6—0, 6—3. His partner in the doubles, Grover Holthaus, defeated S. Gardner, who comes from Farmington, Mo., 6—4, 6—2.

Brodix an Easy Winner.

Jan Reppert and Holthaus also took their first round in the doubles from Hanna and Watson in easy fashion, 6—1, 6—1. This pair made Jones and Hoerr work mighty hard to win the doubles championship when they met in the finals a year ago, and are counted upon to put up another good fight this year.

Wyatt Brodix, ex-Washington U. champ, who has been playing good tennis on the Forest Park courts for the past three years, got off to a good start by winning his first match, as did Freddy Riesmeyer, another member of the "younger set."

Hunt Albert of Atlanta, Ga., lived up to the good reputation that comes with him, by taking hard sets from D Obear, the old Principia star, 6—4, 0—6, 6—2.

The balance of the first round doubles matches will be played tomorrow and play in the second round of both doubles and singles will begin in earnest Monday.

The results of yesterday's play follows:

SINGLES.

Rollie Hoerr defeated F. M. Corwin, 6—2, 6—1.
C. D. P. Hamilton defeated C. G. Hotchkiss, 6—2, 6—2.
T. Bronaugh defeated D. Harrison, 6—2, 8—6.
Walter Crunden defeated Gus Serrano, 0—2, 6—3.
C. D. Jones defeated H. M. Woods, 6—1, 6—3.
T. Ward won by default from Stuart Mudd.
Ed Tilton defeated D. McCallum, 6—1, 6—0.
W. A. Horrell defeated C. Krausnick, 6—3, 6—3.
C. F. Westcoat defeated H. K. Knight, 6—2, 6—1.
Ed Stevens defeated R. C. Bridges, 7—5, 6—4.
Paul Blackwelder defeated Theodore Drews, 3—6, 6—4, 11—9.
A. Van Reppert defeated M. D. Macdonald, 2—6, 6—0, 6—3.
J. S. Lehman defeated F. Boyd, 6—2, 6—4.
W. Hollingshead defeated H. P. Hanna, 6—3, 7—5.
G. C. Holthaus defeated S. Gardner, 6—4, 6—0.

GUNBOAT SMITH.

Smith is matched to fight Georges Carpentier in London in July. Like Johnson, he won a 20-round fight from Moran on points.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Johnson's Title Wobbles.

"MOVING picture fight," is the popular label put on the Johnson-Moran fight, last night at Paris, France. That the contest was tame and uninteresting the description seems to show; but, to give the Dark One his due, the bout appears to have been on its merits, so far as the efforts of Johnson were concerned.

That he did not stop Moran may be due to two reasons:

Moran's endurance and courage.

But that the fight was just an exhibition it is unfair to both men to suggest. Every incentive existed for the principals to do their best. A fight with Sam Langford, with a $30,000 win-lose-or-draw end, besides numerous theatrical contracts, awaited Johnson if he won the fight. For Moran, too, there were many financial considerations contingent on his winning the title.

• • •

Pride Made Johnson Fight.

NEITHER man would have consented to forfeit this outlook. As for Johnson, who is popularly believed to have let Moran "stick it out," that gentleman's besetting sin is neither over-generosity, drink nor gambling—for all of which he is strong—but PRIDE. Johnson, according to his intimates would rather have lost the purse than the title.

It is possible that Johnson may have consented to stay his hand for the benefit of some film company, for EIGHT OR TEN ROUNDS. But that would not prevent his earnest attempt to finish the white man, in the remaining rounds.

That, it may be remarked, is what appears to have happened in the period beginning about the ninth round when Johnson almost had Moran out. He did not succeed in hanging on the "kayo," although he had Moran in dangerous condition at the close.

• • •

Johnson Is Slipping.

WHAT does stand out from this fight is: That Jack Johnson had better tread lightly in the neighborhood of one Sam Langford, whom he will now probably meet in September—if the champion doesn't again take to the woods and beat it. The fight indicates the loss of power on the part of the champion. In all championship fights he has heretofore stopped his man, although it must be said that none of them was the equal, physically or in courage of Moran.

• • •

Moran Is Too "Old."

TO this one credit for a game fight in against superior weight, experience, and skill must be given. Were Moran not so advanced in years he might be looked upon as the "makings" of a real "white hope," one who eventually might cop the title. But the Pittsburger is now 27 years old and at this age—27—they are already trying to count one star down and out—Sam Langford.

• • •

A New Champion Needed.

IT'S too bad that Moran didn't win. Johnson has been a bad champion in every way. He has dodged the hard ones, and grabbed the cinches; he has cast opprobrium on the game by his personal actions and has tied up the heavyweight situation so that there seems small chance to clear it until Old Father Time hangs the "kayo" on him.

One more battle or two like the last, and even the white hopes will be in Johnson's class.

• • •

From the White Standpoint.

In the meanwhile the white hope outlook is still as "black" as ever, following the failure of Moran. Gunboat Smith is conceded to be the best white heavyweight fighter on the horizon; but there is little doubt that even declining as Johnson now is, the comparatively unskilled Smith would stand little chance to break through Johnson's defense. Besides, Smith's poundage is too slight to oppose to a man of Johnson's looming bulk.

Aside from Smith, there is not a white fighter worthy to be even talked of as a possibility. If John is to be beaten soon, "Tham" Langford another tar baby, is in line to do it, thus continuing the black dynasty of champions.

BROWNS GET EVEN BREAK WITH NAPS IN DOUBLE BILL

Rickeyites Burlesque Opener and Lose, 16-4, but Stage Rally in Abbreviated Windup and Win, 4-3.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

AFTER the Browns had Joe Millered the opening tilt with the Naps, giving the tail-enders the winning portion of a 16-4 laugh, the Rickeyites behaved like a regular ball club in an abbreviated four-and-one-half round sketch in the windup and pulled out a 4-3 victory, halving the fruits of the day's labor, when it seemed they were doomed to two defeats.

The first was probably the most laughable alleged big league game offered here this season. Manager Rickey was unable in five tries, to pick a pitcher who could prevent the Naps from scoring. He started with Leverenz, who lasted only long enough in the opening inning to fill the bases and then gave way to Taylor. He was followed in turn by Mitchell, Hoch and Baumgardner. The Naps feasted off every member of this quintet.

Game Becomes Farce.

A total of 18 base hits, including 6 doubles, and 9 bases on balls and a hit batsman was the Naps' portion in the attack. All this, combined with loose playing by the Browns netted the Naps 16 runs.

The game became that much of a farce that in the windup the two managers practically had "kid" line-ups in the field. For the Browns, Agnew, Walker and Williams were the only regulars in the game. At first the 16,000 fans resented the poor efforts of the Browns, but later saw much humor in the play.

The second game also provided excitement of a different nature. As the opener had required more than three hours to decide, it was nearly 6 o'clock before they were ready for the second. To enable the Cleveland team to catch a 7 o'clock train for Detroit, it was agreed to call the game at 5:45 o'clock.

At about 5:40, the Browns had scored two runs in their section of the fourth inning, assuming the lead, 4—3 and Baumgardner was at bat. Pitcher Steen was pitching and Baumgardner had swung at two balls pitched by Steen.

Birmy Delays Game.

At this stage, Manager Birmingham ran out from the bench and waved to Steen. Despite the fact that two were out, none on base and two strikes and no balls on Baumgardner, Birmy made a switch in pitchers, apparently to delay the game. He sent in Pitcher Morton to replace Steen. Morton's first pitch was a strike, retiring Baumgardner.

Although it was past 5:45 o'clock by this time, Umpire Egan ordered the Naps to bat in their turn of the fifth. Birmingham protested vigorously but Egan insisted. Baumgardner retired the side without any runs being scored, although it was almost 6 o'clock when the last putout was made.

Birmingham Intends to File Protest of Browns' Victory in Final Game

BEFORE the Naps departed for Detroit last night, Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland team told the Post-Dispatch that he intends to protest the result of the second game to President Johnson of the American League. He bases his protest on the fact that it was after 5:45 o'clock, the agreed quitting time, when the Naps took their turn in the fifth inning.

Umpire Egan holds that Manager Birmingham purposely delayed the game and for that reason he insisted on them taking their turn in the fifth inning, despite the fact that it was about quitting time. He claims that there was no necessity of Manager Birmingham making a change in his pitchers, inasmuch as two were out, none on base and Baumgardner was making an effort to strike out to hurry the game.

Browns Make Burlesque of Opener; Wares' Hit Nets Victory in Last

THE first game was nothing but a mad scramble of the Naps around the bases. Successive singles by Graney, Turner and Leibold in the first inning filled the bases and Leverenz was yanked in favor of Wylie Taylor. The first batter to face him was Lajoie, who lifted a sacrifice fly to Walker and Graney tallied. Taylor then put an end to the rally.

Thanks to two successive errors by Catcher Carisch, the Browns tallied two runs in the third but this 2-1 lead was shortly enjoyed. Taylor lost control in the fourth and after passing Johnston, permitting Wood to get away with a safe bunt and pitching three successive balls to Chapman, the Texan was retired in favor of Mitchell. Mitch failed to stop the run-getting. Hoch and Baumgardner proved just as ineffective when they took their turns on the mound.

While the Naps were making merry, Willie Mitchell, a left-hander, was doing right smart with the Browns' hitters. He held the Browns to six hits, three of which were nicked by Gus Williams.

Shotton Nicks a Triple.

Bill James, back from a few days' vacation in Michigan, faced Bill Steen at the beginning of the abbreviated windup. The Browns found Steen to their liking in the first inning after James had retired the Naps in their half.

Shotton opened with a triple to right center and scored when Leibold dropped Pratt's tall lift, Derrill moving to second on the error. Then Gus hit a single to right and Pratt trotted over. Gus was doubled when he tried for third after Leibold speared Walker's hoist. Leary singled in this inning, but was turned back when he tried to steal.

The Naps got busy at James' expense in the second. Johnston opened with a double and scored on Wood's single. Roy advanced on Chapman's infield demise and O'Neill doubled to right, pushing Wood over. After Steen tapped to Pratt, Graney singled to center and O'Neill chalked up the Naps' third run, putting the aliens in front 3—2.

Wares There in Pinch.

The Browns resumed the lead in their section of the fourth. Leary was a goner on a roller to Chapman, but Austin doubled to left and Wares followed with a triple over Leibold's head, scoring Jim with the tying run. On an attempted squeeze, Agnew missed the ball and Wares looked a sure goner between third and home, but fortunately for the Browns, O'Neil made a low throw to Turner and Clyde raced over with the run that proved the winner. Then Bumgardner went up and took two loose swings at Steen's offerings. Here Birmy made his switch in pitchers. On his first pitch, Umpire Egan called a strike, retiring Baumgardner.

THE SAME TEAM PLAYED BOTH GAMES!

Mascot Changes Uniform.

One Herman Nelson, a 14-year-old lad, who has been mascotting for the Browns, appeared in a new "at home" white uniform. Previous to yesterday, he had been wearing the gray "abroad" suit. After the Naps began to show up the Browns, Herman went to the clubhouse and re-donned his gray "uni."

The Browns begin their long road trip today in Chicago, where a double-header will be played. Carl Weilman and Walter Leverens will probably pitch.

K. C. A. C. RUNNERS ROMP AWAY WITH W. A. A. U. CHAMPS

Columbian A. C. Finishes Second, but Wins Only One First at Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 27.—The Kansas City Athletic Club won the annual track meet of the Western division of the A. A. U here today by piling up a total of 86 points while its nearest opponent, the Columbia Athletic Club of St. Louis scored only 21 points.

Eleven first and two of the three new Western A. A. U. records made today were to the credit of the Kansas City club. The Kansas Cityans outclassed and outnumbered the other clubs and schools and took the lead from the second event. The records established were in the pole vault, the shot-put and the five-mile run.

Wagner's Record Broken.

In the pole vault, Reavis, of the K. C. A. C., made a flying leap of 12 feet 1 1-16 inches, breaking the Western A. A. U. record of 11 feet 10½ inches, held by Blewett Wagner of the Missouri Athletic Club. Lee Talbott Jr. of the K. C. A. C., set a new mark in the 16-pound shot-put, beating his own record of 45 feet 7 inches and going 46 feet 10¼ inches.

In the five-mile run Jake Kaysing of the Columbian Athletic Club of St. Louis made a sensational 220-yard sprint at the finish and broke a record. His mark of 27 minutes 56 2-5 seconds, broke the record of 28 minutes 28 seconds held by Dunning of the K. C. A. C.

Hutto, Reavis, Talbott, French and Hazen were the most consistent point winners for K. C. A. C. Hutto landed 10 points and Talbott obtained four firsts and was the individual star of the meet. The St. Louisans from the C. A. C. piled up a number of points considering their few entries. In the 220-yard dash Aronson ran a great race and led his field by 10 feet. He lost the 100-yard dash by a fraction of a second, Hardy breaking ahead near the tape.

Summaries:

MARSANS DENIES RUMOR HE IS TO LEAVE FEDS

Armando Marsans, the local Federals' Cuban outfielder, denied emphatically this afternoon that he had made arrangements to quit the St. Louis Federal League club and go to his home in Havana, Cuba.

"I expect to remain with the St. Louis team under any circumstances," he said to the Post-Dispatch.

A dispatch from Cincinnati declared Marsans, in a letter to Gonzales, his pal, has said: "I am through; send all the belongings I left with you to my address in Havana."

HOFMAN'S $2900 IS SAFE; NEW TRIAL IS DENIED

CHICAGO, June 27.—Application of the Chicago National League baseball club for a new trial of the case wherein Artie Hofman, former outfielder, was awarded $2900 back pay, was overruled here today by Judge Dolan.

Counsel for the club asserted that the verdict became known in advance, but the court held that this was insufficient cause for a new trial. He accepted the statement of Hofman's lawyer that it was "merely a good guess by the press."

Patterson Arrives.

LONDON, June 27.—J. C. Patterson, of Pennsylvania University, has arrived in England to prepare for the Amateur Athletic Association's championship next month. He has entered for the 100 and 220 yards in company with N. J. Cartmell, who won the 220-yard championship in 1908. Patterson was practising on the Stamford [illegible] yesterday.

SUPERBAS TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM PHILLIES

BROOKLYN, June 27.—The Brooklyns played their last game for a month at Ebbetts Field today, winning a double-header from Philadelphia. The first ended 6 to 2. Ragan and Mayer having a hot battle until the eighth.

Alexander and Jacobs were hit hard in the second game, which ended, 10 to 4. Alexander was erratic in the second inning, the locals getting five runs on two hits, two passes and two errors. Brown was unsteady, but kept the hits down.

Wheat's batting featured today, he getting five hits, including a home run. Smith also hit for the circuit. Dooin was put off the field in the sixth inning of the second game for protesting a decision. Scores:

BRAVES BUMP GIANTS; BREAK EVEN IN SERIES

BOSTON, June 27.—By defeating New York 4 to 2 today Boston got an even break of the six-game series. The Boston batters landed on Marquard's delivery in the fifth inning and broke the big left-hander's winning streak. Two were out in Boston's half of the fifth, with none on bases, when Whaling received a base on balls, Rudolph singled and Gilbert hit a two-bagger, scoring two runs. Gilbert also scored when Evers doubled.

The champions obtained one run in the fifth on singles by Grant, Stock and Meyers In the seventh a base on balls, an infield out, Stock's single and Rudolph's wild pitch gave New York its other tally. Score:

LAVENDER BLANKS REDS, BENTON IS HIT HARD

CINCINNATI, June 27.—Lavender was in excellent form today, allowing Cincinnati only three hits, and shutting them out, 7 to 0. He was almost faultlessly supported by the Chicago team, and after the third inning Cincinnati was never dangerous. Benton, on the other hand, was hit opportunely, and his support was ragged. Saier's fielding at first base was the best seen here this year. Score:

MACKMEN HIT JOHNSON IN FIRST INNING; WIN 4—2

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—Philadelphia won today's game from Washington, 4 to 2. After the first inning Johnson pitched in fine style.

When Foster's throw to Gandil retired Murphy in Philadelphia's half of the fifth inning, Gandil threw the ball in the direction of Umpire Chill, the latter dodging in time to prevent being struck. Chill ordered Gandil out of the game. While several Washington players were arguing with Chill, the latter stopped play, owing to rain. Smith took Gandil's place when play was resumed. Score:

WOOD HEAVES RED SOX TO WIN OVER YANKS

NEW YORK, June 27.—Boston made it four out of six from New York today, winning the last game of the series by a score of 5 to 3.

Cole relieved McHale in the third. Boston's tieing and winning runs were largely due to errors. Hooper hit a home run in the ninth inning. Not a New York batter reached base after the second inning. It rained hard before the game, and the start was delayed 30 minutes. Score:

BRITTON AND BALDWIN SIGN FOR 12-ROUND BOUT

Jack Britton, lightweight, signed yesterday for a 12-round bout with Matty Baldwin in a Boston ring June 30. Both boxers have agreed to make 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. "Silent" Dan Morgan, Britton's pilot, completed the arrangements.

Joe Mandot, the New Orleans baker boy, was also matched with Johnny Dundee for a 10-round session in Mandot's home town the evening of July 5. A tentative match is hanging fire between Johnny Griffith and Jack Britton at Canton, O.

Charley Cutler, claimant to the heavyweight wrestling title, is to box Bill Shanks, July 3, before some suburban "back room" club. Abe Attell and Chick Hayes were matched for July 4 at Evansville, Ind., both to make 124 at 3 o'clock.

INDIANAPOLIS FEDS WIN, GEORGE STOVALL SPIKED

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 27.—Indianapolis got back into her stride today and won from Kansas City, 10 to 6. The locals took a four-run lead in the first inning and could not be overtaken. Kauff spiked Manager Stovall during the first inning in sliding back to first base and the latter had to retire. Score:

CHIFEDS ANNEX THIRD STRAIGHT FROM TERRIERS

Groom and Davenport Fail to Stop Tinker's Men Who Win, 8—4.

By W. J. O'Connor.

Those tractable Terriers played still another game of ball at Federal League Park yesterday afternoon, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Of course there may be those intensely cultured fans who believe that Chicago played the game, but it is a fact that the Terriers played too, e'en though not so well. But they played, so help me Mordecai Brown! And they lost, 8—4.

'Tis said that M. Brown now favors mediation. There soon will be a meeting of mediators at Niagara and unless some of the dictatorial persons now infesting Federal League Park withdraw immediately and a new regime is put in power, will be war to a finish.

The crowd yesterday totaled upwards of 125—but not far upwards. About as far up as 126, perhaps, counting Biz Kenney, the announcer, who views the game from the grandstand. This sort of patronage is not calculated to please the men who shoulder the financial burden, and there is sure to be a switch soon.

They're Going Away Soon.

The Terriers close their stand at home today and then take the road, where they expect to distribute their losses evenly around the circuit. About yesterday's game there is little to be said. Groom was knocked silly in five innings and Davenport did little better. Watson was strong for the enemy.

Bill James Has Slight Edge Over Carl Weilman Among Leading Pitchers

Bill James and Carl Weilman are having a close tilt for honors among Manager Rickey's pitchers. They rank as the leading pitchers, with James having a slight edge. The big right-hander, according to this week's figures, has won eight games and lost three. Weilman, including the double victory scored over the Naps in Wednesday's double-header, has won 10 games and lost four.

SPORT SALAD

BY L. C. DAVIS.

WORTH WHILE.

IT'S easy enough to look pleasant
When life is one lyrical song;
But the fellow worth while
Is the one who can smile
When everything seems to go wrong.

It's easy enough to look happy
When slamming the pellet for fair;
But the fellow worth while
Is the one who can smile
After making a dent in the air.

It's easy enough to be cheerful
After hitting the ball in a pinch,
But the fellow worth while
Is the guy who can smile
When it's foul by an eighth of an inch.

The only way to hold Hal Chase would be to hobble him.

* * *

But as to Writing—

In spite of the fact that Ty Cobb busted his thumb on the head of a butcher, his newspaper articles are appearing regularly. Which indicates that Ty doesn't do his punching by proxy.

* * *

Miller Huggins claims that President Wilson was stealing his stuff when he sprung that "watchful waiting" policy.

* * *

Ty Cobb may have to jump Detroit to dodge a warrant sworn out for his arrest by the Detroit butcher whom he soaked. It looks like Ty, who has been roaming around for a number of years promiscuously punching here and there, had finally "rambled till the butcher cut him down."

* * *

Second Baseman McLarry of the Louisville Colonels made two home runs and a single on the day he was married. If Mrs. McLarry can bat as well as that in the Hot Biscuit League they ought to live happily forever after.

* * *

Barbarous Treatment.

Frank Chance for a run-in with the umpire was sentenced to sit in the grand stand for three days and watch the Yankees play. Discipline should be maintained, but we don't believe in resorting to cruelty.

* * *

A report has it that Chance will put Roy Hartzell on first base. Well, as long as Roy has to be put somewhere probably that's as good a place as any.

* * *

Frank Farrell of the Yanks says he won't spend a nickel to stop Pitcher Schultz from playing with the Feds. Well, you couldn't do very much with a nickel, Frank, unless you invested it in postage stamps and wrote him a letter ordering him to come back.

* * *

The Naps have a young pitching recruit named Cyrgallis. And the worst of it is he can't change it even by getting married. Femininity has its advantages.

* * *

Harking Back.

OH, don't you remember last winter, dear fan,
The way you did grumble and scold,
When you froze all your toes,
Both your ears and your nose,
And shivered and shook with the cold?

When you went to your work in the morning, dear fan,
Your way through the snow you would plow.
How you longed for the blaze
Of the sun's warming rays—
I hope you are hot enough now.

Local Poloists No Match for Kay See Blues

Country Club Team Is Defeated 15½ to 7 in Final of Western Championships.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 27.—The Blues of the Kansas City Country Club today defeated the St. Louis Country Club four in the final match for the championship of the Western circuit of the National Polo Association, 15½ to 7. The Kansas City men outplayed their opponents at every stage of the game.

The blue team used an open style of play that gave its fast ponies an opportunity to outdistance the slower St. Louis mounts. The Kansas Cityans made goal eight times in the first three periods and allowed the St. Louisans but one goal to offset the lead.

New Handicap Given.

A change in the announced handicap gave the Kansas City fur three goals at the outset, instead of two, as had been announced. In the first minute of play T. A. Velie the Blue No. 2, raced the ball from center for a goal. S. H. Velie, No. 3, for the Kansas Cityans, took the ball from the next scrimmage and relayed to W. W. Guernsey, the black back, who shot it to Capt. R. S. Thomas, blue No. 1, for an easy goal. From that time the result of the match never seemed to be in doubt.

Several times the St. Louisans rallied, but in each instance the Kansas City four apparently developed a reserve store of energy and played harder. In the last period the visitors played the most spectacular polo of the match. G. W. Simmons and A. T. Primm Jr., twice in rapid succession "dribbled" the willow ball down the field for a goal.

While there were no individual stars in the match, W. W. Guernsey, the blue back, probably played the most consistent game.

Police Keep Order.

Twice in the match the play went into the crowd, the largest that ever attended a polo match in this city. Finally the police were called and a squad of patrolmen succeeded in keeping the spectators back from the field. The score.

ROBINSON SIGNS WITH BROOKLYN FOR 3 YEARS

NEW YORK, June 27.—The Brooklyn National League club today signed Manager Wilbert Robinson to a contract covering 1915, 1916 and 1917. This set at rest all rumors regarding a change in the management of the Superbas.

Outfielder Joe Riggert has been released to the St. Louis Nationals.

Catcher Gossett Released.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The New York American League club announced tonight that Catcher Richard Gossett had been released to the Indianapolis club of the American Association.

Married Couples Tournament Is Held at Midland

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Blatterman Win Unique Golf Competition With Net Score of 154.

Although the finals of the city golf tourney on the Glen Echo Links held the center of the St. Louis golf stage yesterday, the Scotch-English pastime was being played elsewhere in the neighborhood.

At the Midland Valley Golf Club, the first married couples' tournament ever held by that organization proved a great success, and although an innovation, resulted in some mighty low scores for that style of ipay

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Blatterman, succeeded in turning the best card of the fifteen couples who participated. Their combined net score was 154 after their total handicap of 103 had been deducted.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Mix, although not blessed with handicaps as liberal as their victors, came in second with a net card of 160. In making this score, Mrs. Mix, by going over the links in 104 strokes, turned in the lowest card that any lady has made over the Midland course. Mrs. E. C. Sullivan ran Mrs. Mix a close second by making a medal score of 112 for the 18 holes. The eight couples to finish highest ranked as follows:

Mr. L. A. Blatterman	109	(28)	91
Mrs. L. A. Blatterman	138	(75)	63	—154
Mr. George E. Mix	96	(12)	84

Miss Marjorie Hires Wins Central West Tennis Championship

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 27.—Miss Marjorie Hires of Kansas City won the Central West tennis championship for women this afternoon by defeating Mrs. W. W. Yager, also of Kansas City in the final match in singles. The score was 8—6, 7—5.

Catcher Jenkins Breaks Finger.

Joe Jenkins, one of the Browns' young catchers, broke a finger in morning practice yesterday and did not accompany the team on the trip to Chicago. Bob Wallace, whose hand is still crippled, is also a left-at-home. Manager Rickey took all the other players of his team.

Columbus Catcher Is Sold.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 27.—President Hanlon of the Sioux City Western League team has signed Catcher Roy Murphy of the Columbus American team. Murphy will report here tomorrow. Pitchers William Luhrsen and Hal Hogan were today given their unconditional release.

I. A. C. Swimmers Reach Frisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 27.—Nine swimmers of the Illinois Athletic Club and their manager arrived here today to prepare for a swimming meet July 3, 4 and 5, in which the pick of the Middle Western, Western and Hawaiian swimmers will compete.

Sheckard Makes Good as Manager in First Season

Former Cub Outfielder Has Prospered With the Cleveland A. A. Team.

Measured by the standards of hard work, baseball brains and the attitude his players have toward him, Jim Sheckard, Spider manager, is one of the season's most successful new baseball leaders, despite the position of his club.

From the moment Sheckard steps onto the field until the last man is out, he's hard at work. Not a man goes to bat until Manager Jim has talked over with him the probable way he is to hit.

When Sheckard comes in from his position in left field he doesn't calmly seat himself on the bench, if he isn't due to bat that half. He stations himself at third base to coach. During practice Sheckard is always hitting 'em out to the fielders, fielding or coaching some of the youngsters.

He has shown every man on the Cleveland team some new angle of the game. In exercising his functions as manager he's not at all bossy or arbitrary.

There isn't a man in the entire Spider crew who doesn't like Sheckard. It's the consideration he has shown every one of his men that has made him so well liked. Never grouchy, peeved or out of sorts, Sheckard makes himself liked by always having a pleasant word for anyone who approaches him.

Olympic Marathon Man Sues for $750 Promised Him by Race Promoter

The reasonable value of the services of an athlete who participates in a 20-mile marathon run is to be determined in a suit brought in the Supreme Court yesterday by John Hayes, winner of the marathon run at the Olympic games in England, against M. Robert Guggenheim, son of Daniel Guggenheim, the copper magnate.

Hayes alleges that in October, 19 he was engaged by Guggenheim to participate in a 20-mile foot race at Spokane, Wash., and Hayes trained for the event and was on hand and participated in the marathon in November, 19. Hayes says that Guggenheim promised to pay him $750 for participating in the race, which, Hayes says, is a reasonable sum, but has refused to keep his agreement.

CONGRESS MAY SIDETRACK BILLS FOR GOOD ROADS

Official of American Automobile Assn. Says Legislators Will Have to Explain at Home.

"That Congress will adjourn and go into the fall elections without grasping the opportunity to win overwhelming popular approval by the enactment of Federal road legislation seems unbelievable," is the comment of Dr. H. M. Rowe of Baltimore, first vice-president and acting president of the American Automobile Association during the European absence of John A. Wilson of Franklin, Pa.

"Rumors are afloat, however, that good roads legislation will be laid on the table at this session of Congress, through a declination on the part of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Postroads to report the measure which overwhelmingly came to it from the House. If this is the case, the Democratic party is disregarding a chance to achieve a brilliant strategic advantage in the coming election.

"The voters in the rural districts are almost unanimous in favor of Federal aid to roads. They are expecting and demanding such aid. Such opposition as exists is feeble and half-hearted.

"Tariff legislation, currency reform, canal tolls, antitrust bills, are all storm centers of discussion, but however important may be the policies advocated by the party in power, they are far removed from the direct interests of the people, and in effect create only targets for the fire of the opposition. To neutralize the attack which is sure to come, the party in power should not overlook this golden chance to win the affection and support of the country voters.

"If the Democratic party passes this opportunity up there will be many an anxious moment for the stump speaker when he tries to explain why, in all the multitude of legislative enactments, good roads were overlooked.

"It is better to deal with the situation now from the standpoint of good politics than to wait until after adjournment, for then it may be that 'all the King's horses and all the King's men can't put Humpty Dumpty together again.'"

W. K. NORRIS HEADS ACCESSORY DEALERS

The annual election of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis was an exceedingly peaceful and friendly affair, in spite of newspaper alarming predictions to the contrary. A nominating committee had put up a ticket for the consideration of the meeting held last Wednesday night at the American Annex, according to custom for the past five years. At the meeting other nominations were called for and all but one of the "slate" ticket nominees were elected and in each instance without opposition.

The new officers are: W. K. Norris, of the McQuay-Norris Mfg. Co., president; L E. Allmon, of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co., vice-president; A. C. Bauer, fo the Bauer Oil Co., treasurer; Robert E. Lee, secretary, and five directors as follows: John F. Shuford of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co., A. N. Stanley of the Fisk Rubber Co., Allen H. Clark of the Vehicle Top and Supply Co., H. H. Hubbard of the United States Tire Co., and J. P. Patterson of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

THE NEW BUICK LINE

F. W. A. Vesper, president and manager of the Vesper-Buick Co., of St. Louis, is back from a convention of dealers at Flint, Mich., at which time the new 1915 line was announced. The line remains just about the same with the exceptions of numerous refinements on all the models and a change in prices.

The six-cylinder model, which formerly sold for $1985 will be priced at $1650. One improvement of this model is that it has a seven-passenger body, converted from a five-passenger, by disappearing seats. On all the models there will be no side lamps, their place being taken by a dimming attachment in the front lights. The bodies will be all of the stream line type, with round front radiators.

Model 37, which formerly sold at $1435, will sell for $1235, and model 25, formerly $1050, will be priced at $950.

BUYING HIGH GRADE CARS

J. D. Perry Lewis, of the Lewis Automobile Co., distributor of the Stevens-Duryea line, claims that if the 1915 business on high grade cars holds up like the 1911 season, all records will be broken. "When I was appointed distributor for this line" affirms Lewis, "I set a schedule of sales, and I now have three months left to complete it and have placed more than twice the number of cars on the street that I planned."

FORD CARRIED COALS TO ENGLISH NEWCASTLE

P. L. D. Perry, general manager of the Ford Motor Co. in England, and H. P. White, continental manager with headquarters at Paris, arrived recently on a visit to the parent plant at Detroit. Regarding the motor industry in England, Mr. Perry said it could hardly be in a more flourishing condition.

"England has been enjoying an unprecedented trade boom for the last three years. Work has been very plentiful and many people have been making money. This, perhaps, has benefited our business more than any other one thing, for the Ford plant is increasing its output more rapidly than any other. Although established a comparatively short time, we are turning out more cars than the five next largest plants put together, and are increasing our capacity as fast as possible. We seem to have entered the British field at the psycological moment."

FIRST OF "SUPERIOR" CARS ARE DELIVERED

The Crescent Motor Car Co. of Main and St. George streets. St. Louis, turned out its first cars last week. They were delivered, one each to Missouri Auto Co. of Clark, Mo.; J. S. Self, Jacksonville, Ill., and S. E. Beebe of Springfield, Ill. The car sells for $985 and is completely equipped with starter and electric lights and all the fads and fancies of the season. The company will begin manufacturing in quantities at once and has already contracted with a number of dealers to handle its output.

The officers of the Crescent Motor Car Co., which manufactures the "Superior" car, are George T. Root, president, Albert G. Nulsen, Jr., vice-president, William H. Foster, secretary and treasurer.

CLAIMS SALE RECORD

Milton Strauss, manager of the Electric Garage and Service Co., distributors of the Detroit Electric, claims the record for sales this season; his company having placed on St. Louis streets, 26 of the 1914 Detroit electrics. The company also distributor for the General Vehicle Co., reports the delivery last week of two 1000 pound worm drive electric trucks to the Grand Leader department store.

USES CAR AS LOCOMOTIVE

Recently when members of the Harris Hardware Co. of Washington, N. C., went to the railroad yards to superintend the unloading of a carload of Studebaker automobiles, they found the car so placed that the work could not be accomplished. They promptly hooked their machine, a Studebaker Four, to the freight car and drew it up a stiff grade to an unloading platform.

TO DRIVE BIG TRUCK ACROSS CONTINENT

Charles Courtney of Hartford, Wis., has completed plans to drive a KisselKar truck, with carryall body, across the continent. It is Courtney's intention to start late in the summer, visit local fairs and conventions on the way, and pull up at San Francisco in the spring of 1915 for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Courtney's KisselKar carryall has been in service three years, running between Wisconsin summer resorts.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

BARNEY TO DRIVE STUTZ

Barney Oldfield, the best-known racing pilot in the world, will be one of the principal attractions of the 300-mile race at Sioux City on July 4, where he is to drive the same white Stutz racing car he drove in the 500-mile International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis on May 30, and won fifth place, finishing ahead of all other American entries.

Studebaker

Economical Light-Weight
SIX
$1575

Detroit, Mich.
My new Studebaker Six purchased in November last is giving me very good satisfaction.
Thomas T. Leete, Jr.,
Corliss, Leete & Moody, Attorneys.

Coffeyville, Kansas.
Our Studebaker SIX has been making a little better than fourteen miles to the gallon of gasoline. H. W. Read, Topeka, Kansas.

Topeka, Kansas.
I am more than pleased.
H. G. West, Cashier Farmers National Bank.

Richmond, Ky.
After long and careful study I regard the Studebaker Six the acme of perfection in an automobile and giving more value for its price than any other automobile made in the world.
B. E. Turley, Cashier State Bank & Trust Co.

Atlanta, Ga.
I am thoroughly satisfied with my Studebaker SIX. L. C. Hopkins, Attorney.

Atlanta, Georgia.
The Studebaker SIX has been a source of complete satisfaction to me.
J. Edwin Kerr, The Publishers Press.

Covington, Ga.
Up to date I have driven the SIX about six thousand miles and am "wearing" my original tires. I get very satisfactory mileage on gasoline consumption.
O. T. Hennessee, Planter and Merchant.

Boston, Mass.
I think my second Studebaker SIX is a big improvement over my first Studebaker SIX, although I have nothing but praise for that car. This is my third Studebaker.
August De Cort, President De Cort Co.

Boston, Mass.
My Studebaker SIX is economical in upkeep, as my tires have traveled 4,000 miles and are yet good for many miles. On a run to New York and return we averaged over 12 miles to the gallon, and on shorter trips even better.
J. W. Smith, Boston Weather Bureau.

Perth Amboy, N. J.
I am exceedingly well pleased with the Studebaker SIX, considering it from any standpoint.
S. L. Antisell, Raritan Copper Works.

Sioux City, Ia.
The Studebaker SIX I bought in March is giving excellent satisfaction. I am gettig about thirteen miles to the gallon of gasoline.
P. H. Pilchard,
President Suburban Improvement Co.

Albany, N. Y.
My Studebaker SIX (1914) is giving me entire satisfaction.
Dr. B. G. Troidle

Norfolk, Virginia.
I have been driving automobiles for twelve years or more, and have never seen so flexible an engine; I have no difficulty in cutting it down to two miles an hour on high without a miss. During May I obtained something over twelve miles per gallon.
G. R. Swink,
Baird, Swink & Moreland, Attys.

Elkhart, Indiana.
I am certainly pleased with the Studebaker SIX. Am getting about fourteen to fifteen miles per gallon of gasoline; consumption of oil is also very light. C. C. Colbert, Manager American Coating Mills.

South Bend, Indiana.
One of your 1913 Studebaker SIXES last year pleased me so much that I purchased one of your 1914 Studebaker SIXES this spring.
Harry A. Engman, Jr.
President Engman-Matthews Range Co.

St. Louis, Mo.
I have been the owner of four Studebaker cars and now have a 1914 SIX and the results from all of them have been particularly gratifying.
C. F. Smith, Terminal Railroad Association.

Has any other automobile maker ever had a testimonial like this?

WESTERN UNION

BIG STARS TO RACE AT SIOUX CITY JULY 4

That the $25,000 sweepstakes, distance 300 miles, to be run on the Sioux City speedway July 4, will have a maximum field of starters, there is no doubt. 27 cars are the limit which may be started on a two-mile speedway and 26 entries have been made. The purse for the event is the largest ever hung up for a 300-mile contest, and, as was expected, it has lured the best cars and the cream of the drivers to Sioux City.

The advance guard of the galaxy of racing stars who are to participate in the Sioux City meet already have arrived at the course and some have made practice trials. Harry Grant, Ralph Mulford, Bill Chandler, Ed Rickenbacker, Mel Stringer, Bob Burman and a number of others have located camps.

Bob Burman, the "Speed King," and Ralph Mulford, winner of the 1911 Vanderbilt cup race and numerous other big races, will be seen at the wheels of the Peugeot cars, which showed such sensational speed at Indianapolis. The third Peugeot will be handled by Mel Stringer.

Other entries include Billy Knipper, Delage; Barney Oldfield and Gil Anderson, Stutz; Harry Grant and George Babcock, Sunbeams; Specer Wishart, Mercer; Cyrus Patschke, Marmon; Keene, Beaver Bullet; Wilcox, Gray Fox, Klein, King; Wetmore, Chalmers, Chandler, Braender Bull Dog; Horan, Metropol; Bennet, Moon; two Dusenbergs, one of which will be driven by Rickenbacker; Callahan, Stafford; Bower, National; Brock, Ray; Mason, Mason; and the White car and others with drivers not nominated.

In addition to the 300-mile feature there will be open events staged for which substantial prizes will be hung up. Unquestionably the meet will be the biggest automobile carnival which that section of the Middle West has ever seen. Most of the drivers either have arrived or are on their way to Sioux City with their cars. In anticipation of the huge crowds, extra grand stands are being arranged for.

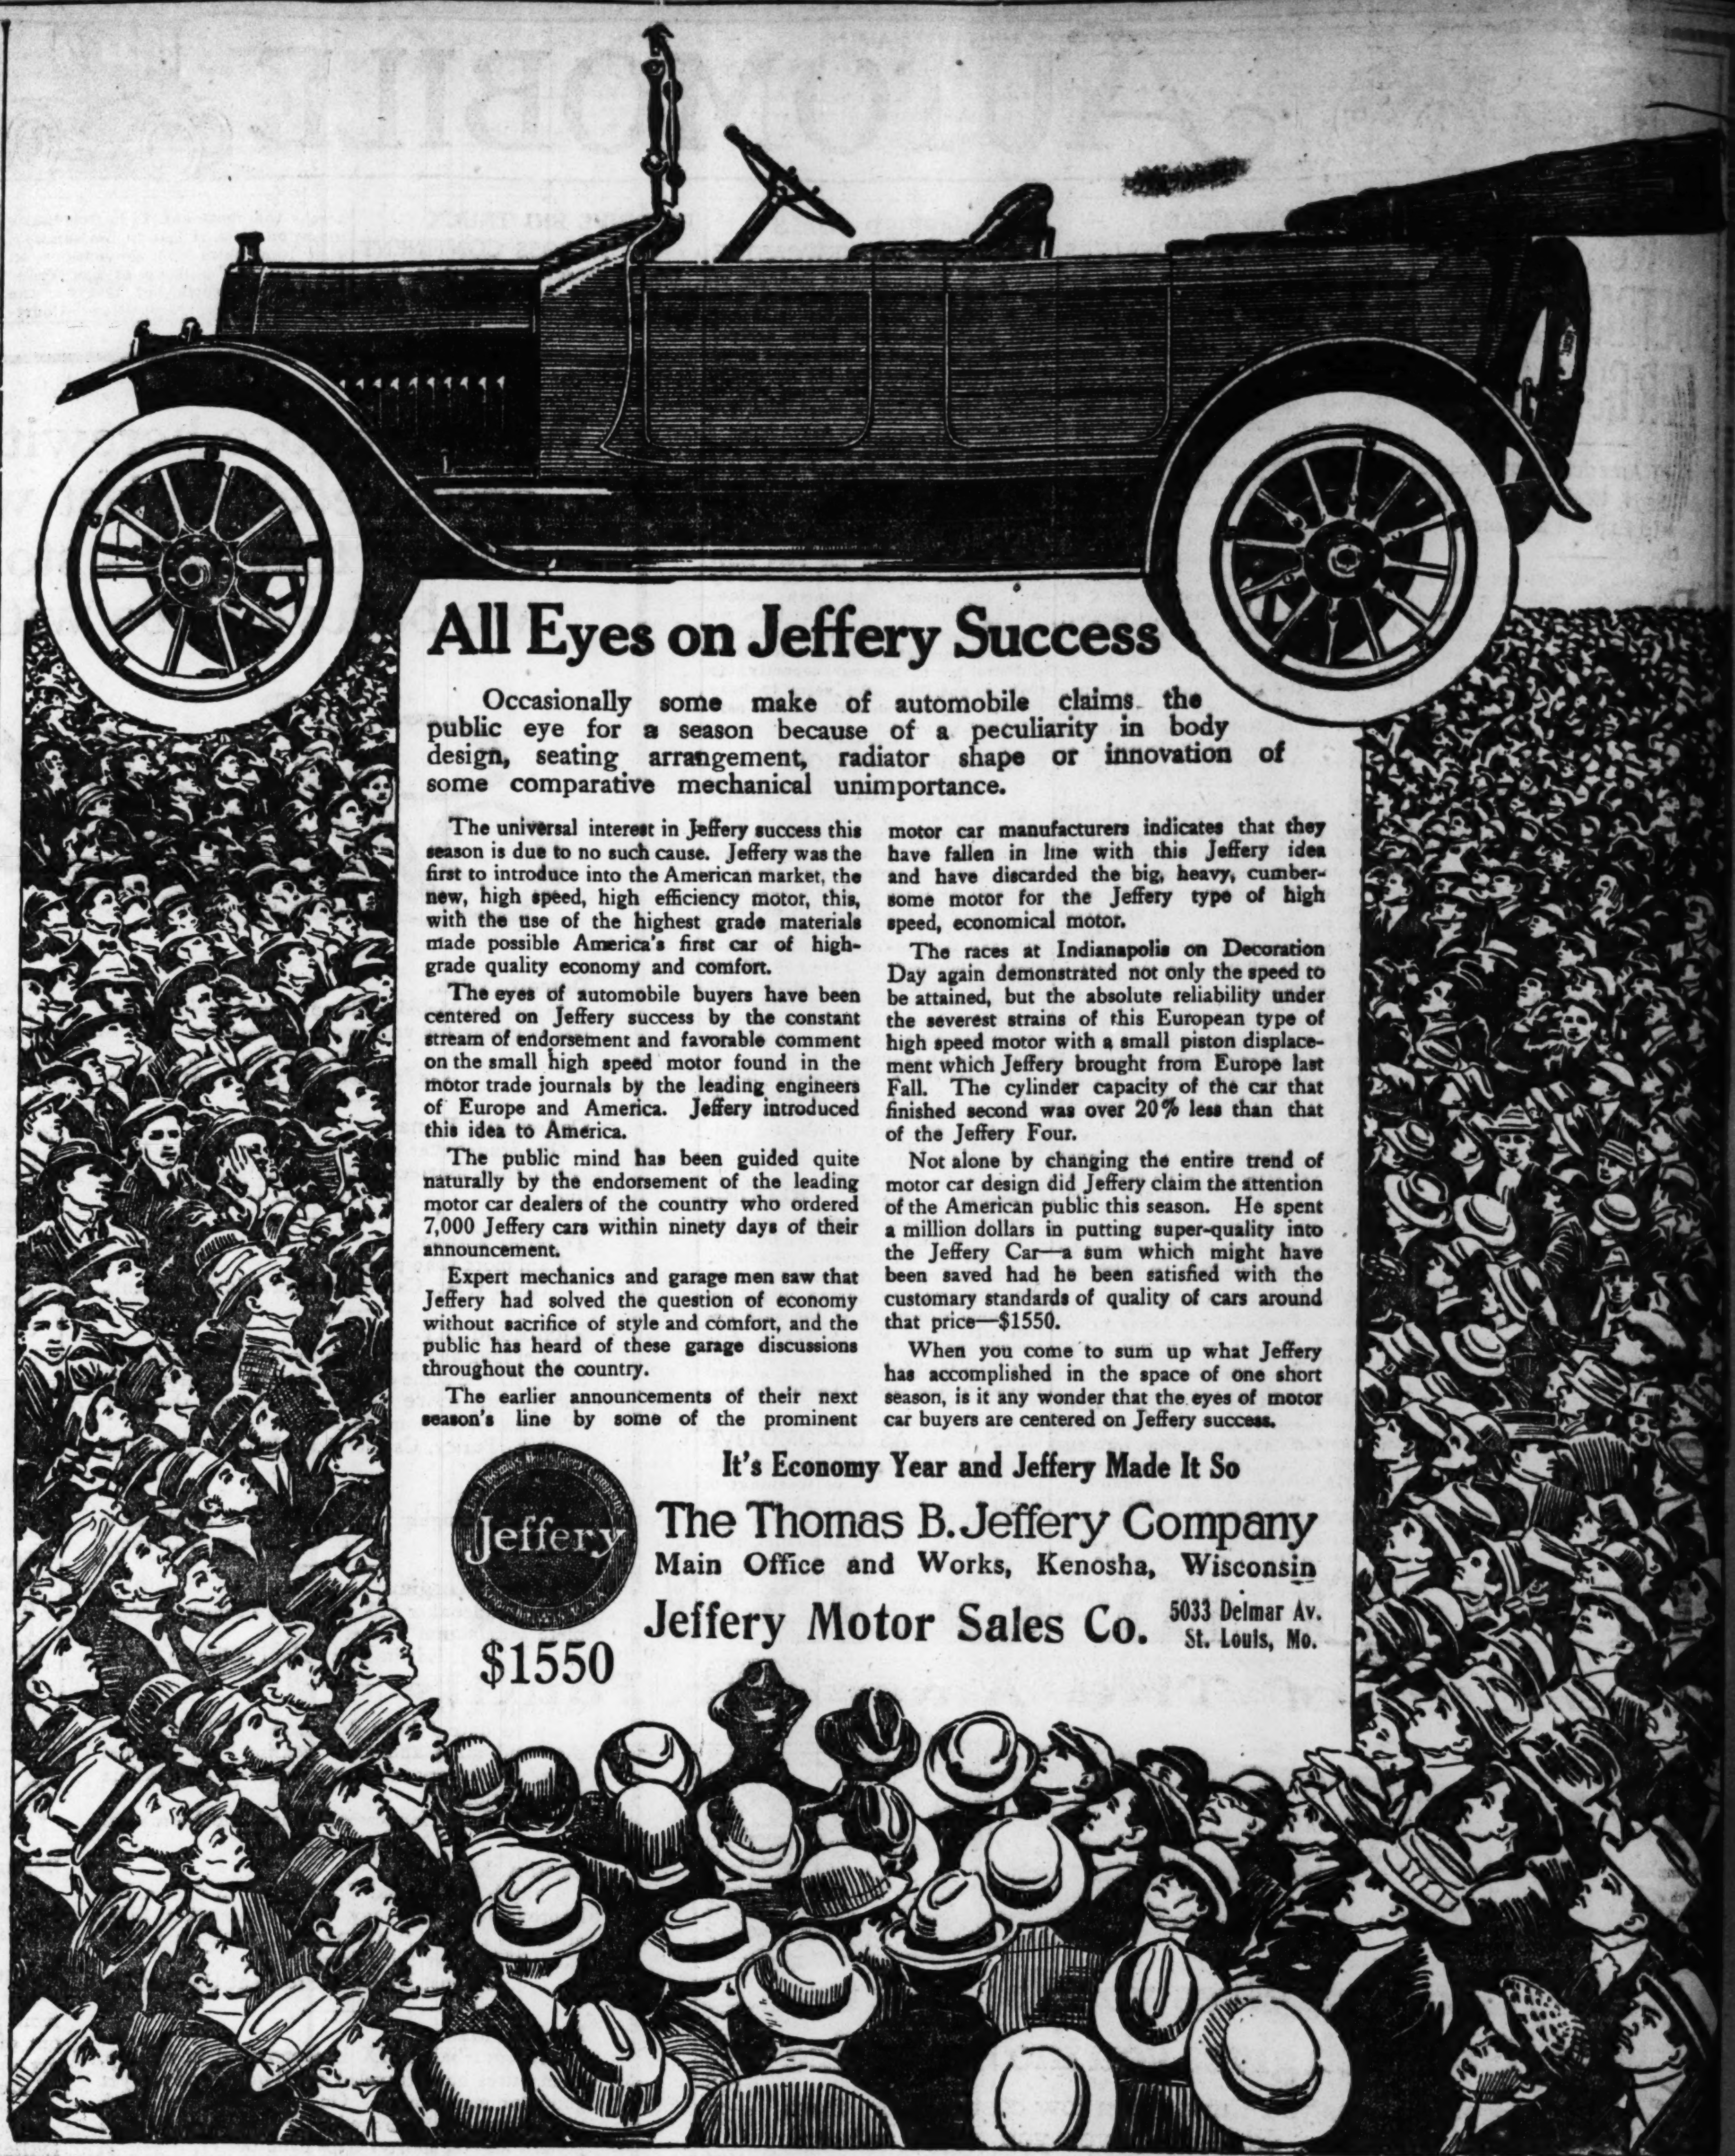
FACTORY MAN HERE

M. M. Smith of the Jeffery Motor Car Co. of Kenosha, Wis., is in St. Louis at the Jeffery Motor Sales Co. "This is my first visit to St. Louis, and I am very pleasantly surprised at the optimism shown here by general business, and I find that here, as everywhere else, the Jeffery is proving a big success, for our sales show a big gain over any previous period.

"Why shouldn't the Jeffery idea win here as it did at Indianapolis May 30? The first four out of seven cars over the finishing line in the great 500-mile race were cars of the Jeffery type. They were all built with motors of the mono-block type, high speed, light weight, small bore and long stroke European type. The Jeffery is built on the same idea, for this is a year of economy, and we went to Europe and discovered it—where they had tested it out and proved conclusively the efficiency and economy of operation."

INSTALLS LARGER MOTOR

Premier cars (1915) are fitted with a slightly larger motor and rated as 6—49 instead of 6—40 as last year. The bore of four inches remains the same, but the stroke has been increased from five to five and one-half inches. The motor has six cylinders and develops from 48 to 70 horsepower. It has the unit power plant, with flywheel inclosed and three-point suspension. It is equipped with the Bijur electric starter and has incorporated in its design the latest approved practices.



All Eyes on Jeffery Success

Occasionally some make of automobile claims the public eye for a season because of a peculiarity in body design, seating arrangement, radiator shape or innovation of some comparative mechanical unimportance.

The universal interest in Jeffery success this season is due to no such cause. Jeffery was the first to introduce into the American market, the new, high speed, high efficiency motor, this, with the use of the highest grade materials made possible America's first car of high-grade quality economy and comfort.

The eyes of automobile buyers have been centered on Jeffery success by the constant stream of endorsement and favorable comment on the small high speed motor found in the motor trade journals by the leading engineers of Europe and America. Jeffery introduced this idea to America.

The public mind has been guided quite naturally by the endorsement of the leading motor car dealers of the country who ordered 7,000 Jeffery cars within ninety days of their announcement.

Expert mechanics and garage men saw that Jeffery had solved the question of economy without sacrifice of style and comfort, and the public has heard of these garage discussions throughout the country.

The earlier announcements of their next season's line by some of the prominent motor car manufacturers indicates that they have fallen in line with this Jeffery idea and have discarded the big, heavy, cumbersome motor for the Jeffery type of high speed, economical motor.

The races at Indianapolis on Decoration Day again demonstrated not only the speed to be attained, but the absolute reliability under the severest strains of this European type of high speed motor with a small piston displacement which Jeffery brought from Europe last Fall. The cylinder capacity of the car that finished second was over 20% less than that of the Jeffery Four.

Not alone by changing the entire trend of motor car design did Jeffery claim the attention of the American public this season. He spent a million dollars in putting super-quality into the Jeffery Car—a sum which might have been saved had he been satisfied with the customary standards of quality of cars around that price—$1550.

When you come to sum up what Jeffery has accomplished in the space of one short season, is it any wonder that the eyes of motor car buyers are centered on Jeffery success.

"We Build Better Tires Than Goodyears"

That—in effect—is what makers say when they charge you higher prices. And 16 makers do that. They are asking for tires up to one-half more than present Goodyear prices. The inference is wrong. Those extra prices are all unjust. The verdict of users—as shown by sales—is that No-Rim-Cut tires are the best in the world. And in four ways they certainly are.

That Is Impossible

It is utterly impossible, so far as men know, to build a better tire than Goodyears, measured by cost per mile.

For years and years we've employed scores of experts to find out ways to better them. Their efforts have cost us $100,000 per year. No-Rim-Cut tires mark the present-day limit, to the best of their belief.

How They Excel

Our No-Rim-Cut feature—which we control—is found in these tires alone.

Our "On-Air" cure is employed by no other maker. This extra process costs us $450,000 yearly, but it saves many times that in blow-outs.

Our All-Weather tread—the greatest anti-skid—is an exclusive Goodyear feature. It is tough, double-thick and enduring. It is flat and smooth, yet it grasps wet roads in a resistless way with countless deep, sharp-edged grips.

What We Save

Our matchless output and modern equipment have immensely cut cost of production. They have cut our overhead cost 24 per cent, our labor cost 25 per cent. We have also cut our profits, until last year they averaged 6⅝ per cent.

No-Rim-Cut tire prices dropped 28 per cent last year. They are half what they used to be. But never before was the quality so high as it is today.

Player-Piano Bargains This Week

We have a number of very attractive player-pianos which have been taken in, in exchange for genuine Pianolas. These instruments have been put in perfect playing condition by our repair department and we are now offering them on our exchange floor at very great reductions in order to immediately dispose of them. The instrument illustrated above and described below is but one out of many such bargains. If you are thinking of getting a player-piano, by all means come in and see what we have before making any decision.

The Player-Piano illustrated above—a combination 65-note and 88-note instrument playing either 65 or 88-note standard music rolls, is cased in mahogany, of straight line design—a beautiful case. This instrument was traded in on a genuine Pianola, and we offer it at but a fraction of its real value. The price includes a handsome duet music bench and twenty-four rolls of music.

GASOLINE FAMINE IS NOT IN SIGHT

Probably the most pregnant and most unfounded topic among motorists today is the supposed catastrophe of losing gasoline as a motor car fuel.

Wherever they meet the one live topic is the practicability of benzol, alcohol, condensed natural gas or other mediums as a gasoline substitute.

Apparently the motorist seems to be dreading that the petroleum from which gasoline is produced, will soon give out.

That their fears are all unfounded is evident by the increased amount of gasoline being produced from petroleum and the increased mileage being secured per gallon.

According to an investigation by Motor, there are 1,700,000,000 gallons of automobile gas refined each year and only 2,000,000 motor cars to use it.

Chemists employed by large gasoline refiners say that they are doubling the gasoline production by improved refining methods, which have replaced the wasteful ways of a few years ago.

GOODRICH EXPORTS TIRES

The B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O., recently shipped a large quantity of tires to Japan to be used on jinrikishas. Both solid and pneumatic tires are used. The pneumatics are designed for the best grade of this type of vehicle and come with the standard safety tread now being so widely advertised by this company.

The Far East offers an almost unlimited field for both the automobile and tire manufacturer. The possibilities of the tire business in Asia are just beginning to be realized, and the Asiatic agencies of the B. F. Goodrich Co. promise to do a large volume of business.

Although labor is far cheaper in Asia than in America, yet one good American workman is worth 10 Asiatic laborers in capacity and ability to turn out a finished piece of work. The skill and proficiency of Goodrich workmen, plus the facilities of a highly efficient factory organization, is perhaps the main reason why they can turn out a better tire than foreign tire makers, and offer it at such a fair price.

BOUGHT TWELVE TRUCKS

Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago have bought 12 Packard three-ton trucks to add to their equipment. This addition to the Field fleet represents in itself an investment of more than $40,000. Since December, 1908, the Chicago store's officials have purchased 21 Packard trucks, the latest purchase making a total of 33.

The present order is the thirteenth "repeat" order for Packards.

This company uses three-ton trucks for freight and furniture hauling, but especially for hauling route trunks from the retail store to the sub-delivery stations from which parcel deliveries are made.

MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS PLAY FOR MOTOR CAR MEN

Last Tuesday the Overland Automobile Co., through its president, John N. Willys, declared a holiday for its 10,000 employes and they were entertained at the expense of the company by a special game of baseball played by the Athletics and Cubs, solely for their benefit.

The men, escorted by six bands, were taken to the ball park. The score was 8 to 7 in favor of the Cubs. Both teams had their regular lineup. It is probable that this is the first time that major league ball teams ever played a private game under such conditions. The automobile men were paid full time for their afternoon off.

SELL SPARK PLUGS IN TEN CENT STORE

It has been said the five and ten cent stores would eventually sell automobiles. It has remained for the American five and ten cent store at Sixth street and Washington avenue, to start the ball rolling. They recently installed in their 25-cent section a motor cycle and motor car spark plug department, in which they offer plugs, worth, they claim, up to $1.50, for 25 cents.

◆

JAPS ADOPT MOTOR CAR

Japan, at first slow to adopt the motor car, is now taking very kindly to the automobile, and in fact during the past two years the industry has made very rapid progress in all the countries of the Far East. Glowing reports of this advance are made by Henry W. Andrews, Yokohama agent for the Cadillac, who is visiting in California.

"Two years ago," declares Mr. Andrews, "there were not 100 motor cars in Japan. This year more than 1500 are registered.

"The aversion to the motor car which was so apparent a short time ago is rapidly disappearing. Not many years ago the sight of a motor car on the streets of any but the large cities brought forth storms of protest, usually accompanied by stones hurled at the driver and occupants of the offending car. Happily this has entirely disappeared."

◆

WATCH YOUR TIRES.

"In using automobile tires, as in playing golf, long driving is highly desirable," says the golf expert of the Ajax tire firm. "Good length on the drive means a lot to the man on the links; it means no less to the man who is paying for his casings

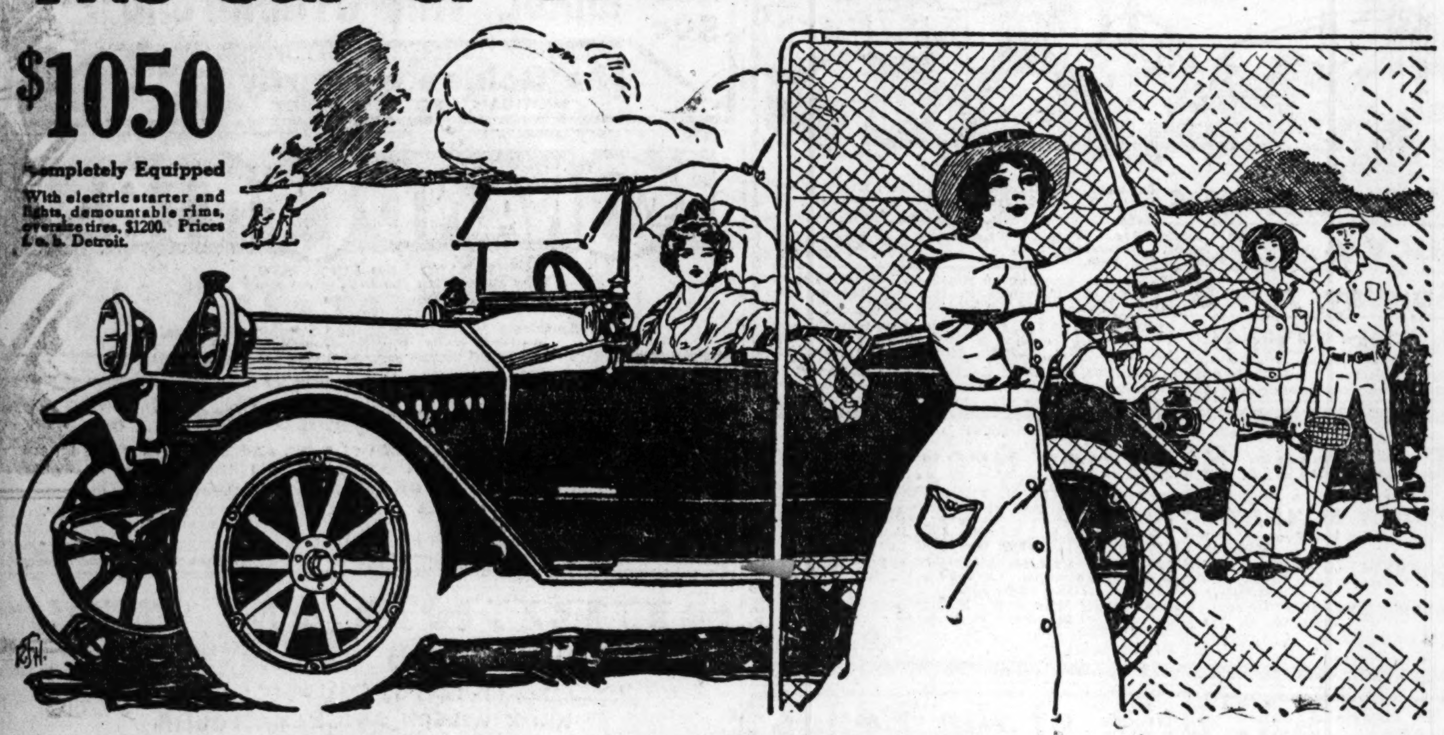
"There are more points of similarity betwen golfing and tire using than that. Look out for the slice. The slice in driving comes from cutting across the ball. It cuts distance off the drive. Slices and cuts in the tire tread take distance of the tire mileage.

"Keep your eye on the ball, they say in golf. Keep your eye on the bill, they say in tire providing. When the head comes up, you miss your shot in golf. When the bill mounts up with the tires, you don't miss your shot, you pay for it.

"Putting a pull on the ball is a good thing for distance in golf. But it doesn't take any pull to get distance with tires when ordinary care is used." affirms the general manager of the Ajax-Grieb Rubber Co.

Hupmobile

The car of The American Family



$1050

Completely Equipped

The Why of Hup Economy

That the Hup costs less to run is not just an accident.
The reason goes back to Hup quality and Hup engineering.
To the small-bore, long-stroke motor, with its exceptional power and economy.
To the fine materials used in the motor, and every other vital part, making repairs and replacements few and rare.
To advanced and sound engineering principles, accompanied by the utmost care and skill in the shops; to nicety of fit and exact co-ordination of parts.

Ask Any Hupmobilist

The Hup could not merit its fame as "The Car of the American Family" were its upkeep not well within reach of the average family.
It could not be called the "best car of its class in the world" if its construction were poor or faulty or weak.
All over the world owners praise Hup sturdiness and strength, and Hup lesser running cost.
They buy second and third Hups on the strength of their complete satisfaction with the first.
The average Hup owner's experience is an open book.
You can easily satisfy yourself as to how the car is regarded.
See the Hup dealer, if you don't know an owner.

Concerning the Intrinsic Price of the Overland and the Inflated Price of Some Other Cars

PROBABLY the most confusing problem every automobile buyer faces is the wholesale manner in which many automobile dealers seem to willingly cut prices.

In fact this evil has grown so bad of late that some explanation is necessary.

In the automobile business, the fault does not lay entirely with the dealer. It can be traced, directly, to the manufacturer. And here is how it is worked out:

Many manufacturers place a price on their car which is anywhere from 20% to 30% above its intrinsic value. Thus they figure they can give the dealer a high theoretical discount (which he cannot earn) as well as a high price (which he cannot get) so that he (the dealer) can juggle the price around to his heart's content, and, by offering his product at an apparently cut price can deceive the public into believing they are saving some money. Or else they leave the price alone and throw in an extra tire or two all of which amounts to the same thing.

Right down in his heart the manufacturer knows that in order to meet competition the dealer must cut the advertised price. Thus the manufacturer thinks that because the dealer can slightly cut this inflated price it will act as a great inducement to the buyer. The trick being, that because the dealer cuts the swollen price the buyer is supposed to be duped into believing he is getting a bargain—whereas exactly the opposite is true.

For instead of getting more for the money the buyer still gets less for more money.

The car—the price of which fluctuates at the will or whim of the dealer on the pretense or subterfuge of effecting a saving—is a good car NOT to buy.

Beware of the dealer who has a fluctuating scale of prices. He is a good man to stay away from. By necessity any car that he handles must have a fluctuating value and must have back of it a fluctuating service.

Can you go into John Wanamaker's in New York and attempt to strike a bargain?

Can you go into Marshall Field's in Chicago and start to haggle over the price of anything?

If you want a Big Ben clock, a Victrola, a Howard Watch, a Steinway Piano, a Gillette Safety Razor, or any one of a hundred other staple articles—haven't you got to pay the advertised price which is fixed at its source of manufacture?

So it is with the Overland car. The price is fixed at the factory. The price is made as low as it can be made. Value considered—none are lower.

The fact that the Overland price is maintained in spite of pretty keen competition is pretty good evidence of the stability of our dealers and the faith the public have in the Overland car itself.

Even the cut prices of other manufacturers are usually above our staple prices.

We have but one logical inducement to offer—the car itself at the advertised price—no more—no less.

The fact that we are shipping over 5000 cars a month—the fact that we are doing more business than any of those offering inflated car values—the fact that we do more business in one month than some manufacturers do in twelve months—proves that our policy must be fundamentally correct, and that the policy of some of the others must be fundamentally incorrect.

Careful comparison with other cars will show that a car of the Overland quality and mechanical efficiency offers much greater intrinsic value for less money than any other similar car in the world.

We say again—beware of the dealer who approaches you with a cut from his price. He is endeavoring to deceive you into thinking you are saving money.

We want you to become acquainted with the Overland. Come in and see us. Thorough demonstration — any time—any place.

UNDERWOOD SEES A FAT TREASURY, NOT A DEFICIT

SURPLUS IN TREASURY

First Year of Tariff Law Will Bring Gain of $26,000,000 Over Payne Act.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Representative Oscar Underwood, author of the tariff act, today gave the lie to the politicians who have been howling calamity in the last few weeks, and especially to those who have been declaring the Democratic tariff a failure as a revenue producer.

The Democratic leader told the House that the receipts under the Underwood act for the first year would be $733,000,000, while the receipts under the Payne law in 1913 were only $724,000,000.

He also laid another ghost when he laughed at the statement that bonds would have to be issued because of decreasing income, and declared that even with the $35,000,000 special expenditures for the Panama Canal completion, the Treasury would be in a fat condition.

Underwood advised the appropriation of an extra half million to be used in collecting the income tax, stating that the treasury would receive from fifteen to twenty-five times that amount in taxes that are now withheld.

Income Tax Figures.

"Although the returns from the income tax this year will not reach the maximum," said Underwood, "I think I can demonstrate that the ordinary returns that will be collected from the income tax and the corporation tax in a normal year will amount to more than $100,000,000.

"A cost of collection of $1,500,000 a year will not exceed the amount that it costs us to collect the ordinary internal revenue taxes today.

"When the recent tariff bill was written the committee estimated that receipts from the customs dues the first year would amount to $270,000,000. That amount already has been largely exceeded by the returns.

Compared With Payne Law.

"The receipts for customs dues between the present law and the last year of the Payne law will amount to the difference between $318,000,000 and $292,000,000 or about $26,000,000.

"The Treasury reports that at the end of this fiscal year the internal revenue will amount to about $309,000,000, which is a falling off of $8,000,000 in our estimates. But it is equal to the amount of the internal revenue taxes that were received under the last year of the Payne law, exclusive of the corporation tax.

"Now, as to whether or not there will be a deficit in the Treasury, as I have said the total receipts will amount to $733,000,000 and the total ordinary disbursements for this year will amount to $703,000,000. But gentlemen will say that does not include the expenditures for the Panama Canal, and it does not.

"The Treasury advises me that they will expend on the canal this year $35,000,000. With $30,000,000 of surplus over ordinary receipts and disbursements and $35,000,000 to be expended in Panama Canal, it leaves $5,000,000 that has got to be raised for the Panama Canal expenditures.

"I want to say that $5,000,000 and vastly more is in the Treasury today in the way of a surplus, and the United States does not have to borrow from anybody to pay it.

"In the course of the next year expenditures on the Panama Canal will practically pass away. There is nothing in the story of a deficit in the Treasury."

STORES WILL CLOSE EARLY

Several Firms Start Tomorrow With Shorter Hours.

Instead of waiting until the beginning of July, as is customary, a number of stores, on account of the present spell of hot weather, will, beginning tomorrow, close at 5 o'clock and at 1 o'clock on Saturdays. The closing hour has hitherto been 6 o'clock, and the store have kept open Saturday afternoons. The following companies will observe the new order:

THIEVES GET CASH BOX

Edward Boeschenstein, a hardware merchant at 1710 South Broadway, told the police yesterday that someone stole a cashbox, containing $135 from the store, shortly after noon.

Boeschenstein said a man tendered a $20 bill after making a 15-cent purchase, and that almost immediately afterward two other men entered and got him to show them goods in the rear of the store. He said that later he found that his cashbox, kept near the front of the store, had disappeared.

NEW HAVEN MUST SELL B. & M. STOCK BY JULY 15

Attorney-General Fixes Time Limit for Separation of the Roads.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Unless the Massachusetts Legislature gives its speedy approval of a changed plan under which the New Haven Railroad may dispose of the Boston & Maine, the filing of a suit by the Federal Government to separate the two lines seems imminent.

Chairman Howard Elliott of the New Haven called at both the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Department of Justice today to discuss New Haven affairs. The position of the directors of the New Haven was made clear in a resolution adopted by them stating they would not be willing to have Boston railway holding company dispose of the Boston & Maine stock if the Massachusetts Legislature insisted that each certificate should be stamped with the provision that the stock might be taken over by the Commonwealth at a price to be fixed by agreement or by a court.

In the opinion of the New Haven directors, this provision makes the shares unsalable and would put the company in a worse position than it would be were it compelled to sell the Boston & Maine stock under a decree of the Federal Court.

July 15 is the time limit Attorney-General McReynolds fixed within which the separation must be effected under the agreement entered into between the New Haven officials and the Department of Justice.

"DEAD MAN'S HOLE" GETS SEASON'S SECOND VICTIM

Valent Murcos, 31 years old, was drowned at 4:30 p. m. Friday in Dead Man's Hole, East Madison. He is the second man to be drowned there this summer. Since the pool was formed by the flood of 1903, about 35 persons have been drowned in it and only a few of the bodies have been recovered.

Murcos was a member of a party of 25 or 30 who went bathing in the pool on leaving their work at a foundry. He had been in the water only a few minutes when he sank. His name was learned from an accident insurance policy found in his clothing. His companions, after searching for the body until 9 o'clock, offered a reward of $50 for its recovery.

HOPE INCREASES OF REORGANIZING CLAFLIN STORES

THREE PLANS OUTLINED

Creditors Urge That Every Effort Be Made to Conserve Assets of Retail Stores.

NEW YORK, June 27.—With the noteholders' committee acting as a funnel for claims pouring in from banks all over the country, there were today increasing hopes of regeneration for the H. B. Claflin Co. and its string of dry good stores.

Confidence in the ultimate success of some reorganization plan which would put the crippled company on its feet was manifested in the attitude of Gregg and McGovern, counsel who filed involuntary petitions in bankruptcy for some of the creditors and the suits of equity brought against the receivership on Thursday.

A statement was issued today in behalf of the merchandise creditors urging that the assets of the retail stores be guarded wherever possible.

Would Prevent Liquidation.

"The commercial paper held by the noteholders," says thes statement, "is in most cases, as we are informed, of promissory notes made by various retail department stores throughout the country which were controlled by the H. B. Claflin Co. and which paper was made payable to H. B. Claflin Co. and was by it discounted with its endorsement.

"It is, therefore, of greatest importance, both to merchandise creditors and to noteholders, to see to it that affairs of these retail stores throughout the country are so managed as to prevent ruinous liquidation and destruction of assets."

While no definite plans have been decided upon for the reorganization of the H. B. Claflin Co., three possibilities are said to be under consideration.

The first of these provides for an actual consolidation of the Claflin chain of stores, instead of having the union vested in stock ownership by John Claflin. This plan would make the New York house in effect a purchasing agency for the retail stores and cut it off from relations with any other stores.

The second plan would retain the strong membership of the group of stores and provide for the liquidation of the others.

The third proposal provides for the taking over of the stores by the banks of the cities in which they are located The banks would then determine whether liquidation was wise or whether individual reorganization should be brought about.

Statement in Ten Days.

J. B. Martindale and Frederick A Juillard, the receivers, expect to be able to present a condensed statement of the affairs of the H. B. Claflin Co. to the creditors in about ten days. In the meantime the various committees representing the note holders, merchandise creditors and others are co-operating with Claflin, with a view of prompt reorganization.

It was stated today that when the report of the receivers' accountants is made public it will show a substantial part of the company's loans were made to it by employes.

A suggestion of this practice came before Judge Hand yesterday, when attorneys for the receivers applied to the court for the release of $707.04 held in the moneys of the Defender Manufacturing Co., a Claflin subsidiary.

This company employed 350 girls. Each summer they set aside 25 or 50 cents a week for a vacation fund. This money was deposited with the company. Judge Hand signed the order of release, assuring the girls the immediate use of this money.

Receiver Is Named for Store in Grand Rapids.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 27.—John A. Hengerer, manager of the Spring Dry Goods Co. of this city, a Claflin store, has been appointed receiver of the concern by Circuit Judge William B. Brown. It is set forth that "the action is taken for the conservation of the company's assets and the proper protection of all interests."

Receiver Will Continue Business of Altoona Store.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 27.—Kline Brothers' department store of this city was today placed in charge of a receiver following the financial difficulties of the H. B. Claflin Co. of New York City, of which the local concern is a subsidiary. W. F. Gage, the store's manager, was appointed the receiver. The business will be conducted without interruption.

1314 POUNDS OF LEAN MEN BEAT TON OF FAT

Two thousand pounds of fat men were defeated by 1314 pounds of lean men in the annual baseball game for charity in Maplewood yesterday afternoon. The score was 21 to 18.

It required three hours and 27 minutes to play the game and when it was finished some of the Fats were not so heavy as when it started.

The Fats started out like winners and had a lead of eight runs early in the game, but when the heat began to tell on them they were easily defeated.

Orvill Pier and Ernest Kitchell were the Fats' pitchers and J. C. Voorhees and Justice A. D. Willecken did the twirling for the Leans. A big crowd watched the game.

"DR." BRADY TELLS OF HIS ARREST IN WASHINGTON

NEW YORK, June 27.—Press agents who are willing to stand a "pinch" in the interest of their beloved publicity may not be as common as trolley cars, but they are some frequent, nevertheless. But the press agent who goes out of the way and tries to set the scene so his arrest is inevitable are not so numerous. It remained for John Thomas Brady, who has been mentioned once or twice in the public prints of St. Louis, to say nothing of casual police reports, to strive desperately and to keep on striving until he had succeeded, to get arrested in the hope of gaining the publicity, which is so dear to the heart of the P. A. and so essential to the pertinacity with which he holds onto his job.

John Thomas, of course, being his own employer, is sure of his job., whether he gets into print or into jail, but if he doesn't get into print his job isn't worth much and he resigns instead of being fired.

All of which leads up to the arrest of John Thomas in Washington last Thursday, his being held in a bond of $10 (here's where the force in St. Louis gets a laugh) and his forfeiture of his bond. John Thomas, as he used to be, or Dr. T. J. Brady, proprietor, hornblower and salesman for "nature's" (meaning John Thomas Brady's) vegetable soap, which is made of pure vegetable oils and contains no animal fats or other contaminations which are liable to harbor infections, and which is wholly incapable of voting more than eight times in a single primary.

Dr. Brady in Washington.

For purely commercial purposes, Dr. J. T. Brady visited Washington early this week. Among the prospective customers on his horizon was the House of Representatives. He called on Jerry South, Sergeant-at-Arms, staunch Democrat and friend, and wanted to sell him some soap. But the Hon. Jerry has just heard about the President's speech about the new charter of comemrcial freedom which would keep Congress in session until the antitrust bills were passed and soap didn't appeal to his soul.

He was thinking of soapless baths where the surf surges high when John Thomas irrupted himself into the situation and the Hon. Jerry didn't like the interruption.

John Thomas opened negotiations by suggesting that from all he had been hearing throughout his tour of the country it was time for the House of Representatives to buy some soap. The Hon. Jerry was unsympathetic.

"Soap!" he answered, "Why, we have enough soap around here to last two years; and your soap is no good anyhow."

This was getting John Thomas on a tender spot (he, himself, is authority for the statement he has one, and that he usually keeps a rubber band around it), and he lost his temperature.

John Thomas Gets Going.

"What do you know about soap?" he flared. "You never used any in your life until four years ago when you began priming yourself for a Federal job. Why, I could crack hickory nuts on your heels, the way they're Harveyized. You never wore a pair of shoes until you were 30 years old."

For some reason or other, this peeved the Hon. Jerry. He snapped his fingers and a couple of the House special officers came on the run.

"To the booby hatch with this guy," or words to that effect, said the Hon. Jerry, whereupon the specials laid violent hands on John Thomas for a moment. But there were other specials, and there was only one John Thomas, and when all the reserves had been called out the eminent St. Louis chirurgeon and soap specialist was finally borne away.

And as they turned the key in the lock those who paused to listen heard the last cry:

"You're a fine bunch of stiffs, ain't you? Thirty-seven of you to pinch one little guy. And I wouldnt' trust one of you in a stone quarry without having you handcuffed."

NEGRO IN FRANK CASE DENIED A NEW TRIAL

James Conley, Under Sentence of Year in Prison, Serves Notice of Appeal.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 27.—James Conley, the negro factory sweeper sentenced to serve one year in prison as an accessory after the fact to the murder of Mary Phagan, for which crime, Leo M. Frank now is under sentence of death, today was refused a new trial by Judge Ben. H. Hill of the Fulton County Superior Court.

Conley's attorney served notice of appeal.

LORIMER BANK EVIDENCE MISSING FROM STATE OFFICE

Former Senator Paynter Owed Bank $29,150 When Illinois Senator Was Ousted.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Disappearance from the office of James J. Brady, State Auditor, of documentary evidence bearing on the failure of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank was reported today.

One of the documents missing is the report of J. H. Rife, a State bank examiner, who made the first report that the bank was in a shaky condition. This report he submitted to L. L. Bacchus, then chief clerk in the State Auditor's office. The late James S. McCullough was then State Auditor. Rife resigned to become secretary of the La Salle Trust and Savings Bank and vice-president of the Broadway Street Bank, another of the Lorimer-Munday string. Bacchus became a vice-president of the La Salle street bank.

Maclay Hoyne, State's Attorney, and James Wilkerson, United States District Attorney, both are anxious to get the missing papers for use before grand juries.

Loan to Brady Alleged.

Recent information given Hoyhe in connection with a suit against Brady was to the effect that the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank contributed $2500 to Brady's campaign fund and he is said to have obtained a $5000 loan from the bank later.

After the bank had been closed by George V. Harkins, a State bank examiner, a demand was made on Brady for Harkin's report by Hoyne. Brady refused, it is alleged, but the information was obtained by the appearance of Harkin before the grand jury.

A detailed statement of the transactions of Thomas H. Paynter, former United States Senator from Kentucky, with the Lorimer-Munday bank from Nov. 1, 1911, to Oct. 1, 1912, when it operated under a national charter, was made public in the District Attorney's office.

On July 1, 1912, the report shows that Paynter owed the bank $29,150. Two weeks later on July 14, Lorimer was ousted from the Senate by a vote of 55 to 28, Paynter voting with the minority in favor of Lorimer. The record as given out by the United States District Attorney purports to show that Paynter made no reduction in the balance between July 2 and Sept. 30.

On Oct. 22, when the bank became a State institution, the balance against the former Kentucky Senator had been reduced to $21,650 and the account was placed on the books of the State bank. Paynter made various payments up to June 2 last, when the account was wiped off, but he started a new one by obtaining a loan of $2676. Ten days later the bank failed. In a statement yesterday Paynter said that his note would be paid on demand.

Good Securities Substituted Is Charge.

Charges have been made to Federal officials that good securities were substituted for worthless paper in the vaults of the bank when it had a national charter to enable it to pass the last inspection of Government examiners. These securities were withdrawn as soon as the examiners left the bank, it is alleged.

City officials expressed curiosity over the identity of the collectors of the three-fourths of one per cent interest paid on municipal deposits which did not find its way into the city treasury. Two and one-quarter per cent went to the city and the extra fraction was characterized by the City Comptroller as "graft." The bank's books show that between Jan. 1, 1913, and the date the bank closed the three-quarters of one per cent amounted to $6709, that it was paid out, but did not name the beneficiary.

Loan to Ward Investigated.

It is charged that the bank paid the extra interest to obtain its full allowance of deposits from the city, which amounted to $650,000.

Assistant State's Attorney Case sought to learn if an unsecured loan of $168,000 to C. E. Ward, director of the bank and secretary to William Lorimer when he was in the Senate, was in reality a loan to the General Securities Co. of which Ward is president. The loan was made within a month after the securities company was organized with a capital of $25,000. The company handled the stock of Lorimer-Munday banks and other concerns they controlled. The prosecutor also is investigating a loan of $25,000 to a railway supply company. The only record found of the company is that an application was made for a license which has never been issued.

Schedules Show Lorimer Owes East Alton Bank $168,000.

SURINGFIELD, Ill., June 27.—Incomplete schedules were filed this afternoon in the United States District Court by Charles B. Munday and J. C. Munday, individually, and as co-partners under the firm name of C. B. Munday & Co. of Litchfield. Attorney for the defunct firm asked the Court for an extension of 30 days' time in which to complete the schedule.

The two banking institutions named in the schedules were the Peoples' Bank of East Alton and the Smithboro Bank of Smithboro. It is thought that the total liabilities of the two institutions will amount to $800,000, with assets running half that amount. Both banks are private institutions. Unsecured loans to the Lorimer banks, William Lorimer and the Munday Brothers are said in the schedule to amount to $330,000.

The schedules show the Smithboro bank to be in fairly good condition, while the accounts of the Alton institution as set forth in the schedule show that C. B. Munday loaned to himself and J. C. Munday $165,000 with doubtful security. William Lorimer also owes the bank $168,000 on open account, according to the schedules.

Although the assets of the bank are figured to run over $400,000, it is thought that this amount is entirely too high, and that the sum cannot be realized. The Litchfield Mill & Elevator Co., a Munday concern, is shown to have borrowed $50,000 on an unsecured note. Stocks in the other Lorimer banks which have been closed, compose a large amount of the securities listed. The two banks owned stock in the Broadway State bank, La Salle Street bank, Calumet bank and the Ashland-Twelfth bank. The East Alton bank also endorsed the notes of the Lorimer-Gallagher company to the extent of $115,000.

To Erect $40,000 Mausoleum.

Having completed a $92,000 mausoleum in Alton, Harry J. Fish, president of the Madison County Mausoleum Co., and J. M. Shortal, the designer, came to Edwardsville Friday to erect a $40,000 mausoleum in Woodlawn Cemetery.

4500 DOCTORS DISCUSS HEALTH AT ATLANTIC CITY

American Medical Association Strives to Teach Public How to Prolong Life.

ATLANTIC CITY N. J., June 27.—To educate the public regarding medical matters in order to prolong life, the whole administrative power of the American Medical Association will be brought to bear during the coming year. Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, the newly elected president of the association, made this statement at the close of the congress.

For the first time 4500 practitioners assembled and discussed matters of public importance, child labor laws, legislation regarding health, social service and topics having direct bearing upon the general welfare as well as the physical welfare of the nation.

This treatment is said to have acquired a wonderful reputation throughout the East, owing to its peculiar propensity to fortify the nerve force and generate health and a consequent personal magnetism, so essential to the happiness of every normal human being. It is claimed to be a blessing to those who are physically impaired; gloomy, despondent, nervous or who have trembling of the limbs, dizziness, heart palpitation, cold hands and feet, insomnia, fear without cause, timidity in venturing and general inability to act rationally as others do. Also of vast benefit to writers, professional men, office workers and the victims of society's late hours and over-indulgence in wines, liquors, etc.

By obtaining the treatment at some well-stocked pharmacy, no one need know of another's trouble while the treatment has been widely prescribed and dispensed heretofore by physicians and pharmacists, the grain tablets are so prepared with full directions for self administration that it is wholly unnecessary to pay a physician for prescribing them. Just ask for three-grain Cadomene tablets, begin their use and soon all the joy of a healthy body, sound nerves and strength will be felt.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Makes Hairs Disappear Almost Like Magic

(Toilet Talks)

The woman whose beauty is marred with superfluous hair or fuzz will gladly welcome the new home treatment for removing objectionable growths from the face, neck or arms, because this method is quick and certain in its action and so simple that anyone can use it in the privacy of her own home with entirely satisfactory results.

A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water, then spread over the hairy surface. In two or three minutes it is removed and with it comes every trace of hair. After the skin is washed and dried it will be clear, spotless and of a velvety softness. This is a safe, harmless method and unless the growth is very stubborn, one application is sufficient; but to avoid disappointment be sure to get the delatone in an original package.—ADV.

Red Blotchy Skin Easily Remedied

One of Our Daily Perils

When your blood is overheated the congestion or inflammation makes straight for the skin. Then is the time you need that famous blood purifier S. S. S. The skin is a modified form of mucous membrane and it is in these membranes that impurities in the blood are prepared for expulsion. S. S. S. has a most remarkable action in assisting the membranes to eliminate those secretions which are the result of inflammation whether they take the form of catarrh or red patches on the skin. Its cooling, purifying effect is almost immediate since in three minutes after entering the blood it traverses the entire circulation. It so acts upon the cellular tissues in the skin that each cell rejects any invading germ and selects only its own essential nutriment.

These facts are brought out in a strikingly illustrated book "What the Mirror Tells," mailed free by the Swift Specific Co., 108 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist and thus insure pure blood and consequent health. Beware of imitations and disappointing substitutes. —ADV.

$200,000 PAID FOR LOT ON CHESTNUT AND 12TH STREETS

$200,000 ANNEX FOR NEW ST. REGIS HOTEL

Madame Peugnet Buys Residence on Lindell Boulevard for Home, Paying Nearly $40,000 for Place That Originally Cost $70,000.

High temperature has had a demoralizing effect on realty and building operations. Most of the deals announced today were practically completed two or three weeks ago, those arranged last week being isolated and of a miscellaneous character. Many prospective purchasers, however, are in the field, the indications being, according to agents, that the St. Louis realty market the remainder of the summer will be flush with belated business.

The Charles Hezel Investment Co., according to Cornet & Zelbig, its agents, [illegible] purchased the northwest corner of [illegible]elfth and Chestnut streets. [illegible] company is composed of the [illegible] of the late Charles Hezel, who [illegible] a fortune in the milling [illegible] in St. Louis.

Another Skyscraper Proposed.

While the purchase was made as a speculation, the purchaser, it is understood, has capital available for a skyscraper commercial building, if the right tenant is forthcoming.

The site, which was owned by the Turner estate, has a frontage on each street of 100 feet. It is occupied by an old two-story building, which yields a fair return on the investment.

The consideration was not disclosed, but it is said that the sale was at the rate of $2000 a front foot, or a total of $200,000.

August A. Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, represented by James Darst, as has already been announced, has purchased the block immediately south as a site for a 20-story hotel building, as a memorial to his father, Adolphus Busch. The block includes the southwest corner of Chestnut and the northwest corner of Market and Chestnut streets.

$2000 a Front Foot Is Paid.

The price paid for the former was $1750 a foot, and for the latter $2000 a foot, both prices being on the basis of the Twelfth street frontage. The Chestnut street corner was owned by Frank A. Ruf, and the Market street by the Turner estate.

Deeds conveying to Busch the titles to the ground were filed during the week.

Hezel's purchase will be opposite the Chestnut street entrance of the Busch Hotel Memorial, and accordingly, it is believed, it will be greatly enhanced in value.

Traffic between the hotel and Union Station, the presumption is, will be principally through Chestnut street, Market street being handicapped with car tracks. Chestnut street, constructed of asphaltum, now is only secondary to Locust street as a vehicular and auto thoroughfare.

Hotel to Feature Parkway.

Architects Widman & Walsh and Tom Barnett have combined their genius in order that the Busch Memorial may be introduced as a feature of the proposed Central Parkway between Grand avenue and Twelfth street.

The Culver Realty Co., of which W. W. Culver is president, has arranged with Edward K. Love for a loan of $50,000, which is to apply toward the erection of a $200,000 annex to the new St. Regis Hotel building, at the northwest corner of Chestnut and Fourteenth streets. The site, having a frontage of [illegible] feet on Chestnut, was purchased by Culver a month or two ago, through Henry E. Bartling, at $500 a front foot.

The hotel, of which Elmer E. Campbell is president, will be strictly modern and fireproof.

Woman Buys Lindell Home.

The leading purchases of the week include that by Mme. Peugnet of 4480 Lindell boulevard, a 13-room house with a lot [illegible] feet. The sale was promoted by John Bull in conjunction with Kent Jarvis, agent for Mrs. Claus Veiths. While the price paid had not been made public, it is understood that it was between $35,000 and $40,000. The original cost of the house was $70,000.

Mme. Peugnet, who is in her eighty-seventh year and who now is living at the Washington Hotel, soon will take possession of the Lindell boulevard house. This is only one of the many recent instances of former Lindell boulevard mansions being reclaimed by wealth and aristocracy.

A factory building at [illegible] and 2944 North Spring avenue was sold by the McNair & Harris Realty Co. to Charles C. [illegible], president of the Carter Carburetor Co. The grantor was the Kerens-Leesburg Shoe Co. The lot, [illegible] feet, is occupied by a three-story building equipped for factory purposes.

AARON FULLER

Grounds Occupy 52 Acres on the Meramec River in One of the Most Beautiful Spots in the County.

WHILE the whole nation is paying tribute to its independence on July 4, the 2500 employes of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. will have an independent celebration of their own that marks a unique era in the history of those who toil in department stores. This celebration means the opening of the Grand-Leader's Country Club that covers 52 acres, near Fern Glen, St. Louis County. The place is considered one of the most beautiful spots for a hundred miles around St. Louis, and its selection is entirely due to Robert P. Wilcox, superintendent of the store. After Mr. Wilcox had selected the site, Aaron Fuller, one of the trio from which the firm gets its name, declared that, in his opinion, the property was worth twice the price paid—$55,000.

Now all of the members of the firm and the heads of the various departments are as enthusiastic as Mr. Fuller.

First to Start Uplift Work.

The Grand-Leader is said to have been the first department store in the United States to start the uplift movement for the benefit of its employes. From then until now the firm has been steadily progressing in this direction under the leadership of Aaron Fuller and the active co-operation of Mr. Wilcox.

THE scenery all about the Grand-Leader Country Club is beautiful. The buildings, one for the single girls and women, another for the single men and still another for the married folks, are 250 feet above the winding Meramec River, where it skirts along the Missouri Pacific Railroad. The grounds are thickly wooded on all sides, and there are steep paths to the river bank, across which lies the famous Ranken farm.

Buildings Are Artistic.

The buildings themselves are extremely artistic in design and the whole color scheme harmonizes with the wooded surroundings. Several acres have been placed under cultivation for the visitors. And then there are to be chickens galore, six horses, four cows, several goats and hogs. So that there will be nothing of the farm life missing. All of the lawns are fitted up with rockaway steel swings, and everywhere on the lawns will be a plentiful supply of hammocks, rustic benches and other comfort-giving devices. On all sides there will be an extra supply of durable and artistic furniture, so that any emergency will be easily met, no matter how great the holiday crowds are.

ONE of the big features of the grounds is the attention that has been paid to the arrangements for athletics. There are three tennis and handball courts, enclosed in wire, a baseball field and an eighth of a mile running track. The bathing and boating facilities are equal to any inland summer resort.

Comfort on All Sides.

All of the buildings are detached and so arranged that no matter from what direction a breeze comes it will be beneficial. The kitchen is so large and well equipped that it can care for the entire 2500 employes should they all appear at the same time.

In the kitchen are a 20-foot range and a stove of the same size. The ice box, that is of the latest model and perfect in its enameling has a capacity of 1800 pounds.

In the girls' bungalow there are 2736 feet of floor space and 18 rooms. The porches cover 912 square feet and there are 13 retiring rooms.

Each sleeping room has two windows and is finished in yellow pine and mission oak. The beds are all of white enamel, with the latest patented springs and soft mattresses.

All of the chairs, dressers and chifforobes are made of solid oak, so that they will probably last for ages to come. Mission furniture is used throughout the porches of the various bungalows.

The arrangements in the boys' or single men's bungalow are the same as those for the girls, and the same kind of furniture is used.

THE dancing pavilion is 75x40 square feet and has a hard maple floor. It is constructed in the Colonial order and the interior is elaborate in its decorations. All around the building there are French windows, so arranged that they can be lowered to a point of giving the appearance of an open outdoor building.

The assembly hall has nearly 7000 square feet of floor space. The assembly or reading room is 38x38 feet. The porches are large and comfortable.

Arrangements have been made so that employes may get back and forth on the Missouri Pacific road in time for business in the morning and at the Country Club in the evening without inconvenience.

It sure will be a great Fourth of July for the Grand-Leader employes.

KATHMAR ACRES FAST BUILDING WITH NICE HOMES

Virtually one-fifth of Kathmar Acres, comprising 100 acres, and placed on the market only a few months ago, already has been absorbed. Four substantial houses, including those of Flint Murphy, J. E. Redford, Arthur L. Minor and August Barnes, are now building on the Acres, and plans are being made for many others.

Railway stations, according to the John J. Dowling company, owners of the land, have been installed every thousand feet along the subdivision, the cars of the Ferguson division of the United Railways, affording a 15-minute service, while the station of the Wabash Railway has been established at the northeast corner.

Many of the purchasers are gardening the Acres, the plot being of rich loam.

Kathmar Acres, as the name indicates, is a subdivision of acres located at the intersection of the Florissant division of the United Railways and the Wabash Railway, about one mile beyond Ramona Park. It extends from Scudder avenue on the south to the Wabash tracks on the north, a distance of more than a mile, and is bounded along the entire eastern edge by the tracks of the United Railways.

The entire district is high and rolling, offering a superb view of St. Louis County. The owners of Kathmar Acres, appreciating the growing demand of the public for acre tracts, as affording a suitable setting for a suburban home, and a sufficient amount of ground for lawns and gardens, have endeavored to meet the demand by laying out this 100-acre tract in plots of one acre or more each.

JOHN J. HAUER REALTY CO. OBTAINS NEW QUARTERS

The John J. Hauer Realty Co. removed yesterday to quarters in the new Lucas Building at 806 Chestnut. The new offices, which are on the third floor of the building, are among the smartest on Chestnut street.

The concern is one of the best known and most progressive in realty and financial circles.

F. H. Woods has also rented offices in the new Lucas Building.

GEORGE F. BERGFELD REALTY COMPANY.

The George F. Bergfeld Realty Co. reports the following sale: To Arthur J. Donnelly, new residence in Parkview, No. 6224 Berlin av., a 2½-story, tile roof, red brick; lot 64x151.

WALTER SCOTT REALTY CO.

Reports the following sale: For the account of Mrs. Jane Phillips to Clarence Lewis, [illegible] feet of Wacks subdivision, South Gore av., Webster Groves.

OLD CORNFIELD IS TRANSFORMED INTO CITY HOME TRACT

250 SITES FOR HOMES

The latest issue of "Service," the monthly magazine printed by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., contains an interesting article on the transformation of a farming tract into a city residence district, now in progress under the eyes of St. Louisans. The article is entitled "A City in the Making," and is as follows:

The great Pageant and Masque is now history. Those of us who witnessed this marvelous spectacle saw 150 years of city building. Pioneers with their crude implements, hampered by the elements, handicapped by poverty, harassed by wild beasts and wilder men, fought their way up from the river front. Then block by block and mile by mile, by slow accretion or by speculative bounds, the men of brains and money and muscle flung out to the summits of the western hills the steel and brick and concrete panorama which is to us St. Louis.

"It has been said that the universe can be mirrored in a drop of water. So, many of our readers will be interested at this time in a miniature city, a city in the making. At our western limits there is growing before our eyes and under our fingers another city unit—not haphazard nor by slow accretion, but with definite purpose, plentiful resources and all the cunning tools and implements of modern industrial life. It embodies and mirrors all that we have learned in that hundred and fifty years of city building.

Transformed in One Year.

"Something over a year ago, at the western end of Parkview, one of the finest residence parks in the country, there lay an uncouth cornfield. Built up solidly to its eastern line were the fine homes of this private park. On the hills adjoining it to the south were the magnificent buildings of Washington University and its wonderful campus, a perpetual park. On out beyond to the south were the miniature country palaces of the rich.

"Over this little farm of some 50 acres, weed grown, gully filled, comes a magic change. The great steam shovels begin to devour the hills, the dredges and the scrapers iron out the rough surface. By metes and bounds they outline the thoroughfares to be traversed by other generations. Deep beneath the surface begin to crawl the huge sewers, unlovely but necessary, and down under ground human spiders weave the iron webs, the secret pathways of the two giants, gas and electricity. The great crushers grind out their tons of concrete. Finally will come the graveled highways, the trees, the green sod, the finishing touches, and the wilderness is ready for the homemaker.

"The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. through its real estate department is planning and executing the work. Financial, physical, and engineering considerations have been worked out on paper. Physical obstacles have been peculiarly trying, legal difficulties have had to be straightened out. The tracks of the railway company have been removed and new rights of way given. The legality of deeds and quit claims, easements and partition suits, the accumulations of years, have been gone over. Finally the plan of marketing the ground, the sales campaign, has been outlined, practically two years ahead of time.

Made Into Permanent Homes.

"It is a simple matter to smooth over a level piece of ground and prepare it for an auction sale. The capable salesman can substitute promises and blueprints and imagination for the actual, money-eating improvements. But in this case the company had to keep in mind all the restrictions and limitations demanded to carry out the ideas of the owners, that here should be established a beautiful and permanent home place.

"The selling plan was inaugurated by taking some seventy scattered lots out of the total of 250 and disposing of them to two builders who have done much fine work in the better residential parts of the city. Under their contract of sale they are to receive the lots in finished condition and are to erect on each 50-foot lot a handsome home in keeping with the character of the place. So when the property is offered to the public the prospective purchaser is not only assured of finished improvements, but also gets an opportunity of seeing the class of houses that will surround him.

Making a New City.

"It is this work now in progress that Service invites its readers to see. This city in the making is only one more illustration of the innumerable ways in which a trust company serves its clients.

"There is something of interest to all of us. The man of an engineering turn of mind will see the highest type of work of its class, an ample sewer system, sanitary drainage, artistry in landscaping, the best of granitoiding and street work.

"The real estate investor will see those three great residence streets, Kingsbury, Waterman and Berlin, carried on out to the seventy hundreds and will recall as of yesterday when the fifty-threes and fifty-fives were pastures and wild land. He will note with interest the treatment of the 100-foot boulevard, the landscaped University Drive that elsewhere is an alley; the pipes for water and gas run into each lot. He will learn of the fifteen fine homes contracted for in advance, and will note the every evidence of slow, careful, permanent workmanship.

Thousands Spent for New Homes.

"The man who thinks only of material things will figure on the more than 250 new home sites made available for our increasing population, of the multiplied thousands of dollars to be spent for St. Louis materials and the vast sums to be distributed to St. Louis labor.

"And the artist—the artist will forget all this in the dream of a well-nigh perfect subdivision, with its panoramic view to the west and its great university to the south. He will picture Pennsylvania as the King's highway of the future and in fancy will see the giant dream child of Laclede striding from the cabins on the river bank, ever striding on and on to the west.

"So before our very eyes the dreamer dreams his dreams, the wizard with the cunning tools plans his plans, the toiler sweats and toils; another little city is in the making, and another unit is being added to that great chain of events that go to make up 'The City of Beautiful Homes.'"

SKYSCRAPERS TAKE REALTY MEN FROM GROUND FLOORS

Agents Say Rentals in Big Buildings Are Cheaper, More Conveniences Are Offered and Offices Are More Free From Disturbers.

Space in the big office buildings in downtown St. Louis is being absorbed more or less by realty and financial agencies that formerly adhered to ground floor quarters on Chestnut between Sixth and Twelfth streets, and on the lateral streets between Olive and Market streets.

This is due to the fact that the office buildings offer more modern accommodations and a greater degree of permanency, as well as to the fact that the rentals of the interior are by far less than those of the ground floor quarters. As a result skyscraper earnings have been materially increased.

Turning to Big Buildings.

Within the last two years the Wainwright and the Title Guaranty Trust buildings, at the southwest and the northwest corners of Chestnut and Eighth streets; the Liggett Building, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets; the Fullerton Building, at the southeast corner of Seventh and Pine streets, and the Navarre Building, at the southwest corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets, have claimed many of the leading agencies. The Chemical, Central National Bank, the Syndicate Trust, the Commercial Building and the Railway Exchange Building, the foremost Olive street skyscrapers, although somewhat removed from realty and financial circles, have also diverted some of the large agencies.

Getting Away From Pests.

"In the office buildings we are not harassed so much by the curbstone fellows and by salesmen and other ubiquitous gentry, who are constantly peering into our offices or eavesdropping on the ground floor fellows," said a prominent office building denizen.

It will be a matter of only a few years, it was declared, when practically all the realty and financial agencies will be quartered in the skyscrapers, as is the case in New York and in Chicago. Where a concern has a large rent roll, ground floors, it is argued, have the advantage over the office buildings. The highest rentals in St. Louis realty circles are realized from the ground floor offices of the Title Guaranty Trust, the Wainwright, the Liggett and the Fullerton Buildings, which offer light and heat day and night as needed.

Plans Do Not Attract.

Some joker has been trying to interest realty circles in plans for the erection on Twelfth and Chestnut streets of a building adapted exclusively for agencies. The project, however, was not given serious consideration.

Prominent members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange from time to time have also advanced ideas for a home building for the fraternity.

GIRL IS KILLED IN AUTO

She Is Burned to Death and Married Companion Injured.

BOSTON, June 27.—Miss Anna Powers was burned to death in an automobile accident in Saugus early this morning. Miss Powers was riding in the automobile of Oscar J. Mansur of 17 Blackwood street, who was himself seriously injured when the machine turned over, pinning the girl beneath the tonneau, and caught fire.

The couple was returning from the Fern Croft Inn at Middleton. Mansur is married and is in the automobile renting business. Miss Powers formerly was a telephone operator.

CHICAGO BANKS MERGE

Colonial Trust Taken Over by Dawes Central Trust.

CHICAGO, June 27.—The business of the Colonial Trust Co., with deposits of $5,000,000, was taken over by the Central Trust Co. here today.

The transaction increases deposits of the Central Trust Co., of which Charles G. Dawes, former Comptroller of the Currency, is president to $43,500,000.

WHALES NEAR NEW YORK

SANDY HOOK, N. J., June 27.—Capt. Thomas Keys of the tug Lament reported today that a school of whales was in the vicinity of the Scotland lightship off the Hook.

One whale, he said, was a hundred feet in length and came up spouting close alongside the Lament. Seldom are whales seen close to New York harbor.

BIG SPECIAL SALE PRESENTS HAYDEN'S BOULEVARD HEIGHTS

Speculators and Homeseekers Purchase Freely on Terms at $12 to $30 a Foot.

DEVELOPMENT IS RAPID

Property Along King's Highway in South St. Louis Is Enhanced With Boulevard's Progress.

Hayden's Boulevard Heights, on South King's highway, was formally presented yesterday afternoon, when a big special sale of this subdivision was launched.

The introduction of the subdivision, pronounced one of the most attractive both as to location and environments, was marked by the sale of scores of lots. The purchasers were speculators as well as homeseekers, the tract being in the heart of the most rapidly developing section of South St. Louis.

The lots, which have a uniform frontage of 30 feet, range in price from $12 to $30 a foot, the latter price being asked for the King's highway frontage. The sales are being made on the installment plan, with no taxes until 1915.

Hayden's Boulevard Subdivision, which has a frontage of from [illegible] to 2000 feet on King's highway, adjoins Southampton on the South.

Section Has All Improvements.

The prices at which it is being offered include sidewalks, streets and sewers, including the Rock Creek sewer which has been completed at an enormous cost and which serves this entire district. The grading and surface development of the property has been made by Harrington Bros., large contractors, under the direction of John T. Joyce, civil engineer and City Surveyor.

King's highway boulevard, that wonderful 100 foot thoroughfare connecting the north and south ends of St. Louis and forming the principal link in the boulevard system of the city as planned by the city planning commission, is almost completed.

There remains only one block on Gravois avenue from the end of the present construction to Loughborough avenue to complete the circle and make one of the grandest drive and automobile ways ever constructed by any municipality.

Boulevard Values Advance.

The completion of a boulevard system of this kind brings all the abutting property into prominence and means a rapid and continuous advance in values along the entire length of the boulevard. It also means the development for residence purposes of much beautifully located land heretofore considered inaccessible for this purpose and given over to gardening purposes.

Particularly is this true of property along that section of King's highway lying south of Devonshire avenue, where the Chouteau-Southampton car turns west from King's highway. Hayden's Boulevard Heights is located just two blocks south of Devonshire avenue, where it has the service of the Chouteau-Southampton car and the Cherokee car, both within two blocks of the property.

Looking east is a beautiful natural park of eight acres and beyond that the ground rises in a series of terraces as picturesque and attractive as is to be found anywhere.

Homes Built on Boulevard.

King's highway boulevard is the boulevard connecting the city's park system. It is familiar to all Forest Park visitors, but those who have not driven or motored over it to the south have missed a most interesting trip. Passing Tower Grove Park on the west side it extends south to Carondelet Park, north over Grand avenue to King's highway, east, which is one block south of Bates street, where it runs east to River View Park on the bluffs overlooking the Mississippi River. This eastern section of the boulevard has been grabbed by home builders almost at once and property on that part east of Grand avenue has advanced from $16 and $18 a foot in the last four years to $50 a foot today.

C. E. Hayden of the C. E. Hayden Real Estate Co., agents for Hayden's Boulevard Heights, has arranged for a sale of lots in Hayden's Boulevard Heights on Saturday and Sunday, June 27 and 28, and is advising home buyers to get out early and select their lots. The terms of sale will be made easy.

John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. will make loans to prospective builders for building purposes.

New members of the Executive Board are: Henry Spitzley, Detroit; William Huber, St. Louis, and George [illegible], Milwaukee.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BIG MERCANTILE FAILURE HAS ONLY SLIGHT EFFECT ON WALL STREET PRICES

LONDON IS HOPEFUL

Improved Investment Conditions in Paris Help Market Sentiment.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"President Wilson's assertion that good times are certainly at hand (if indeed times are not good already) met this week with a somewhat peculiar reception in financial markets. Everyone wants good times, and everyone will be glad to have the President's prediction exactly fulfilled. But there seemed to be just a trace of feeling that the good times were to be imposed on us simply and solely as a result of the trades commission bill, the railroad securities bill and the omnibus bill, to which is left such regulation as the other bills had overlooked.

"Good times must perhaps be thankfully accepted, even on condition of swallowing the bills; but it was impossible that there should be also a lurking doubt as to whether the good times, like the present bad times, must not be purely psychological.

"This mistrust is largely the fault of an over-used adjective. It is also partly result of skepticism concerning the reliability of the Department of Commerce as a discoverer of evidence of good times, when so strong a political inducement to discover them existed. Nevertheless, one begins to encounter those in the business community who believe that at least considerably better times may be at hand, even though not inspired by supplementary trust bills or the statistics of Secretary Redfield.

Stock Market Is Firm.

"Nothing could well have been more striking in its way than the reception of the Claflin failure by the stock exchanges and the banking community. Waiving entirely the question whether we have not yet a troublesome aftermath to undergo in the cleaning up of this formidable wreck, the fact will be recognized by everyone of experience that an intrinsically weak market or an intrinsically unsound banking or trade situation would have received last Thursday's news with a temporary panic. The calmness with which the actual announcement was received was conclusive proof of a fundamentally strong position.

"If this was the salient fact of the week, there was also one salient illusion. When the stock market broke, with a sudden great activity on Wednesday afternoon, Wall street knew at once that the financial world was at last giving logical response to Monday's intermountain rate decision. By Thursday morning, Wall street was as equally well aware that the financial world had been doing nothing of the kind; that the breaks in stocks of the day before had been on early knowledge of the impending receiverships. Thus the financial community is left largely in the dark as to what the market really does think of the intermountain case. Nor is this the first perplexity in that matter.

"It was in July, 1911, that the Interstate Commerce Commission itself made the ruling which the Supreme Court has now upheld. On the very next day a break of the utmost violence occurred on the Stock Exchange, followed by a long decline—all of the weakness being more disquieting because emphasized by European liquidation.

"This was apparently proof positive as to the effect of the ruling on finance. But it was not many weeks before Wall street, with the rest of the world, had learned that, at that very juncture, England and Germany were on the verge of an armed collision over the Morocco quarrel; that Sir Edward Grey had sent to the German Ambassador a message that must have been taken as an ultimatum, and that for some considerable time, it was doubtful what reply the imperial authorities would make.

"These are among the difficulties in the way of interpreting the Stock Exchange. It may even be a matter of conjecture whether Friday's recovery in stocks was primarily due to reassurance as to the scope of the Claflin trouble, or whether it was an instinctive sign in the face of a rather crucial test, that recovery in finance and trade was on the cards.

FOREIGN MARKETS ARE IN BETTER CONDITION

Paris Expects New French Loan to Be Heavily Oversubscribed.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 27.—The most encouraging factor in the European situation is the undoubted success with which the French Government loan will be placed, on the 7th of next month. That is already insured by the large over-subscription in advance from Paris and other markets. It is still impossible to say, however, whether the actual payments for the loan will decisively unloose the French public's hoarded money.

Moreover, quite apart from the interests of present Brazilian bondholders, the delay in completing negotiations for the Brazilian loan are highly embarrassing to French and British creditors of that country, on trade account. Prospects of the moment undoubtedly favor comfortable money conditions. But the outcome is still thought to depend so largely on the course of events in Brazil, Ulster and Paris that, until matters clear up in those quarters, no real return of confidence is possible.

The American Market.

The chief interest here in the Claflin failure centers on the question whether it must be regarded as indicative of general adverse conditions. American cables to us say no, but financial London thinks differently. There is no disposition to fasten the blame on the Washington authorities; nevertheless there is a feeling that the general tendency to penalize invested savings and capital, as distinguished from earned incomes, is occasioning chaos everywhere and that, combined with the exactions of labor, it tends to raise the cost of doing business, aggravating rather than relieving your social problems.

It is recognized that the successful inauguration of your banking system is facilitated by the present conditions of slack trade and easy money; but it is also considered impossible that contraction of credit to at least some extent can be avoided in connection with the subscription by national banks to the regional bank capital. Therefore, this week's renewal of your gold export movement has been distinctly deprecated, and each additional shipment, instead of evoking pleasure in London, at the resultant increase in European reserves of gold, occasions apprehensions regarding your requirements later.

The Big Wheat Crop.

The economic importance of your great wheat crop, as a factor in your foreign trade and exchange market is recognized, but finer weather in Europe this week has lowered prices. While European purchases of American wheat, in the coming season, will probably be above the average, the doubtful question seems to be, how far that influence may be offset by your larger import trade under the new tariff, and by the adverse influence on other lines of your export trade by the reduced purchasing power of other outside markets, notably Argentina and Brazil.

The most favorable fact in your international position is the absence of any substantial amount of your finance bills on the European markets, which you would have to cover later.

This, however, will be offset in some measure by the further heavy maturities of your short term foreign loans, during the next six months.

BEST OF CATTLE FIRM, THE LOWER GRADES CHEAPER

Heavy Run Due to Lack of Pasture Does Not Shake the High Quality Stock.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	27,500	12,218	21,379
Hogs	40,000	39,051	51,376
Sheep	30,000	25,003	28,181
Horses and mules	1,200	1,125	1,676

The past week's supply of cattle was by far the most generous of the year. While a great deal of the increase was due to liberal runs in the quarantine division, native supplies were generous. The week's run carried a large proportion of cattle that were forced in by continued drouth, what little benefit the rains of two weeks ago did, having been lost for lack of it for the past fortnight. A good part of the steer supply was medium and half-fat stuff that had signs of premature marketing on them, although there were quite a few loads of good quality on sale. Best beeves were in demand all week, and sold fully steady to strong. Medium grades, however, were 15@25c lower, and in some cases common kinds were off 25@35c. Some 1600-pound steers topped for the week at $9.25.

Buyers held the advantage in the trade in butcher classes all week, due to the fact that there were more available than the needs of the trade required. Strictly prime corn fed heifers were in good demand, and sold strong throughout the week, several bunches of them going in a range of $3.75@9.25. On medium to good heifers however, it was largely a 25@35c lower deal, and common grass heifers declined 35@50c. Toward the end of the week it was difficult to move heifers at any kind of prices.

Cow Market Demoralized.

Cows broke early in the week, and late the market bordered on demoralization. This was attributable to an excessive supply, particularly of cows that were off grass. Late in the week killers absolutely refused to look at cows, and about the only outlet was to speculators, who bought them and shipped them to other points. The cow market was not infrequently 50@75c lower.

Vealers also declined 75c@$1 last week, late top being $9.50.

Stockers and feeders found a narrow demand, and supply was oversized, consequently prices declined about 15@25c.

Receipts in the quarantine division were the heaviest of the year, and most of the showing was from Texas. While the bulk of the offering was grass steers there were also a few loads of fed steers available.

There was a good demand from the order buying element throughout the week, and competition between them and the packers was good. However, the supply being liberal, buyers were bearish, and strictly good grassers and fed steers declined about 15c, while all other classes showed a quarter loss. Fed steers sold at $7.90@8.40, latter being top. Bulk of the grassers went at $6.90@7.90. Trade in cattle from Southeastern territory was largely 10@15c lower for the week.

Hogs in Narrow Range.

With just a moderate supply of hogs on sale, the market did not show any great changes during last week. It was up and down, but at that the range of prices was narrow, and but little different from the week previous, but on a slightly higher basis on all kinds. It was a quiet trade most of the week. Shippers and city butchers were much the best buyers most days.

The top ranged between $8.35@8.55 all week, which shows a range of but 20c. The bulk of the hogs went at $8.20@8.40. Packers were slow to take hold of the hogs on advancing markets, but ready buyers at any time there was a break, and they were willing to purchase most any kind of hogs. Rough packers sold at $7.85@8.10, and fair to good packers $8.15@8.40.

Lights and pigs that had plenty of quality were easy enough to sell at good prices, but the poorer grades were hard to move at any figures. Best lights under 165 pounds sold at $8.20@8.40; fair, $7.90@8.15; best pigs, weighing less than 125 pounds, $7.90@8.15; fair, $7.25@7.75, and the poor grades at $6.50@7. It was the poor grade pigs and lights that were hard to move.

Lambs Somewhat Cheaper.

A good liberal supply of sheep and lambs arrived and by far the larger proportion of the offerings were lambs. A good many lambs were received from Tennessee, but Missouri and Illinois furnished a much larger number than any previous week this year. Sheep were received in but moderate numbers and there was a pretty good demand for them at all times.

Owing to the liberal run, lambs declined about 50c from the high time the week previous. Best Tennessee lambs sold at $9.10@9.35, best natives went at $9@9.25, fair to medium grades brought $8.50@9.00, plain kinds $7.75@8.40, and the cull or throwout lambs went at $6.50@7.50 according to quality. Buyers sorted the lambs pretty close after the first two days and from now on it is likely that all that are not fat will be taken out.

There was no material change in the market for sheep during the week and the good kinds went readily. Best mutton brought $4.75@5.00, heavy ewes $4.00@4.50, choppers and stockers $3@4, fair stockers $2.50@3.00, and bucks $3.50. Breeding ewes of good quality sold at $5.00@5.25.

Horses Unchanged; Mules Dull.

There was no particular feature to the trade in horses and the general situation remains in about the same channel as the previous week. There was not a great deal of life displayed in the southern trade and only a few of the best kinds went to this section. The Eastern market was on a good, strong basis all the way through and the general trade was steady. The good quality types of drafters, chunks and general work animals were selling steady and the movement was fairly active.

The trade in mules was lifeless and rather spasmodic. Buyers would take a few, but heavy orders were not placed with regularity throughout the week. The trade has taken its usual mid-summer slump and a betterment is not expected for some time.

COTTON INTEREST ALL CENTERED IN PLANT CONDITION

Traders All Looking Forward to Acreage and Condition Reports.

The cotton plant is the center of all interest in the cotton market. Everywhere data that may have a bearing on the developing crop is carefully scanned and applied to the total estimate that each trader is anxious to form in his mind as soon as possible. Because of the varied assortment of weather, cotton seed and labor situations this year, greater attention is given to the Federal reports than previously and because of the variety, some of those who in previous years sought personal reports, have given them up and await the official report for what cannot be read from the daily weather maps and bulletins.

The weekly bulletin for the week ending June 22 says: "In the cotton region the weather of the week was, on the whole, the most favorable of the season to date. Good rains occurred over most of the central and eastern portions of the belt and the plant made excellent growth. Over the western portions of the belt warmth, with occasional showers, permitted of rapid growth and the outlook has greatly improved. Boll weevil are reported as numerous in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama."

In the detail of states, according to the report, there is little complaint on the score of weather, except possibly a small area in Western Tennessee. Naturally the crop is spotted on account of the late start and the great amount of replanting necessary and, in some localities, cotton is blooming close to cotton that is not six inches high. This irregularity is particularly striking in Texas and the Government report of acreage will be interesting.

Acreage Abandonment Scattered.

The acreage report is difficult to forecast. Abandonment has been extensive and scattered to an extent that is unusual and it is not unlikely that there will be further abandonment should the weather take an unfavorable turn.

On the other hand, a telegram from a private source in Alabama tells of fields where oats have been harvested being planted in cotton. It is hard to place credence in such a report at so late a date and mention is made only to note the difficulty of a forecast of the coming report.

It seems a certainty that it will show a reduction in acreage from last season.

Nor is the condition report easy to forecast. With a condition of 74.3 of normal, May 25 (compared with an average condition for 10 years on the same date of 80.4), followed by 10 days of unfavorable weather and then by three weeks of almost perfect weather, we have the condition on June 25. In other words, two-thirds of the intervening months have been very favorable to the growth of cotton, but, unfortunately, the two-thirds lost much of effectiveness because of the lateness of the crop. Such weather three weeks earlier would have accomplished wonders.

Europe Reports Trade Dull.

The most gloomy accounts of European trade conditions have been given out by the president of the International Federation of Master Spinners, claiming a loss in every transaction made by spinners on account of unsatisfactory prices of cotton and of yarn, and advocating a curtailment of production of yarns until such time as price of cotton should reach lower and more profitable levels to the spinner.

From this side of the water it is difficult to gainsay such statements. Domestic spinners are complaining, too, but their complaint is tempered by the fact that their stocks are not large, either of raw or finished material, and their hope lies in the fact that a deadlock of prices, such as they claim to have suffered from, cannot last long. The prices of spot cotton and of future contracts have declined and spinners see ahead of them a better demand that must follow the gradual exhaustion of stocks. The cloth market is dull, but the same condition in the matter of stocks rules here as it does in the yarn market.

Sales of spot cotton have been rather slow for some time; buying is from hand to mouth and a good deal of work is necessary to move each lot sold. Stocks are not large and not regular in grade. Prices are nominal.

Wheat futures encountered an avalanche of selling orders last week and dropped nearly 5 cents a bushel, to new low levels on the crop, before a minor rally resulted. The decline was forced by ideal harvest conditions in winter wheat territory and reports that the yields of new wheat are running even heavier than was estimated by the trade.

From the standpoint of winter wheat there seems nothing on which to buy futures other than the recent decline of 14 cents a bushel, which should discount to a large extent the record breaking crop, as prices in some markets have been lowered close to 70 cents a bushel, at which price there is very little profit in raising wheat for the farmer.

When speculative conditions lower values close to the point of actual cost of production, it usually follows that the depressed commodity is cheap. This was forcibly illustrated in 1906-07, when cotton, during the panic, was lowered to 8.20c a pound, or practically production price, and the same year rose close to 20c a pound, on one of the biggest bull markets seen in history.

Spring Wheat Not Made.

Aside from the cheapness of wheat, the spring wheat crop may yet be subjected to damage by black rust. Torrential rains fell in Minnesota and the Dakotas on Friday and Saturday, following a period of excessive rainfall, and should they continue and the weather remain cool rust spores may develop rapidly.

In 1904 wheat prices advanced 24c a bushel on black rust in spring wheat territory, the upturn starting July 22 and lasting 30 days. Some days the advance amounted to 3c and 4c a bushel, while the speculative fever was on.

This was 10 years ago, and the bulls have talked black rust unsuccessfully ever since. There is a big short interest outstanding in the market at present, however, and should the weather continue favorable to rust development a minor scare might easily be engineered, if for speculative purposes alone.

Corn futures reflected buying in the late week, after meeting selling pressure influenced by the break in wheat. A dry weather map caused a scramble of shorts to cover, however, as the week ended and prices regained over 1c on the day.

It seems a little early to talk drouth damage on corn, for though temperatures have been excessively high over the growing belt, the crop has had ample moisture, with the exception of St. Louis territory and sections of Illinois. Good rains would change the speculative temper of the market very quickly, and no doubt mean very much lower prices on corn, as the coarse grain is abnormally high, compared with wheat, and the cheapness of the latter will permit much feeding of it in place of corn and oats.

Foreign markets are bearish on the coarse grain on this account, and on fear that the Argentine bugaboo will be revived to depress American corn markets, if prices are held at abnormal price levels.

Wheat Visible Is Decreased.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 4,478,000 bu last week; corn increased 280,000 bu; oats decreased 217,000 bu.

The total visible supply shows: Wheat—Today, 18,934,000 bu; last year, 31,372,000, corn, today, 7,921,000; last year, 9,663,000; oats today 7,407,000; last year, 11,927,000. Changes: Last week—Wheat, decrease, 4,105,000; corn, increase, 2,082,000; oats, decrease, 96,000. Last year—Wheat, decrease, 1,579,000; corn, increase, 2,331,000; oats, increase, 2,698,000.

Broomhall cabled: "An official Russian preliminary report of 63 governments is as follows: Winter wheat, June 15 this year, 296,000,000; winter rye, 864,000,000; June 15 last year, winter wheat, 296,000,000; rye, 896,000,000. Bulgaria—Our agent cables reports are general of damage to wheat by rust, some conservative firms are estimating this damage at 2 per cent. Italian office—The official estimate of this year's wheat crop in Italy is given as 180,000,000 bu, against 208,000,000 in 1913."

Broomhall's foreign crop summary said:

United Kingdom—The general outlook for wheat is satisfactory, but the spring crop is wanting rain.

France—There are fewer complaints coming to hand regarding the outlook for wheat and some improvement has been noted as a result of recent rain.

Germany—The outlook for wheat, coarse grain and potatoes is good, and rye shows an improvement. The weather is generally more favorable.

Russia—The general outlook for wheat is considered as favorable.

Roumania—The weather is unsettled. Crop prospects continue to show an improvement and this is especially true of corn.

Hungary—Weather is slightly more favorable, but there is little if any improvement in wheat and the outlook is generally poor.

Spain—The wheat crop is very backward, with the weather unseasonably cool.

Australia—The weather favors crop preparation and early seeding, and our agent expects there will be some increase in the acreage.

Milling and Grain News says:

Rains have delayed the winter wheat harvest in some sections of the Southwest, but generally speaking the crop is being gathered under highly favorable conditions. Indications from first arrivals of new wheat are that the crop will average well up in quality, while there has been nothing to change the recent belief that highest estimates on the total yield will be verified. Weather in the spring wheat belt has been wet, and there are some minor complaints of too much moisture. The crop needs bright growing weather now to give it perfect advancement. Corn is in good condition over most of the growing belt and has had ample moisture in nearly all directions. A small area in St. Louis territory, however, is badly in need of rain to prevent the crop from going back. Oats have made less seasonable progress in sections.

Bradstreet's detailed showed: Wheat—United States and east of Rockies decreased 4,934,000, United States and west of Rockies decreased 151,000, Canada decreased 4,273,000, United States and Canada decreased 8,818,000, afloat and in Europe decreased 1,600,000, total decreased 10,418,000. Corn increased 634,000. Oats decreased 1,744,000.

National Bank of Commerce was easier at $117.75 in the early market for local securities yesterday, but late in the session a demand developed that lifted the price to $118.50. Closing bids were $118.27½ and offers $120. Title Trust was easier on sales at $68.75, and Mercantile Trust was offered at $343.50 without bids. Other bank and trust shares were unchanged on the call.

United Railways issues reflected a poor demand and no sales were recorded. Prices established were steady, however. The miscellaneous list was quiet and steady. Bonds showed a limited investment demand prevalent for all issues.

JOHN D. MAKES $2,550,000 GIFT TO INSTITUTE

Brings Rockefeller Donations for Medical Research Up to $12,500,000.

NEW ANIMAL DEPARTMENT

Land Will Be Purchased and Study Into Diseases of Beasts Is to Be Made.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A donation of $2,550,000 from John D. Rockefeller to the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research was announced late today by Henry James, manager of the institute.

This gift brings the sum total of Mr. Rockefeller's contributions to the institute up to $12,550,000.

The announcement of the gift was accompanied by a statement from the institute that part of the sum will be expended to buy additional land in New York City and the remainder for the erection and equipment of additional laboratories and for their maintenance.

Details regarding the institute's new department of animal pathology, which was recently endowed with a gift of $1,000,000 from Rockefeller were made known today.

This department under the charge of Dr. Theobald Smith, professor of comparative pathology in the medical school of Harvard University, will make investigations of animal diseases which are of immediate concern to farmers.

With these additional endowments the Rockefeller Institute, it is stated, is now the most amply endowed institution of its kind in the world.

Quickest Relief Known for All Sore Feet

The following is absolutely the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel so good you could sing for joy. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it. It is not a patent medicine. Prepared only by Medical Formula Co., Dayton, Ohio.

AMERICA SAILS IN 20-MILE WIND CARRYING 7 MEN

Then Rises From Water With Heavy Load and Makes 50 Miles an Hour in Air.

2 MORE SLIGHT CHANGES

Porte Says Success of Machine Has Been Proven and It Is Almost Ready.

By John Cyril Porte, R. N.

Copyright, 1914. (All rights in the United States and Canada reserved.)

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., June 27.—Today saw rapid and encouraging progress toward the completion of the America. The trial of the new hydroplaning surfaces brought the air liner out of the water in a 20-mile wind. It will require now only slight further alteration or extension of the effective planing surface of the boat to enable it to rise with the additional 400 to 600 pounds with which it will start across the Atlantic.

We carried today seven men, 100 pounds of gasoline and two bags of sand. The men were not lightweights. An exhibition like today's carries one back only a few years to the stage in aeronautical development where the aviator's weight was a stern consideration. It reminded me of the first aeroplane I bought as a navy Lieutenant. I paid £300 for a Demoiselle monoplane, and my heart was nearly broken, because I found it hadn't enough wing area and power to lift me fairly off the ground.

Feared He Never Could Fly.

I was in despair, because in those days I tipped the beam at 185 pounds and feared that I was too bulky ever to fly.

Our five passengers, taken today as ballast, averaged 173 pounds. I believe it is the first seven-man flight in America. With Hallet at 145 pounds, myself at 168, and our five for ballast, the passengers and crew of the America weighed 1170 pounds. The remainder of the cargo was comprised of gasoline, planing surfaces, weight 2900; so that in round figures, we took up a total weight today of 4400 pounds. We have been figuring on a maximum of 5000, so we are not far from our objective.

The workmen of the Curtiss factory—and I take off my hat to their ingenuity and devotion, stayed on the job all last night, completing alterations, going home in relays to sleep and doing their work in the rain and mud of the aviation field by the light of electric lamps strung from a storage battery automobile. By 3 o'clock this afternoon the machine was finally ready with the new fins sprouting from the side of the big red whale.

Many Anxious to Ride.

At 3:05 Hallet and I went aboard with two mechanicians to make a test with the same weight we carried in the last trial. The effect of the bigger fins was marvelous. The America fairly jumped to the surface of the water and was planing perfectly before we had gone a hundred yards.

Delighted, but wishing to waste no time, we came to shore and called for ballast. Rodman Wanamaker's personal representative, Mr. Gash, was the first to volunteer. Then came all the Curtiss employes eager for the honor of being among the first passengers. We took on Henry Kleckler, superintendent of the Curtiss factory, and his brother and fellow workman, Frank Kleckler. George Robinson, one of the chief constructors, who has not slept, to my knowledge for two days, hopped into the rigging, wet to his waist from launching the boat, but unwilling to let her out of his sight.

There was no more room left in the cockpit after stowing away two bags of sand and the men, but Herbert Duckwarth, representing Lord Northcliffe's London Daily Mail, donor of the transatlantic prize of $50,000, was present, and in compliment to his Lordship we stowed his representative away in the rigging between the two engines. There Duckworth rode, sopping wet, half frozen, but manifestly very happy over his experience.

Wind at 20 Miles an Hour.

The wind, which had been rising, was blowing 20 miles an hour when we started with the heavy load. George Robinson was climbing around in the lower plane and down on the fin on one side of the boat, observing the effect of the new planing surface, and when the boat came upon the surface, skimming the water cleanly as a skipped stone he scrambled back like an overjoyed, if not overloaded sailor, shouting his triumph so that we could see if we could not hear above the roar of the motors that the trick had been turned.

With a mechanic moving about at each motor, a third passenger in the rigging and a sky sailor clambering about among them, and over the sides of the ship, the America behaved like an ocean liner on an even keel. I had little or no trouble in maintaining her balance, even with the wind increasing and coming in occasional gusts that whipped the lake surface into whitecaps.

No attempt was made to lift the America far off the water. A few feet shows as much as a mile of altitude as to lifting capacity. We rose only high enough to show that we could rise and at few feet from the water flew for a mile or two before settling back to the day's work of trying out the planing qualities of the boat under varying conditions. The flight in the air was as nearly perfect as I have ever had in any machine. Throttled down to about 1000 revolutions per minute, we were making a speed of close to 50 miles per hour.

Two Changes to Be Made.

During all the performance Mr. Curtiss, at the steering wheel, and Lieut. John H. Towers, head of the Navy Aviation School, balancing on the tail, were following the America on the unique little Scotter or speed boat. That freak of Curtiss' speed imagination is so fast that the two observers were able to keep abreast, behind or ahead of the America almost at will.

When we came in at the end of 30 minutes Mr. Curtiss and Lieut. Towers were ready to describe from without the action of the America as we could not from within. While the workmen were pulling her out of the water, Mr. Curtiss and I had a short conference and agreed that either or both of two more changes should bring the America to the form toward which we now know we are working with success in sight. Before the wings had been slanted down Mr. Curtiss was down on the ground with ruler and pencil showing his workmen where to begin on tonight's task.

We shall first try putting a supplemental planing surface under the tail to help bring the boat more quickly onto its planing surface. If that does not make the planing perfect under full load we are confident that we can attain that result by extending the effective planing surface of the bottom of the boat backward a foot or two.

As I told the Post-Dispatch readers today, I would tell whether we were on the right track—and we were.

Andre Beaumont, Long Flight Aviator, Sees Success for Lieut. Porte.

LONDON, June 27.—Lieut. Jean Louis Camille Conneau of the French navy, whose "bird name" is Andre Beaumont, believes Lieutenant Porte will succeed in his attempt to cross the Atlantic.

Beaumont is the hero of the most spectacular of the long-distance flights, winning the Paris-Rome-Turin race. He circled Europe and won a $50,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail for the first circuit of the British Isles.

Maurice Farman holds an opposite view to that of Beaumont. He said today at Billancourt:

"I greatly admire Porte's heroism, but without knowledge of the details of the machine and its powers of resistance, I regard the attempt premature. Even if the attempt should be successful, no great new step forward would be made in the science of aviation."

TWO AMERICAN WOMEN SEEK DIVORCES IN LONDON

Irene Osgood Files Suit and "Affinity" Earle's Wife No. 3 Gives Evidence.

LONDON, June 27.—Irene Osgood, the well-known American novelist, has entered a suit for divorce from her husband, Secretary Robert Sherrard. It will be a sensational trial, lasting a fortnight, serious allegations and counter allegations being involved.

The hearing of the suit for divorce by "Affinity" Earle's third wife, Dora Sidford of Oxford, will take place in New York. The evidence here has just been closed. Earle writes to his wife that he is anxious to have the divorce settled before Oct. 15 as he doesn't think it right to have "another illegitimate child." Earle is still living in Germany with Charlotte Hermann. Hitherto he had been delaying the hearing of the suit.

FULTON MAN IS HELD ON WIFE MURDER CHARGE

Frank Roe Arrested at Kirksville, After Telling Coroner Woman Was Accidentally Shot.

FULTON, Mo., June 27.—Frank Roe, husband of Mrs. Daisy Roe, who died here Wednesday from a bullet wound in the neck, was arrested at Kirksville last night at the request of local officials and brought here this morning by Sheriff S. C. Willis of Adair County.

Prosecuting Attorney Nick T. Cave filed an information against Roe this morning, charging him with first-degree murder.

Roe's arrest, officers say, resulted through statements made at Kirksville. Roe had gone to Unionville to attend the funeral of his wife and was due to return to Fulton today.

Mrs. Roe was shot last Sunday while on an outing with Roe and their two children. Roe told the Coroner's jury his deaf child ran against him and jostled the arm in which he held a high-power rifle.

STEGMANN FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our darling son and brother, Herman W. Steinbiss Jr., who entered eternal rest on June 26, 1909. Sadly missed by PARENTS, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my friend, Miss Annie Hanners, who died one year ago, June 25, 1913. Sadly missed by her lifelong friend.

MRS. LYDIA RIEHL.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our darling son and dearest brother, Earl A. Mallette, whom God called so suddenly, June 27, 1912.

Sadly missed by his FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS AND GRANDMA.

In Memoriam.

In fond remembrance of our loving father, Jochim Stuhr, who departed this life one year ago, June 17, 1913.

Just one year ago you left us,
How we miss you, father dear;
You are gone, but not forgotten,
By the ones who loved you here.

Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear little mother, Cora B. Killoren, who departed this life one year ago, June 26, 1913.

Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear little mother, loved by all;
We little thought that on that day
Our dear Cora would be called away.

Sadly missed by

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear son and brother, Edward Noonan, who departed this life June 23, 1914. Thanks to pallbearers and the employes of Kinloch Telephone Co., Harrigan & Sheehan, and also the Most Rev. Father Crane of St. Lawrence O'Toole's Church, and to our many friends.

THE NOONAN FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband and our loving father, Anton Pinker, who departed this life one year ago, June 27, 1913.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Sadly missed by

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband and our father, William Winnefeld, who departed this life June 30, 1913.

One year ago we parted,
And you left this world of care,
On the road to heaven you started
While we were weeping here.
Yet our hopes are growing brighter
As we are passing on our way,
For we know the time is coming
When we meet on judgment day.

Sadly missed by

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

Asleep in Jesus, Mrs. Mattie Carroll, who departed this life one year ago, June 26, 1913.

Oh, mother, mother, how I miss you
None but I can tell;
I miss the coming footsteps
Of the one I loved so well.
Oh, how sad and sudden was the call
For my dear mother, whom I loved best of all;
I little thought that on that day
My dear treasure of a mother would be called home to Jesus.

MYRTLE BASS, 503 La Salle street.

In Memoriam.

In loving sweet remembrance of our darling son and brother, Helmuth Robert Jean, who left us a year ago today, June 29, 1913, for the upper fold, aged 5 months and 4 days.

Once we had a tender flower,
Sent to us to rear,
A sweet little life to love,
While it was here;
But now our little lamb
Is in the upper fold,
From heat of summer and from winter's cold
Safe from earth's trouble and its dreams untrue,
One little lamb is waiting for us.

DAVID SEITRICH AND FAMILY. (c)

BUYERS ARE FOUND BY ADVERTISING — BECAUSE THEY ARE OPPORTUNITY HUNTERS!

If you have something to sell—real estate, suburban property, farm lands, of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that HE IS TRYING TO LOCATE YOU!

For buyers are opportunity seekers. And they have learned that the classified columns are "the Happy Hunting Grounds" for opportunities. Thus when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon HIS QUEST. AND THAT'S HOW "RESULTS" FOLLOW ADVERTISING. The Post-Dispatch reaches more of these opporunity seekers than any other St. Louis medium because it reaches a larger number of readers.

ANY person who buys a secondhand piano or player-piano, who does not buy here, loses from $100 to $200. I am a block and a half out of the way and up a flight of stairs, but I certainly know piano bargain hunters who go to the extra trouble to come up here make money faster than they ever did before in their life. All the time I have fine upright pianos from $60 to $100, and nice player-pianos from $175 to $350. I do not spend much to advertise my goods, I cannot afford it. All the goods thoroughly guaranteed. Sold on time if you wish. THE PIANO SHOP, 1317 Pine st. (c4)

PIANOS—People living outside of St. Louis (anywhere in Illinois or Missouri) who want to buy a good (slightly used) piano at a low price, should write us for our bargain list; we always have several excellent bargains in used pianos to offer; we will write and describe them to you, then, if you wish, we will ship you a piano, freight prepaid, stool and scarf included; you can try it in your home for 30 days; if you like it, you can buy it for cash or on monthly payments; if it don't please in every respect we take it away free of expense to you. (Write us today.) CONROY PIANO CO., St. Louis' Largest Piano House. (c14)

"IF ADVERTISING WIL
NOT SELL THAT REAL ESTATE, IT CAN'T BE SOLD."

Whether literally true or not, assertion is measurably true. For advertising always has found for good real estate—is doing it and will do it tomorrow. Advert does not make real estate valuabl desirable. It simply brings its and desirability to the notice of pective buyers. Can you afford to your property listings left out of Post-Dispatch Big House, Home Real Estate Directory?

Your To Let Ad should end the anxious home quest for somebody, will if you give the desired informa and have the notice appear in the Post-

Country Homes

Among others we offer these two beautiful home places in St. Louis County. One is for the man of moderate means. The other is for the buyer who wants a big and luxurious country place. Read about them.

The Small One

On the Creve Coeur Line, near the Dorset road, is a 3-acre place, with a commodious cottage of 5 rooms and large attic, with furnace heat. There is a good cistern and well and plenty of fruit trees. This can be sold at a bargain or traded for a single flat or vacant lot.

The Big One

Motor out the Gravois road to Sappington and see the Koehler Place (Meintz Hill road near the Meramec River). You'll see 70 acres of magnificent hilltop overlooking the river valley. It is cleverly landscaped and improved with the sort of 8-room bungalow that wealthy Philadelphians are so fond of. There are 8 large rooms, 3 bathrooms, furnace heat and every convenience. For a quick sale the owner will let you have this place for much less than it cost. For someone this is the chance of years.

These are merely samples from a county list that has no superiors in comprehensiveness and quality. Let us know your wants. We can satisfy them at prices from $700 upwards.

EASILY RAISED RUNNER DUCKS ARE FREE LAYERS

New Breed Deserves Full Measure of Its Rapidly-Gained Popularity.

"The Leghorns of the duck family" is the title commonly applied to the Indian runners on account of their remarkable laying qualities. Almost unknown in this part of the country 10 to 15 years ago, they have come into prominence more rapidly than any other breed or class of poultry. They will probably outlay anything in the poultry line, 200 eggs a year being a common record. The recent record made by "Dearie," the wonderful fawn and white duck, puts her at the head of the list as a layer in the poultry world. The best hen's record is 302 eggs in one year, credited to a bird belonging to the Oregon Experiment Station.

The origin of the Indian runner duck is in doubt, but the fact that they very much resemble the Penguin duck in general habits and appearance has led many breeders to believe that the breed sprang from a cross between the Penguin and Pekin ducks. The name "Indian" is said to have been given them because of the fact that the first individuals to arrive in this country were brought from India by a sea captain. Their great activity and habit of moving about rapidly are responsible for the added term of "runner." The word "Indian" is to be dropped from the Standard.

Immune From Diseases.

Aside from their ability as layers, the runner ducks are noted for their hardiness and the ease with which they may be kept. They are immune to the diseases and vermin to which chickens are subject, a fact which ought to appeal to every poultry raiser who has battled with cholera, roup, canker, frosted combs, mites and lice. A form of rheumatism is practically the only disease which seriously affects them.

A low shed, dry inside and closed on the north, west and east sides, will furnish ample housing in winter. On stormy days and nights a curtain should be dropped to cover the front opening. During the summer season their housing needs are very simple, in fact all they need is a dry place to sleep. A two-foot fence will confine them. They will stand more exposure, especially wet and cold weather, than will chickens.

While noted primarily as egg producers, they also have considerable merit as a table fowl. They make good fries and roasters and can be fattened with good results. Their feathers, also, have considerable value but very few duck raisers pluck their birds since it weakens them just that much as egg or meat producers.

Hatch Eggs Under Hens.

Runner ducks rarely want to sit. In case they do become broody they are easily broken by destroying their nests. Eggs should be hatched and the ducklings raised by hens. The hatching period of duck eggs is 28 days. Be sure the eggs you set are from strong, healthy, vigorous breeders, that were rightly mated and bred to lay.

The ducklings are very easy to raise. They will do best when they have access to a grassy plot or patch of clover. Water for swimming is not necessary, in fact the ducklings will do better without it, but they must have plenty of fresh drinking water and it should be in a dish deep enough for them to get their bills in above the nostrils. For the first feeds, bread soaked in milk is very good. Then some bran may be added and they should also have a little meat. Sand may be mixed in with the mash.

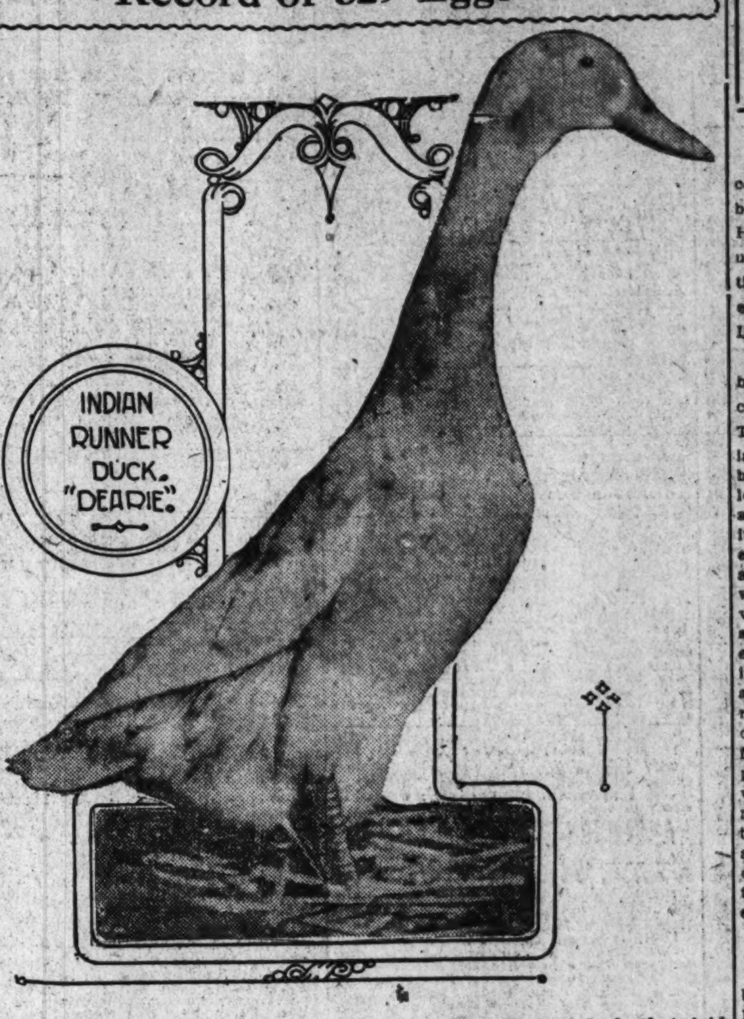
A little broken charcoal occasionally will help to keep them thrifty. A very common mistake made is to allow the pen in which they are kept to become wet and filthy. Then leg weakness and rheumatism follow which, at this stage of growth, prove fatal to most of the birds affected.

After the first few days the ordinary feed given to chicks will answer for ducklings, but milk is a great help. At about two weeks old the ducklings will begin looking out for themselves and will rarely follow the hen after that. At seven or eight weeks they will be feathered and may then be allowed to swim.

Runner ducks begin laying at five months old or soon after. They lay practically the whole year around. Their eggs are larger than hen eggs and are generally white, the green-tinted ones being an exception. The eggs are preferred by bakers and confectioners and usually bring a premium over hen's eggs.

There are three well-defined varieties of Indian Runner ducks—the Fawn-and-White, the White and the Penciled or English variety. The standard weights for mature birds are 4½ pounds for the drake and 4 pounds for the duck.

Remarkable Duck That Has a Record of 329 Eggs in Year



INDIAN RUNNER DUCK. "DEARIE."

Too Much Salt Often Is Harmful to Flock

Some Poultrymen Raise Birds Very Successfully Without Particle of Salt.

A little salt in the feed for the flock is beneficial, but it is very easy to give them too much. Whether it really pays to go to the trouble of providing salt for chickens is still a debated subject among poultry men. Thousands of flocks never receive a grain of salt from the hands of their owners. What little they do get is picked up with their food while on the range, and that is an almost infinitesimal quantity. And still they seemingly do as well as any other birds.

Where birds have access to large quantities of salt, when in combination with some food substance that will attract them, they will get too much and fatalities result. This frequently happens when old meat pickle, fish brine, etc., are dumped out where the birds can get to them. Then there are sudden deaths, the symptoms being unfamiliar and great anxiety is the result.

It is one of the little things that make for success in poultry raising to consider well the effect upon the flock of everything that is discarded from kitchen or cellar where the birds will have access to it. If in doubt about it, better bury it or otherwise dispose of it where it will be out of their reach.

Poultry Suggestions

It is safest always to locate the turkey brood when a storm threatens. Very young turkeys cannot stand a wetting.

One can now give a sitting hen more eggs than earlier. There is less danger of those on the outer edge being chilled than was the case two months ago.

The beginning of many chick ailments could be traced to sloppy food. Wet mashes for chicks should be tabooed, especially in hot weather.

Sprinkle a little dry earth over the dropping boards and the job of cleaning them will be made easier.

Old crockery broken up fine enough makes a fair quality of grit for the flock.

The overfat hen makes a poor layer and during the hot summer months she is subject to a form of apoplexy that takes off thousands of birds every season.

These are the days when meat scraps from the kitchen and carrion, that may be lying about, soon become maggoty. It is always the safest plan to buy this refuse before it has a chance to spoil and thus run no chances with limber neck in the flock.

One of the main reasons why many poultry beginners make a failure of the business is because they begin with too large a flock. Start with only a few birds and learn as you go.

Ground oats, middlings and corn meal moistened with skim milk or buttermilk makes a good forcing feed for young stock that is being fattened for market.

Poultry Problems Solved

Mating.

Which is the best to mate to pullets, cocks or cockerels? Are wheat and oats, besides other rations, good for chicks? How often should rice be fed for a regulator? How much should be fed each time? What is a good fattener? Please explain how to fatten.—F. E. A., St. Louis.

It is usually held that pullets should be mated to cocks. Only well-matured cockerels should be mated to pullets. The mating of immature birds leads to lack of constitution and to under-sized birds. Yes, wheat and oats are excellent feed for chicks. I do not feed rice as a "regulator." I should hardly call it that. It makes a good feed, however. When you feed it give the chicks all they want. Two or three times a week will do no harm. It tends to prevent looseness of bowels, or to stop such looseness. Corn is a good fattener, as good as anything. A good fattening recipe is equal parts of corn meal and wheat middlings, with a third as much meat meal as each of the other constituents. Another good fattening feed for young stock especially is equal parts of corn meal, ground oats and wheat middlings, with a little linseed meal. With either such ration give all the whole corn the birds will eat once a day. Birds should be fattened as quickly as possible. They are more tender, and the flesh is put on more economically in this way.

Age of Roosters.

How long is a male bird good for breeding? How much would you feed 10 hens and a rooster? What months do hens lay best? What age should R. I. chicks go to roosting?—W. J., St. Louis.

There is no rule as to age that male birds are good for breeding. They are at their best at 1 and 2 years of age. Some birds are good for five or more years, especially of the smaller, more active breeds. Their breeding ability is more or less doubtful when they are [illegible] years old or older. The amount of feed depends upon the size of the birds, their appetites and the kind of feed given them. A quart is a generous full feed for a dozen birds of the average size, like Wyandottes or rocks. This would be true of wheat or corn. A greater bulk of oats would be required. Usually hens lay best in March, April and May. More eggs are produced, taking the country as a whole, in April than in any other month.

There is no precise rule as to age when chicks roost. My opinion is that four months is early enough for a variety like the reds.

Colds.

Some time ago I had shipped to me a valuable stag from Kentucky. It seems that the change of climate affected him. He has a cold and discharges from one side of his head. His bowels are too loose. I gave a dose of castor oil and then a tonic to build him up. He seemed to get all right, but he still has a sniffling and shaking of the head, and a quavering voice. He has a good appetite. D. G. Memphis, Tenn.

It is quite a common experience for fowls to go "off" after being changed from one place to another. I think the bird will get all right. Your treatment I regard as good. Put some permanganate of potash in water, say a half teaspoonful in a quart. Hold his head under the water a moment or two at a time for two or three times. Repeat daily for a while. Also squirt some of this solution up his nostrils with a dropper. Sometimes they get well faster if let alone.

I should like to know what is the matter with a hen I have. For two months she has been unable to swallow grain. When she tries to swallow, she has to eject the grain. Neither can she eat soft feed. I have taken food from her throat several times. Can you tell me what to do for her, and also for my hens which are laying poorly. Mrs. [illegible] R. E., St. Louis.

The question, I fear, is too indefinite. Have you looked and felt for a growth of some sort, or for some foreign object lodged in the throat? It may be a weakness of the nerves or muscles. Unless there is some foreign object there, you probably have an incurable condition. I don't know why your hens are laying poorly. You do not tell anything about feeding and other conditions. Perhaps they have laid heavily during the latter part of winter and spring, and are now letting down. They nearly all do that.

Be sure, absolutely sure, to furnish the ducks with plenty of water to drink, placing it near their feeding trough. They require lots of water to wash the food down.

The hens are not half so much to blame for poultry failures as the men who own and care for them. The hen responds either to good care or bad care.

It is a wise plan to hatch duck eggs as soon as possible after being laid. They seem to deteriorate more rapidly than eggs of other poultry.

The profit in duck raising depends on how quickly the birds are made to get their growth. They should be ready for market in 10 weeks or less.

An onion chopped and mixed in with the mash is a good occasional feed for chicks, as well as old birds.

HE KNEW EVERYTHING

By Emory J. Haynes

"DO you mean that you have read the history of the whole world?" The high school boy, not over 18 years old, modestly answered, "Yes." He was a history enthusiast, and had utilized every spare moment, that mighty key to so many treasure houses of knowledge; that real master of all human advancement.

Yet, big as the boy's achievement seems, it is not so very difficult. The entire annals of nation after nation may be easily learned in outline, and there is nothing in the whole scope of education which has so powerful an effect on the mental development. He who has learned it may well be said, in a general way, "to know everything." This was the proud compliment that a schoolmate paid this boy, and it was true, within limits.

And this young man knew much of history in detail also. His favorite scene was the coronation of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain. In this he delighted with its wonderful descriptions of the knights of armor, their steeds caparisoned in silks of brightest colors that swept the ground, their crests waving in the wind, and their banners blazoned with family mottoes and coats of arms.

He spoke, too, of the trial of Warren Hastings in the great hall of the Westminster Houses of Parliament. He had read Lord Macaulay's essay, and now he could picture to himself the lords on the benches, a solemn judging body, and the gayly dressed throng who had come to see, and the simple English gentleman who had ruled all India and was now an accused culprit at the bar. And he could quote much of Burke's splendid speech of impeachment.

Surely these were remarkable pictures of human life in its most exalted moments to be hung on the mental walls of a mere boy. No mimic scenes in a theater could compare with what this school had seen in imagination.

Had he read the battle of Marathon, that fight which changed the face of the world? Yes, he had very excellent general impressions of Athens in the days of her splendor. He had stood in the Roman Senate house and heard her lawmakers discuss her policies; he had seen a Roman triumph, with its wonderful colorful testimony to her greatness beyond the seas. Yet, never in actual fact, had this boy crossed the Atlantic. The only places of historic memory that he knew were Bunker Hill and Yorktown and the scene of Washington's farewell address.

Boy readers, think of this. The most thrilling spectacles of all our human race are awaiting your observation. You may be an onlooker at pageants that, if shown today, would draw rich tourists from the earth's four corners. They are yours for the opening of your eyes and your books. Scenes set upon the stage where the scene shifters needed a hundred years to make the changes for their setting are all yours. Do you read of them?

THE RIGHT TO BE SOMEBODY IN PARTICULAR

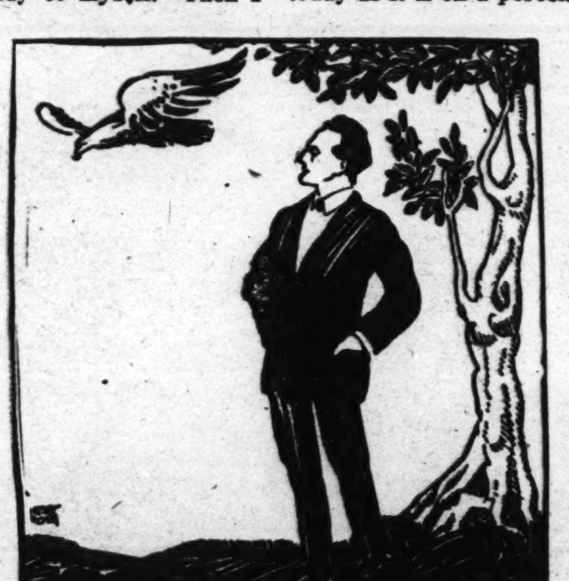
By GERALD STANLEY LEE

Mr. Lee is the author of "Crowds," today the most widely read and discussed book in the United States. He is to address the readers of the Post-Dispatch Magazine every Sunday from this page.

EVERY man has a right to be treated as if he were somebody in particular.

I have an ineradicable feeling that I am somebody in particular myself. I don't mind admitting it. And I don't believe it's a queer feeling. Every man has it and ought to be encouraged in it. A man is much harder to deal with if he isn't somebody in particular. One never gets down to business with anybody, never commits one's self in details, until one knows an important detail like who the man is and what he is like. Nine out of ten labor troubles today are based on our trying to deal with people by machinery, or trying to do people off alike in huge thoughtless swoops. It is largely because employers do this and because unions do it that we are always becoming unreasonable and inhuman with each other.

Every little while up in my workroom here in Northampton I hear a kind of businesslike buzz on the wall near my desk and I wake up from what I'm doing. "That means me, probably," I say to myself. Then I reach out with my hand quickly lean over a little and put the city of Northampton up to my left ear—twenty thousand people—it may be any one of them, or Springfield, perhaps—ninety thousand more—or, for all I know, it may be any one of three million people down in New York I'm being exposed to in taking up that terrible, anonymous, unnumerable little black gutta percha Thing—that hole on the end of a wire—and holding it deliberately against my left ear. I say "Halloa!" in a dull safe cold gray tone—a more or less iron gray voice. (I don't mind wearing my heart on my sleeve at times with people I have my eyes on, but I don't propose to put my heart on a wire here in Northampton where any one of twenty thousand people can tap it by calling out a number to a young lady down on Main street. With twenty thousand people hanging around I naturally begin with the cold gray tone.)



Then I hear a feminine voice.

That chops off ten thousand at once. There are ten thousand men, anyway. in this town who are not in it now.

Then I notice (while I'm being asked if I am myself) that the voice is not the voice of a child or of a young girl. That brings it down five thousand more.

Then I hear a Name and four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine women of this blessed town are cut off with a breath. Out of all that awful unspeakable tangle of copper wires and female voices I had felt mixed up with four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine more hurry politely way and I am left alone with a mile of copper wire and Mrs. —— of No. 377 Elm street.

No cold gray tone now! The tone modulates into the same shade it left off on the last time I sat on her right at dinner or the tone I use naturally when I think she's asking me to sit there again.

That sudden tremendous precipitous fall she has had from the steeps of anonymousness, from being almost anybody in general into being somebody in particular—the fall we both have had out of being everybody into being ourselves—makes us seem like two entirely different beings in a second. We have recovered our habit of being somebody in particular. and instead of acting as if we didn't know what we were about we take the liberty suddenly of behaving as though we were two quite intelligent human beings.

What is really the matter with employers and employes, with Labor and Capital, today is the cold gray tone. Several thousand invisible stockholders through a few hundred invisible officers try to talk by long distance telephone as it were, with a few thousand invisible operatives. Nobody feels he is dealing with anybody in particular. So he holds back and does not show what's in him. He is on his guard or ugly. The very men in business who, if they came in direct contact with particular men, would be fellow human beings and simple and reasonable, are colorless. Everybody gets mad because nobody feels he can make an impression. It's as hard to make a nice human dent in a big typical manufacturing business today as it is on a porcelain-lined bathtub. All the things and all the people's minds in it seem porcelain-lined throughout.

I believe that our industrial machines today. our machines with men in them, are nearly all being run on the wrong principle. Why are we so efficient with our steel machines and so muddled up with our human ones? We keep our steel machines alive all the while by considering what they are made of and how they work and what they are for. If we did as well in considering what a man is for as we do for a piece of steel we would do as well with men as we do with steel.

Why should not our business organization, our unions, our moral and human machines, our colleges and churches, be kept as lively and as rapidly adapted to our use as our iron and steel ones? Why should not our human machines be as lively—change as honestly and quickly for a new and better idea, as locomotives do, or steam dredges and ocean liners and motor cars?

I think it is because we do not consider in a man-machine what each piece of manstuff in it is made of. But the efficient man-machine of tomorrow is going to say to him: "What are you like?" And the machine will be made to build around each man and set to work on him and work with him and through him until it finds out.

This is the kind of man-machine that our biggest business men today—the great engineers of the modern business world, the engineers in human nature—are now setting up. We are through with the huge, thoughtless swoop idea of efficiency.

Employers who think they can get things out of men by doing men off in swoops the way they do off wood and iron and cotton are going by. They are not practical. Every man is somebody in particular. Treating him as if he were somebody in particular, letting him believe it, letting him prove it, is the way to make him work.

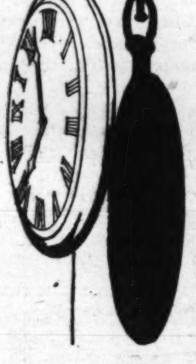
Self-respect is a man's main spring. Going around a factory and breaking the main spring in every man in it is not merely bad morals—it is bad machinery.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Hang Up Your Watch; It Will Set Itself

FREDERICK E. WARD sends to the Scientific American a remarkably simple method of making a watch that is too slow or too fast set itself. The usual method is to turn the hands backward or forward or to stop the balance wheel with a toothpick.

If a watch be removed from its chain and hung by its bow on a hook or nail so that it swings free it will be found to oscillate back and forth like a pendulum. This motion is caused by the motion of the parts of the escapement. The swinging either accelerates or slows down the running of the watch. Its exact effect varies with individual watches, depending upon the weight and size of the case. Whether it makes the watch gain or lose, and how much, can be found by experiment, say by hanging the watch up for 10 hours and checking it by the wireless signals that are sent out at noon and 10 p. m. by the Government station at Radio, Va., and can be caught by any but the crudest wireless receivers.



How to hang the watch.

The average watch gains about two seconds an hour when hanging free. Some, however, lose. When the precise gain or loss has been ascertained the regulator should be adjusted. If the watch gains, it should be made to run a trifle slow.

Now, by repeated trials the owner can learn precisely how many seconds his watch gains or loses When this error has accumulated long enough to make an adjustment advisable, all he has to do is to hang up his watch for the right number of hours to bring its second hand back or forward to the correct position.

Should a watch be found neither to gain nor to lose when hanging, it can be made to respond by hooking a piece of metal to the stem, thus raising the center of oscillation.

Buying Diamonds Always a Gamble

THE purchase of a diamond is nothing but a gamble. Laymen cannot tell by the eye whether a stone is good or bad, and in actual service in the shop a diamond costing $25 may last 25 hours, while a cheaper bortz stone may be in use for several years. The cost of upkeep for diamonds in the factory is an important item appreciated by few. This expense in a large plant doing considerable grinding from the rough will average as high as $3 per month for each grinding machine operator, writes an expert in the American Machinist.

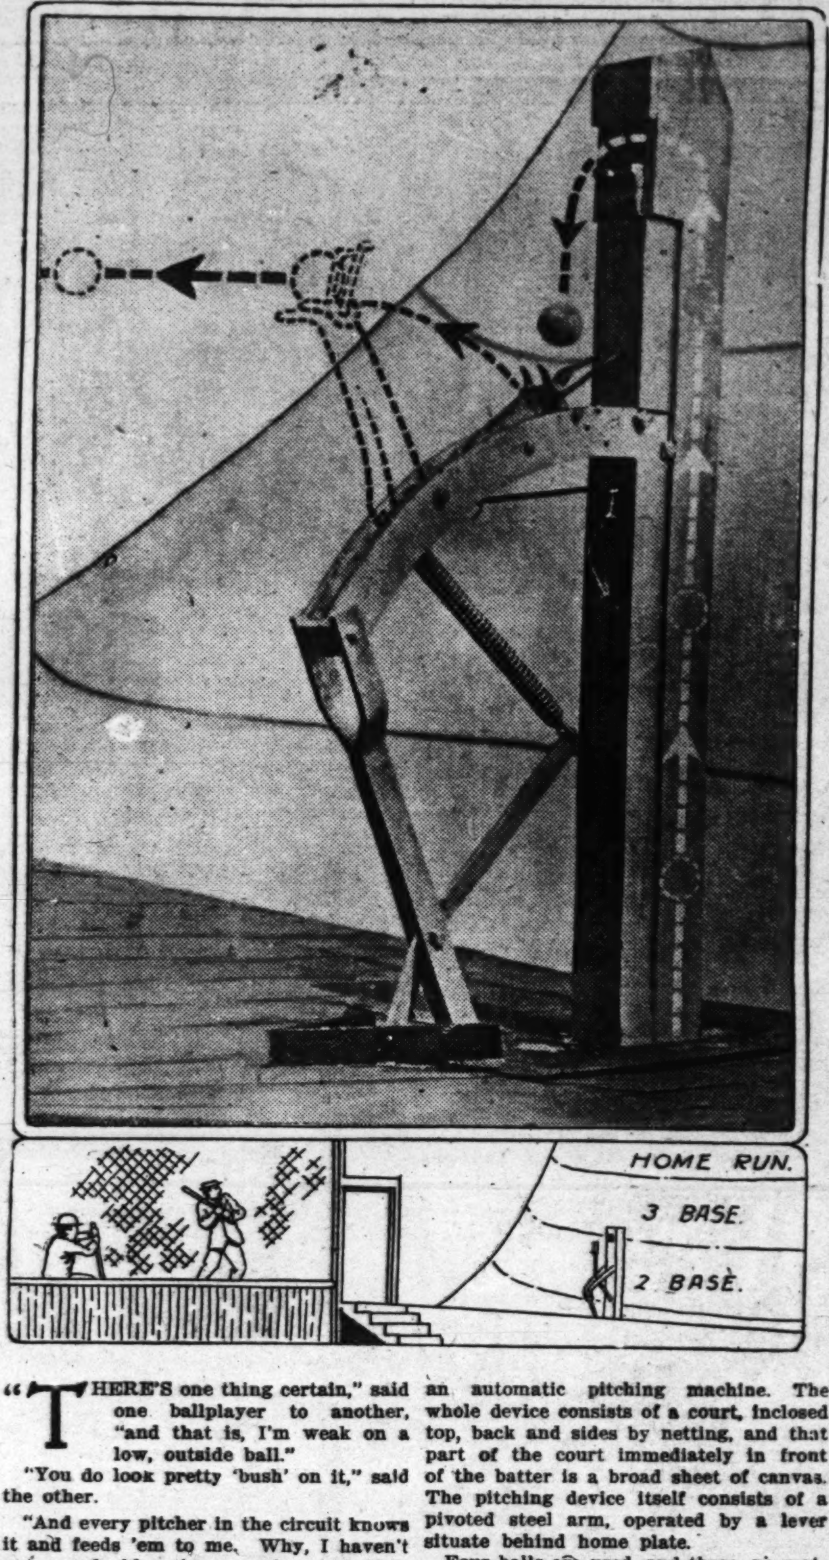
The length of life of a diamond, even in the hands of first-class operators, is so uncertain that some users of any considerable number of these tools have foresworn their use and have resorted to the cheaper bortz stones. To tell by the eye which is the $5 stone and which the $25 one is, I think, beyond us laymen, and we are the ones who should know.

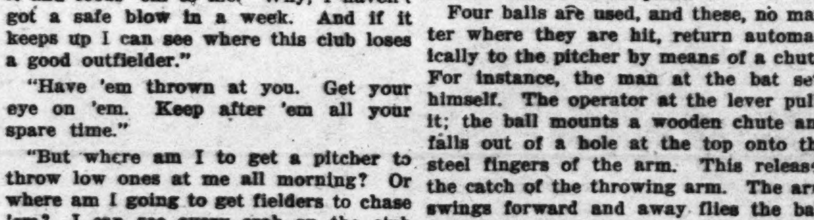
Each man is an authority unto himself as to his likes and dislikes for certain stones. Some men prefer the white diamond, others like the yellow diamond; many use the black diamond entirely, while more still have no use for any, but resort to the bortz stone. Truth, however, compels me to say that all are unanimous on the fact that all are costly and highly unsatisfactory.

The Walls of Jericho

IN the sixth chapter of Joshua it is written of the walls of Jericho: "So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass . . . that the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city . . ." Mr. P. S. P. Handcock, lecturing the other day, said that the walls were certainly not destroyed to the extent that a reader of Joshua vi, would naturally suppose, and, as evidence of this, told of the discovery by German archeologists of a stretch of the walls of ancient Jericho still standing. The excavators in question seem to have no doubt that the walls now standing are those which confronted the Israelites when they crossed the Jordan.

Mechanical Pitcher Trains Batters to Hit Any Ball





HOME RUN.
3 BASE.
2 BASE.

"THERE'S one thing certain," said one ballplayer to another, "and that is, I'm weak on a low, outside ball."

"You do look pretty 'bush' on it," said the other.

"And every pitcher in the circuit knows it and feeds 'em to me. Why, I haven't got a safe blow in a week. And if it keeps up I can see where this club loses a good outfielder."

"Have 'em thrown at you. Get your eye on 'em. Keep after 'em all your spare time."

"But where am I to get a pitcher to throw low ones at me all morning? Or where am I going to get fielders to chase 'em? I can see every crab on the club get on me if I start to hog the batting practice. I'm lucky to get two thrown at me in a morning. Guess I'll have to worry along till I'm canned."

But now we have a machine that will eliminate that difficulty. You can stand up to the plate for hours at a time now, have any kind of a ball you want, and slam it to your heart's content, without ever a human being appearing to aid.

Alexander MacMillian, son of Prof. MacMillan of the Princeton University has invented and set up at Princeton an automatic pitching machine. The whole device consists of a court, inclosed top, back and sides by netting, and that part of the court immediately in front of the batter is a broad sheet of canvas. The pitching device itself consists of a pivoted steel arm, operated by a lever situate behind home plate.

Four balls are used, and these, no matter where they are hit, return automatically to the pitcher by means of a chute. For instance, the man at the bat sets himself. The operator at the lever pulls it; the ball mounts a wooden chute and falls out of a hole at the top onto the steel fingers of the arm. This releases the catch of the throwing arm. The arm swings forward and away flies the ball directly over home plate.

The pitcher is situated 35 feet from the plate and has three speeds. The highest being about half as fast as that of the feared Walter Johnson. And at 35 feet, that is some speed. The speed is regulated by the man at the lever.

The great merit of the device lies not only in the saving of human pitchers during batting practice, but also in the elimination of the delay caused by returning balls. And then you can have any kind of a ball you wish between the shoulders and the knees.

Follies in Education

IN his presidential address before the Medical Association of the Greater City of New York, Dr. Thomas S. Southworth made some criticisms of modern methods of bringing up children. Their toys are too elaborate, serving only to confuse and tire. Entertainments arranged for them are too complex and extravagant. Even the circus is too elaborate.

Children are allowed, through carelessness, to get into such bad habits as sucking their fingers, and then are scolded, shamed, punished or restrained when the habits have taken root.

In families where certified or pasteurized milk alone is given to the children, there is absolute indifference to the quality of the milk from which the butter and the ice cream are made.

Little ones are allowed to wear short socks all summer in places where mosquitoes prevail, and in the fall when mother has begun to wrap herself in furs she still keeps the kiddies' legs bare. Dr. Southworth believes in short socks, even in cold weather, for their toughening effect upon robust children, but calls their use by thin, anemic children "the height of folly."

Dr. Southworth insisted that girls must be educated to take their natural, normal place in the home, if we are to have happy homes, "less divorce and less vague searching for a mission in the market place."

Younger Sons Are Stronger Than First-Born

AN important confirmation of the theory that younger sons are physically superior to first-born is contained in the account of a series of tests at Amherst College, made by John H. Chase of Youngstown, O., and published in the Journal of Heredity.

Prof. Karl Pearson of London was the first to assert as a demonstrable fact that the neurotic, the tuberculous, the albinotic, the insane and the criminal were more often than not either first or second born children, and that younger sons were usually the mental and physical superiors of their brothers. From which he deduced that "if you reduce the size of the family you will tend to decrease the relative proportion of the mentally and physically sound in the community."

But Pearson's assertion was challenged by T. B. Macauley, a Montreal member of the American Breeders' Association, who pointed out that Pearson's method of collecting the statistics upon which he based his theory was fallacious and might be made to prove the diametrically opposite. Nevertheless, thoughtful eugenists felt that Pearson's conclusion was true, even though he reached it by a faulty method. To test its truth, Mr. Chase and Dr. Edward Hitchcock worked out a series of tests that would not be open to the objections raised against Pearson's method.

Mr. Chase conservatively refuses to draw any conclusion from so small a number of cases, but he remarks that the figures are at least "unusual, if we accept the widely quoted view that the best period for the production of children is between twenty and thirty."

Here are a few of the results:

"In grouping the records of strength tests I found first-born brothers strongest in four cases, second-born brothers strongest in 12 cases and third-born strongest in 28 cases. As the individuals concerned came to college at about the same age, on the average, it seems clear enough that first-born brothers who came to Amherst were weaker than their younger brothers who followed.

"Handling these figures in a different way, it was found that first-born brothers made a total of 11,361 points in the strength tests, second-born had 12,510, and third-born, 13,251. The average strength of each individual in each class was: First-born, 494 points; second-born, 544 points; third-born, 576 points."

Another remarkable result of this investigation was the demonstration that the age of the parents has only a slight influence upon the strength of their offspring, although this is by no means conclusive, for, as it happened, almost all the strongest men in the group were sons of parents beyond the usual age for the beginning of parenthood, the average being 41 for the fathers and 32 for the mothers.

This average was obtained for the seven men who stood highest in the strength tests.

Mr. Chase sums up the results of the test by saying they indicate "that the eldest sons are physically weakest, and that this weakness has no relation to their weight or height."

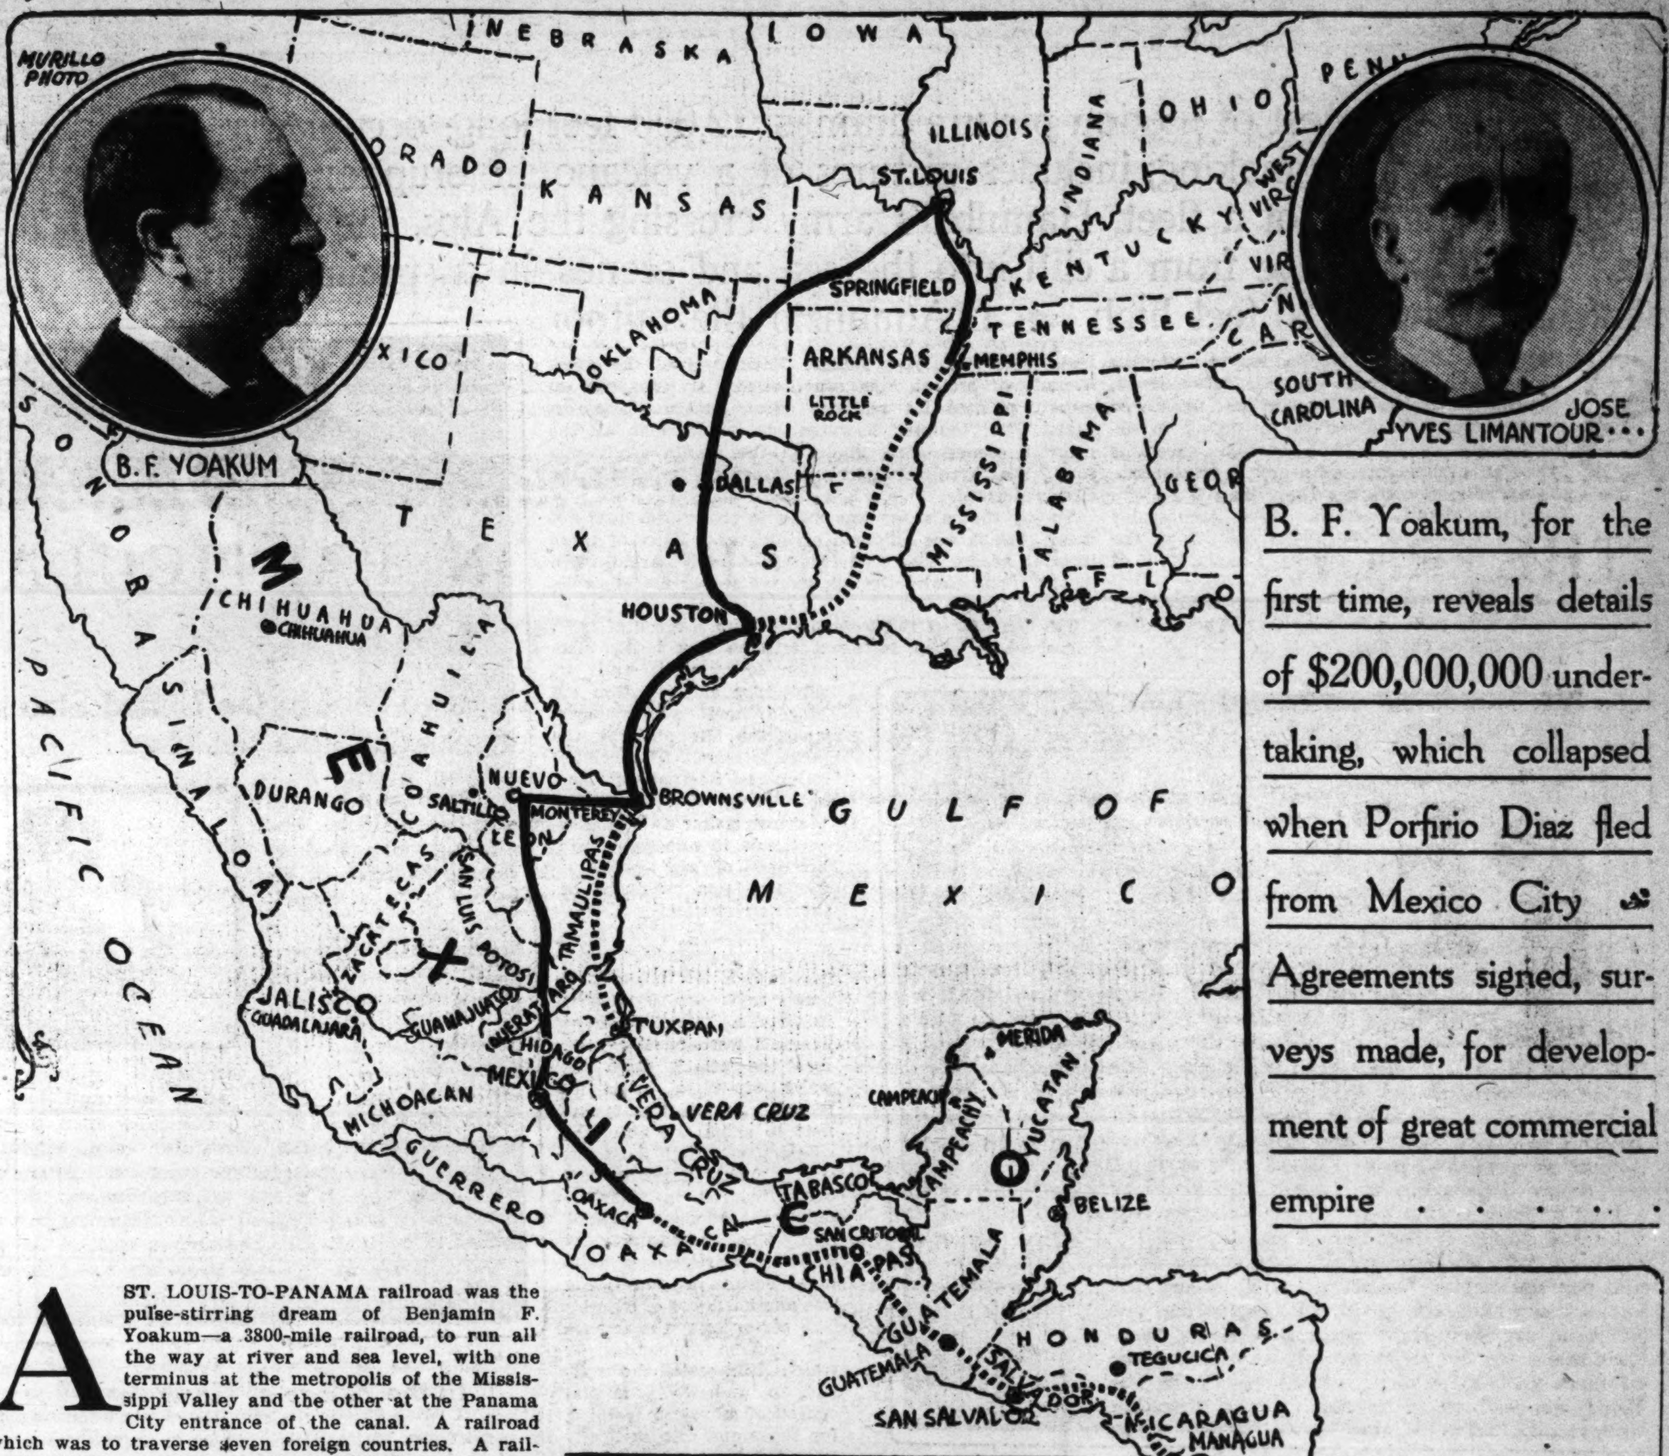
How a Revolution Cheated St. Louis Out of a Railroad From St. Louis to Panama



B. F. Yoakum, for the first time, reveals details of $200,000,000 undertaking, which collapsed when Porfirio Diaz fled from Mexico City ❧ Agreements signed, surveys made, for development of great commercial empire . . . . .

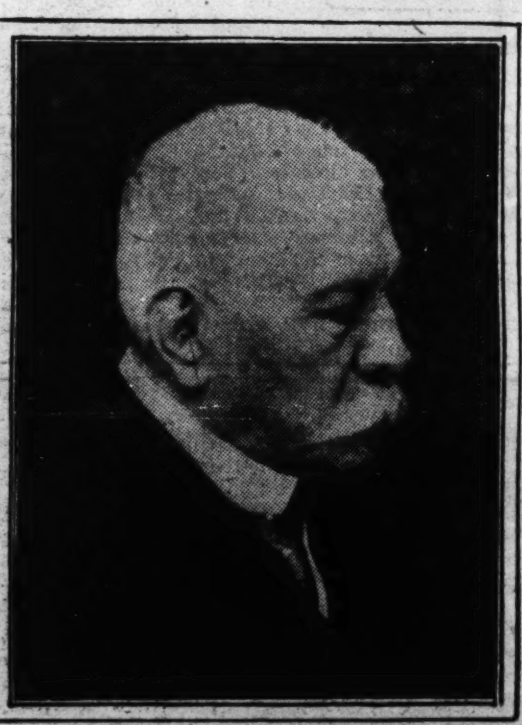
A ST. LOUIS-TO-PANAMA railroad was the pulse-stirring dream of Benjamin F. Yoakum—a 3800-mile railroad, to run all the way at river and sea level, with one terminus at the metropolis of the Mississippi Valley and the other at the Panama City entrance of the canal. A railroad which was to traverse seven foreign countries. A railroad which would have placed St. Louis at the heart of the vast commerce developing between the United States and Central and South America. A railroad which was to have erected an empire of prosperous and industrious millions upon the rich area between the Rio Grande and the Canal zone. A railroad the construction of which would have involved an outlay of nearly $200,000,000.

The collapse of the enterprise, when at the moment of triumph, was as dramatic as its conception. Yoakum and Jose Y. Limantour, the Diaz Minister of Finance, had just signed a treaty in New York incorporating the Mexican National lines in the proposed St. Louis-to-Panama system, and thus at a stroke extending its scope from the Rio Grande to Mexico City. But at the pin-prick of Madero's victory at Juarez, the imposing bubble of the Diaz regime exploded into thin air. The next day after the treaty was signed, Diaz, the dictator, abdicated. The enterprise has since lain perforce in abeyance. But Yoakum asserts, with his own quiet but indomitable emphasis, that as soon as Mexico is pacified, his great dream will be translated into reality.

The world does not realize, perhaps, how large a proportion of the project was actually completed when the crash came. Of the total distance of 3837 miles, 2202 miles of railroad were already constructed and under operation. A railroad bridge had been built spanning the Rio Grande between Brownsville and Matamoras, and was handling a traffic of from forty-five to fifty cars of freight a day. The financing of the entire enterprise, with the co-operation of the countries through which the road was to pass, was guaranteed by French capital. Negotiations had been completed with Mexico, and were favorably afoot with the Governments of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

Theodore Roosevelt, while President, had declared to Yoakum that the construction of a railroad connecting the United States and Panama would be vital to the security of our possession of the canal zone, and that, as soon as the canal was completed, it would be the duty of the Government to forward the binding of the canal to this country by means of steel rails. Andrew Carnegie, in a public speech, maintained that the realization of Yoakum's plan would mean more to the cause of peace than the expenditure of $100,000,000 on battleships.

The first step which Yoakum accomplished towards building his system was the completion of a line 400 miles long from Houston to Corpus Christi and Brownsville. Then, with President Brown of the Mexican National lines, he took up the question of forming a through route to Mexico City by way of Matamoras and Monterey, over lines already built. This resulted in Yoakum's taking a trip to Mexico City, where he conducted negotiations with Minister Limantour and Brown. President Diaz kept in close touch with the proceedings and gave his entire approval to the arrangements agreed upon.



EX-PRESIDENT DIAZ OF MEXICO

The conference led to the building of the international bridge at Brownsville, one-half of the stock of which, carrying a joint ownership in the bridge, its terminals and connecting tracks, was given to the Mexican National lines. This made the Mexican National an interested party in the project, not only in opening up a new gateway between the two republics, but in developing trade betwen Mexico and the United States.

It was also decided to build a line along the Gulf Coast from Matamoras to Tampico and Tuxpan, a distance of 400 miles, which was to have been owned jointly by the interests represented by Yoakum and by the Mexican National. President Brown promised that construction on the new line would begin in 30 days, and both he and Yoakum felt that it would be completed and in operation within twelve or fifteen months.

Within sixty days after the international bridge was completed, its traffic had risen to forty-five or fifty cars of freight a day, and was increasing so rapidly that an interchange of 100 cars a day was confidently expected. With the beginning of war conditions in Mexico, the traffic dwindled away to nothing—to perhaps, at present, one car a week. The Mexican National's tracks were torn up by the opposing armies and its bridges burned, and commerce between Mexico and the United States practically ceased.

In the meantime, Yoakum's engineers had made a reconnaissance of the entire route to Panama City, and for a great part of the distance had surveyed and staked the right of way. Between Houston and Brownsville they came upon mesquite stakes driven 40 years ago by the Blaine-Davis survey, and after crossing into Mexico followed for a time the survey made by A. J. Cassatt, afterwards president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who was employed as a young man by the United States and Mexican Governments to plot an international line. His records are now in the archives at Washington.

It was estimated that, using 90-pound rails and the highest and strictest character of construction and equipment, the road would cost $45,000 a mile. The system was to be jointly financed by the interests which Yoakum represented and the seven foreign countries which it would traverse, and was to be managed by a commission composed of representatives of the various countries and interests, with military powers, such as govern canals and other international highways. He urged the acquisition of a strip one mile wide throughout the length of the line, to be set aside as a Government reservation, similar to the canal zone.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

Light and Heat Cure by Stimulating

LIGHT and heat are two agents now constantly used in medicine. Sunlight is the ideal medium for this treatment, the only trouble with it being its unreliability, it having a tendency not to be there just when it is most wanted. As substitutes for sunlight electric lamps are used. Each form has its special value, but the most practical for general purposes is the incandescent light. When light that is rich in chemical and ultra-violet rays is needed the arc lamp is used.

The Edison Monthly describes a new form of lamp especially built for the light bath. It is called leucodescent. It generates intense heat and by means of a special reflector projects the rays in parallel and crossing lines to a large area instead of focussing them on a single point.

Dr. William Benham Snow, summarizes the physiological effects of light and heat in a long list of conditions, the most important of which are:

Light and heat induce increased local activity of elimination and tissue building; the general diffusion of heat through the body causes increased perspiration; increased oxidation is produced by the action of radiant light upon the blood in the dilated capillaries; the ends of the nerves are stimulated and they carry the stimulation back to the remote spinal centers. Inflammation, unaccompanied by infection, is relieved by the relaxation of the tissues and by the general effects already described. When there is infection, light and heat increase the blood supply to the affected part and increase the number of leucocytes and phagocytes in the blood. As these are the corpuscles that destroy the invading germs and heal the wound, this is very important. The heat and light also check the activity of the infecting germs and stimulate the elimination of poisons.

Light and heat may also be employed to reduce arterial tension, relieve an overworked heart and lessen the quantity of blood in congested regions. But success depends upon accurate knowledge and careful observance of the technique.

Five Different Kinds of Ice; One Can Be Made From Hot Water

THERE are five distinct kinds of ice. This fact has just been discovered by Prof. P. W. Bridgman of Jefferson Physical Laboratory, Harvard University.

First, there is the common ice, which is water frozen at ordinary atmospheric pressure and at from 0 degree C to —10 degrees C. This Prof. Brigman calls ice I. It is from 10 to 13.5 per cent less dense than water.

If this be placed under a pressure of about 1000 kilograms the ice melts to water. If the pressure be increased to be about 4100 kilograms and the temperature be maintained about the same, the liquid water freezes again to another kind of ice, called ice V, which is about 6 per cent denser than water.

Increasing the pressure to about 6500 kilograms we get ice IV, the volumic pressure and the density becoming from 5 to 9 per cent greater than water.

If we freeze water at atmospheric pressure, but with a temperature of —80 degrees C, ordinary ice (ice I) is changed into ice III, which is on the average 3 per cent denser than water and 20 per cent denser than ice I.

Further increasing the pressure, ice III turns into ice II, which is about 22 per cent denser than ice I. On further increase in pressure ice II changes to ice V and then to ice IV.

Sometimes these changes take place so quickly that a click is heard. The lower the temperature the more slowly is the change effected.

This discovery has a practical application. When water freezes in a closed vessel immense pressure is developed. The bursting of boilers and water pipes is a familiar example of this. The water expands in freezing to ice II; but if the pressure on the ice during freezing exceeds about 2000 kilograms, corresponding to 30,000 pounds per square inch, ice III is formed. As this is about 3 per cent denser than water and has less volume, it shrinks rather than expands.

An interesting sidelight on this is the discovery that if the pressure be great enough the temperature may be raised far beyond the normal freezing point and still the water will freeze. "By the application of a pressure of about 20,000 kilograms," says Prof. Bridgman, "we may freeze water, although it is nearly boiling hot."

Radium in the Cure of Pyorrhea

PYORRHEA, long conceded by many dentists to be virtually incurable, once it has developed into the chronic stage, apparently is proving to be another malady yielding to the powerful influence of radium. Prof. Leavy of Berlin has reported wonderful success in treating it with radium by means of a mechanical device by which a spray of water is made radioactive through the use of radium salts.

Dr. Lorwin W. Cates, a St. Louis dentist, who has spent several months abroad, declares himself a convert to Dr. Leavy's teaching. He says he visited colleges in Scotland, England, France and Denmark but it was not until he reached Berlin and investigated the radium treatment that he gained anything of consequence. He says he was amazed at the Berliner's results.

Extended infection of tooth.

Pyorrhea is an infection of the gums by a germ. The gums are full of minute arteries, but have no muscular activity. In consequence, when the germs get a foothold, there is little natural resistance. The gums recede from the teeth, which grow loose in their sockets, there is a constant discharge of pus and the whole body becomes weakened. The common result is a loss of natural teeth.

The machine used in the radium treatment is a hollow metal cylinder, about a foot high and two and one-half inches in diameter. In a cap at the top is kept a small bottle of radium salts. Water is admitted to the cylinder by a small hose and let out at a nozzle.

When the sensitized water is drawn off in a glass it may be used either as a spray or with brushes. It attacks the germs in their pus cells and devitalizes them. Apparently the radium salts do not lose any energy, as one small vial can be used for innumerable treatments.

How Many Diseases Are Ever "Cured"?

"WHAT is a 'cure'?" asks the editor of the Lancet, in reproving doctors for the loose way in which they use the word. "Nothing ever gets completely well," is an aphorism of a great medical philosopher.

Only when the cause of a diseased condition has been removed, its effects neutralized and the organism protected against its activities in the future, have we the right to speak of the "cure" of the patient, is the editor's opinion. Immunity conferred by such a cure, he says, may be only temporary. "Where a disease process is only limited or shut off, and its further spread prevented, while the causal agent remains, we should speak of arrest, but not of cure. Where grave organic damage has occurred and function has been restored by vicarious activities we should speak of the result as one of repair or compensation."

Coal for 1000 Years

ACCORDING to a calculation made by the International Geological Congress of Canada, the available supply of coal still unmined in the world is 7,397,000,000,000 tons, enough to last 1000 years, even if the consumption continues to increase at the present rate.

Gymnastics for Varicose Sufferers

DR. JOLY of Bagnoles de l'Orne, France, advises persons afflicted with varicose veins to perform the following gymnastic exercises: Lie flat on the back and raise the legs as high as possible, lifting them to a right angle with the body. Begin by raising one leg. If you find it difficult at first press your foot against the wall and work with leg upward. Hold the legs elevated for a few seconds. Gradually extend the time till you are keeping them up for about a minute.

Now bend the ankles, moving the feet backward and forward and rotating them from right to left. Bend the knees, extending and retracting the lower part of the legs.

At first do these exercises with one leg at a time. After a little practice you will be able to do them with both legs simultaneously. Perform them two or three times a day, but do not prolong them to more than five or ten minutes, according to how quickly they tire you. When the exercises are over rest on your back. An alcohol rub down will finish the seance.

These exercises should be supplemented with deep breathing, the breath being drawn in while the muscles are being contracted and exhaled while they are slackened.

Dr. Joly says that while these motions will not cure varicose veins, they will reduce the swelling and relieve the pain.

LEAD paint is now prohibited in France. To protect iron graphite mixed with linseed oil is suggested.

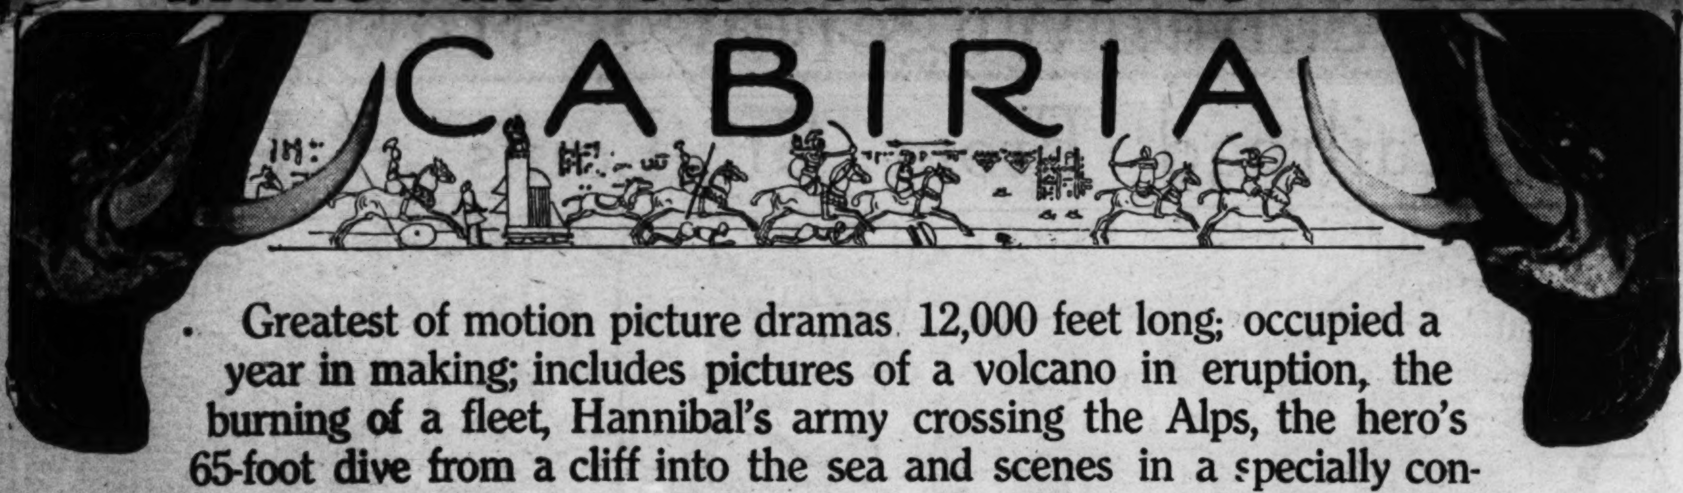
CABIRIA



Greatest of motion picture dramas 12,000 feet long; occupied a year in making; includes pictures of a volcano in eruption, the burning of a fleet, Hannibal's army crossing the Alps, the hero's 65-foot dive from a cliff into the sea and scenes in a specially constructed Temple 120 feet high ☙ D'Annunzio the author

SEVEN HUNDRED men worked fourteen months to make a picture. Gigantic, stupendous, prodigious, colossal—the critics exhausted their supply of adjectives in trying to describe the result. The average spectator gave an exclamatory gasp and a single comment: "I wonder how they did it?"

It is a moving picture, Cabiria, 12,000 spectacular feet of film now showing in the great capitals of the world, but first seen in the mighty imagination of Gabriele d'Annunzio.

How did they do it? How was this vision transferred from the poet's mind to the public screen? Therein lies a story as dazzling as the film.

Maciste persuades the unwilling Bodastoret.

The drama, dealing with the death struggle between Rome and Carthage, is as real as realism can make it. Paradoxically, it is sometimes more so. To obtain the scenes on the slope of Mount Etna, for instance, the mountain itself was visited and hundreds of feet of film were used. They do not appear in the complete picture. A picture of a miniature volcano enlarged, with films of running people superimposed upon it, proved more "realistic" than anything Mount Etna could bring forth.

On the other hand the desert scenes were staged in the deserts of Algeria, and the gorgeous mountain panorama showing Hannibal crossing the Alps was actually made in Switzerland. The taking of several hundred men dressed in the garb of Carthagenian soldiers going through mountain passes 6000 feet above sea level was a piece of realism which turned out to be more realistic than intended. History says that thousands of Hannibal's soldiers perished from exposure; no less than 48 members of this moving picture army were incapacitated during that strenuous rehearsal.

The burning of the Roman fleet was taken on a lake about twenty-five miles from Turin, Italy. The film showing the sixty-five foot jump of Fulvius Axilla from the cliffs into the sea, to escape the high priests of Moloch, was taken at Leghorn. The one showing the meeting of the child Cabiria with Axilla, and his giant slave, Maciste, was taken at the foot of the old fortifications at V'vita Vecchia, on the coast of the Mediterranean.

Most of the other scenes were taken in the studio or on the grounds of the Itala Film Co., just outside Turin. Here the great Temple of Moloch was constructed. It was built of stucco, painted for realistic effect, and was 120 feet high. The "temple," however, had no interior, all the interior scenes being made in the studio as it was found that artificial light was necessary to obtain the effects desired.

To say that a scene was made in the studio does not mean that it was skimped or slighted. Many of these interior scenes were constructed of real marble when it was found that imitation marble would not show up properly in the film.

The burning of the Roman fleet was a piece of trick photography. One full-sized trireme was built. The other ships were built in miniature and the film enlarged and superimposed upon the film showing the large trireme. The composition is so perfect that only an experienced moving picture maker would suspect how it was done. The burning of the camp of Symhax was produced in the same manner.

The training of the seven hundred performers was a task which few generals of stage craft would care to undertake. Months of rehearsals were necessary before the attack upon the walls of Citra could be filmed. Despite the use of nets to catch the attacking soldiers who fell from the walls, nearly a score were badly injured in their efforts to produce a realistic film. The attack upon the walls of Carthage, a minute's scene in the show, was another labor of months. The performers who formed the human pyramid by which Xilla scaled the walls had to undergo a special course of physical training for the stunt. So skillfully were these scenes rehearsed that the seven hundred give the appearance of three or four times their number. The picking and development of individual parts was no less unusual. For five months agents of the film company searched in vain for a giant who could play the role of Maciste. Then, quite by accident, d'Annunzio discovered Pagani working on the docks at Genoa. Physically he was all that could be desired. He had never been on the stage, but that did not discourage d'Annunzio, who literally made an actor out of him. Many of the scenes in which he appeared required more than sixty rehearsals. So complete was the training that Pagani's "methods" have now won praise from players wherever Cabiria has been shown.

In the Palace of Hasdrubal.

So perfect was his make-up that he is universally supposed to be a negro.

The solution of the wig problem for Cabiria is characteristic of the rest of the production. D'Annunzio and the directors felt that no wigs in existence would be satisfactory for the High Priests of Moloch and for Hannibal and Archimedes. They engaged these players eight months before the film was made so that they might grow hair as per directions.

Ernesto Gemelli, "Archimedes," is seventy years old and recognized as one of the leading character actors of Italy. Several of the women players in Cabiria are in the front rank of the profession, notably Signora Italia Manzini, who played Sophonisbo, Hasdrubal's daughter.

Gabriele d'Annunzio not only wrote the scenario for this wonder film but directed the making of the costumes and settings, rehearsed a majority of the scenes and actually supervised their filming. What may seem more extraordinary still, he managed to keep the whole production a complete secret.

The actors themselves did not know what they were acting. Lines which had no bearing on the struggle between Rome and Carthage were put into their mouths. No rival company, it was assured, would be given a chance to put out a cheap imitation of Cabiria.

With all this preparation the film would not have been possible except for a newly invented device which produces astounding stereoscopic effects. By this it is possible to swing the camera in every direction without ruining the perspective of the pictures.

The Cabiria film was completed in April. It was shown first, simultaneously, in Turin, Milan and Rome. Its success was instantaneous. It is billed for Paris in July and, by the first of next year, will be exhibited in most of the leading cities of Europe and America.

The Peculiar Wager of S. Howell Parr

Baltimore club man and social favorite rolls three miles in 15 hours and 34 minutes—$10,000 bet on the feat. . . . . .

ARISTOPHANES, according to the veracious Plato, once maintained at a symposium in Athens that man was originally a globular being, who accomplished locomotion by the process of rolling like a ball. That he still retains some vestiges of his primeval method of progress was recently proved by S. Howell Parr, wealthy clubman and turfman of Baltimore, who became victorious in one of the oddest wagers on record by rolling three miles in 15 hours and 34 minutes.

At the conclusion of the feat Parr cashed in $2500 on his bets, and friends who backed him are said to have won as much more. His father-in-law in Philadelphia expressed confidence in Parr's physical prowess to the extent of wagering $5000. So that, in all, $10,000 was staked on the sporting event. The eccentric wager attracted national attention, and Parr's exploit was witnessed by a corps of newspaper correspondents, photographers and moving picture men, as well as by a gallery of men and women of Baltimore's most exclusive society.

It all started with a conversation at the Maryland Club, where Parr was chatting with several friends a number of weeks ago. One of them looked at his watch and said he had to go, as he must catch a train and it was then 8 o'clock.

"What time does the train go?" asked "Hal" Parr, as he is known to his friends.

"At 8:15," was the reply.

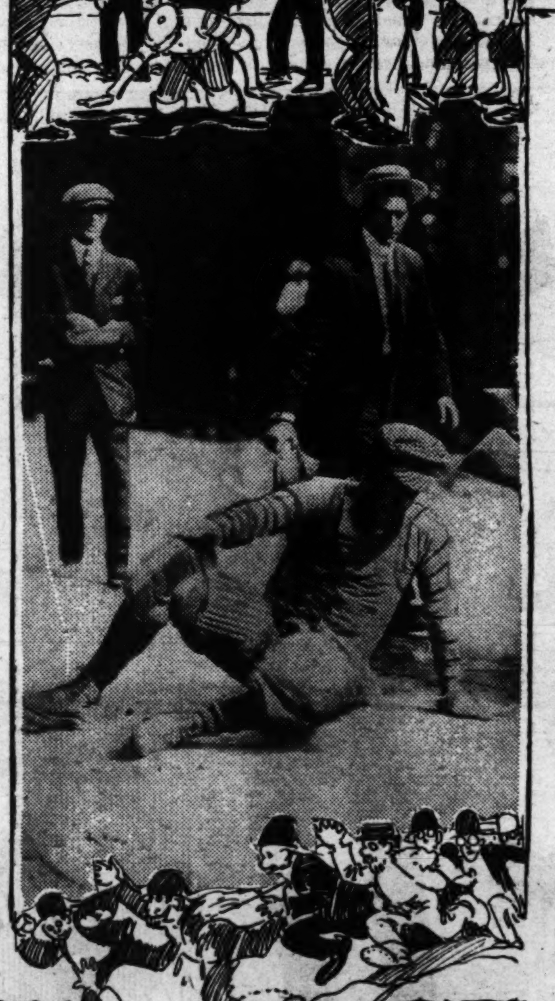
"Say, I could roll to Union Station in that time," said Parr derisively.

"Bet you couldn't!" "Impossible!" came a chorus of protests. Parr, in the heat of argument, asserted that rolling on the ground was the easiest thing in the world. One claim led to another, the friend became so interested that he missed his train, and before the discussion was over Parr found himself pledged in the sum of $500 to roll from the Elkridge Kennels to the beginning of Charles street boulevard, a distance of three miles.

Other men, in the next few days, heard of the wager and after secretly trying for themselves how difficult rolling really is, hastened to Parr to get a slice of what they expected to be "easy money." He accepted bets of $2000 more.

In the meantime the story of the wager became public and was spread by the newspapers from one end of the country to another. Parr was disconcerted by the publicity, and for a while showed a disposition to call all bets off. His antagonists, filled with glee at this sign of weakening, cheerfully accused him of being a "bluffer." Now, "Hal" Parr has the reputation, as his father had before him, of being a "game sport," willing to bet and stick on any proposition. So he went into training at the Baltimore Athletic Club and announced the evening of May 18 for the start.

He attempted to keep the exact starting time a secret, but when he arrived at the Elkridge Kennels shortly before 7 o'clock he found a large gathering on hand, including not a few women, who amused themselves by crying sarcastic pleasantries at the popular young society man. But it was too late to back out, and promptly at 7:35 o'clock he dropped to the ground for the start of his bizarre marathon. Among the skeptics present was Parr's own wife.



First position of the turn: Using the left hand as a fulcrum, Parr revolved his body to the right until the right hand and knee touched the ground.

The spectators jeered at the garb he had chosen for the feat. His khaki knickerbockers were padded at the knees more voluminously than those of a football player. His hands were swathed in many thicknesses of linen bandages. He wore thick-soled shoes, ribbed stockings, a heavy sweater and a plaid cap. One of his backers attended him, carrying a small mattress, such as are used in sleeping cars, which was the subject of many scoffs.

Those who expected him to roll like a barrel were doomed to disappointment. The terms of the wager left him considerable latitude as to the species of revolution he would use. But if the reader does not believe the method chosen by him to be sufficiently arduous and exhausting, let him try it for himself as follows:

First, sit down upon the floor. Place the right hand palm down on the floor. With the hand as a fulcrum, swing the weight of the body to the right knee. Continue turning until the left knee and left hand touch the ground, so that you are on all fours like a baby crawling. Then flop over on the back again, and repeat the process ad infinitum, for 15 hours of such exercise will seem to the average man like an eternity.

This was the mode of locomotion employed by Parr. Anyone who has tried the feat will understand why, after he had made the first dozen revolutions, he called for the mattress and let himself fall upon it, face downward for a rest. But after half a minute he resumed the journey.

The roughest part of the going was encountered at the beginning, on the gravel driveway leading to the clubhouse. The rough stones cut through the padding on his knees, about which his friends bound many folds of Turkish towels. But after he reached the smooth automobile highroad outside, his progress became less distressing.

However, it was 11 o'clock, 3 hours and 24 minutes after the start, when the first mile was finished. But so exhausting had been the toil that most of the spectators, including Mrs. Parr, gave the wager up for lost and went home, believing that Parr would never endure another two miles as fatiguing as the first one.

He obtained some relief by reversing his process, rolling from right to left instead of from left to right. He alternated lying on the mattress with reclining against a chair, turned bottom up and covered with pillows. At midnight he rested for a time in a tent which had been brought along and hungrily swallowed a quantity of hot broth. Dr. Hugh H. Brown, a specialist at Johns Hopkins University, examined his pulse, pronounced him in good physical condition and encouraged him to "stick it out."

By this time the gallery had dwindled to Parr's brother, an attendant and several club members who acted as judges, and who remained with him throughout the night. He took only a short rest in the tent, and then resumed his labors. He sent the tent back to the city, confidently declaring that he would not need it again.

By this time both knees were lacerated, although pillows were bound about them when the supply of towels gave out. The bandages on his hands had to be frequently renewed. The strain on the muscles of his back and abdomen compelled him to pause after every few revolutions and take a half-minute's rest.

According to those who witnessed the feat, he saved himself from succumbing to fatigue by his own untiring good spirts. To questions as to how he felt, he always groaned, "Fine." Several times he panted with cheerful mendacity: "This is the easiest money I ever made." Only once he admitted that the job was not a mild one. As dawn began to break at 4 o'clock, he was twisting past Notre Dame Academy, the chimes of which began to strike. "The Holy Rollers may like to roll," he gasped, "but I'm not a Holy Roller."

Parr had accomplished his first mile in three hours and 24 minutes. But the second mile required nine hours, it being completed at 8 a. m. By this time the gallery of men and women, who were informed early in the morning that Parr was still going, was beginning to reassemble. Fashionable folk riding into the One's chin. I spilt the ink as I was creeping over the desk. That is an odd thing to remember, but I was looking for something to wipe it up with when I heard their voices upstairs."

"You heard them both?"

"Yes—quarreling—and about me!

"Then the man came running down. But I never tried to get away. I had heard something else, and I waited to tell what a liar he was! I turned out the lights and he shut both doors behind him (you would notice there were two) before he turned them on again.

"DON'T let her hear us," were my first words, and we stood and cursed each other under our breath.

"At last he told me to sit down in the chair opposite his chair, and I said, 'With pleasure.' Then he said, 'We'd better have a drink because only one of us is coming out of this room alive,' and I said the same thing again. He was full of drink already, but not drunk, and my own head was as light as air. He unlocked a drawer and took a brace of old revolvers from a case.

"He stood with his back to me, fiddling with the revolvers for a good five minutes, during which time I heard him tear his handkerchief in two and wondered what in the world he was going to do next. What he did was to turn round and go on fiddling with the pistols behind his back. Then he held out one in each hand by the barrel, telling me to take my choice; that he didn't know which was which himself, but only one of them was loaded. And he had lapped the two halves of his handkerchief round the chambers of each in such a way that neither of us could tell when we were going to fire.

"Then he tossed for first shot and made me call, and I won. So he sat down in his chair and finished his drink and told me to blaze across at him from where I sat in the other chair. I tried to get out of it, partly because I seemed to have seen more good in Minchin in those last 10 minutes than in all the months that I had known him; he might be a brute, but he was a British brute and all right about fair play. But he broke out again, cursed me and his wife, and swore that he would shoot her, too, if I didn't go through with it. You can't think of the things he was saying when—but I believe he said them on purpose to make me. Anyhow I pulled at last, but there was only a click, and he answered with another like lightning. That showed me how he meant it, plainer than anything else. It was too late to get out. I set my teeth and pulled again"——

Severino moved his head from side to side upon the pillow.

"When the smoke lifted he was lying back in his chair as though he had fallen asleep.

"I think the worst was waiting for her to come down. I opened both doors, but she never came. Then I shut them very quietly—and utterly lost my head. You know what I did. It was the stupid cunning of a real madman, the broken window and the things up the chimney. I got back as I had come, in the way that struck you as possible when you were there, and I woke my landlady getting in. I believe I told her everything on the spot and that it was the last sense I spoke for weeks; she nursed me day and night that I might never tell anybody else."

So the story ended, and with it, as might have been expected, the unnatural strength which had sustained the teller till the last; he had used up every ounce of it and he lay exhausted and collapsed. Langholm became uneasy.

"Raise me up—raise me up."

Langholm raised him in his arms.

"Another—hemorrhage!" said Severino in a gasping whisper.

And his blood dripped with the words.

Langholm propped him up and rushed out shouting for Brunton—for Mrs. Brunton—for anybody in the house. Both were in and the woman came up bravely without a word.

"I'll go for the doctor myself," said Langholm. "I shall be quickest."

And he went on his bicycle, hatless. But the doctor came too late.

THE old moon's eye dropped over Normanthrope House out of the clearest sky that there had been for days. The Steels were strolling on the sweep of the drive before the house, out for outing's sake for the first time that day, and together for the sake of being together for the first time that month. There was something untoward in the air. In fact, there was suspicion, and Rachel was beginning to suspect what that suspicion was. She could not say absolutely that she did not entertain it herself for a single instant. Why had he never told her his real motive in marrying her? Some subtle motive there had been. Then there was his intimacy with her first husband, which she had only discovered by chance. And, finally, there was the defiant character of his challenge to Langholm, as it were, to do his worst (not his best) as a detective.

On the other hand, there was that woman's instinct which no wise woman disregards, and Rachel's instinct had never confirmed her fancies in this matter But within the last few hours her point of view had totally changed. Her husband was suspected. He said so laughingly himself. He was in a certain danger. Her place was by his side. And let it be remembered that Rachel had grown rather to like that place.

They had been strolling quite apart, though chatting amiably. Rachel had not dreamed of putting her hand within his arm, as she had sometimes done toward the end before their quarrel. Yet she did it again now, the very moment his quicker vision descried the cyclist in the drive.

"I hope they are not going to run me in tonight," he said. "If they do I shall run them in for riding without a light. So it's Langholm! Well, Langholm, put salt on him yet?"

"On whom?"

"Your murderer, of course."

"I have his confession in my pocket."

It was the first time that Rachel had known her husband taken visibly aback.

"Good God!" he cried. "Then you don't think it's me any longer."

"I know it is not. Nevertheless, Mrs. Steel must prepare for a shock."

Rachel was shocked. But her grief and horror, though both were real and poignant, were swept away for that hour at least by the full tide of her joy.

It was a double joy. Not only would Rachel be cleared forever before the world, but her husband would stand exonerated at her side. She lingered while Langholm told of his interview with Abel, and then left him to one with her husband alone.

They talked on until Langholm suddenly remembered the hour.

"It is late now," said he, "and I must be off. Poor Severino had not a relation in this country that I know of. There will be a great deal to do tomorrow."

Steel at once insisted on bearing all expenses; that would be the lightest part, he said. "You have done so much!" he added. "By the way, you can't go without saying good night to my wife. She has still to thank you."

"I don't want to be thanked."

"But for you the truth might never have come out."

"Still, I shall be much happier if you never speak of it again."

"Very well, we shall not—on one condition."

"What is that?"

"Langholm, I thought last summer we were to be rather friends? I don't think that of many people. May I still think it of you?"

"If you will," said Langholm. "I—I—don't believe I ever should have brought myself to give you away!"

"You behaved most fairly, my dear fellow. I shall not forget it, nor the way you scored off the blackmailer, Abel. If it is any satisfaction to you, I will tell you what his secret was. Nay, I may as well. Langholm, like many a better man, I left my country for my country's good. That man and I were transported to Western Australia on the same vessel in '69."

"And yet," said Langholm—they were not quite his next words—"and yet you challenged me to discover the truth! I still can't understand your attitude that night!"

"Some day I may explain it to you," said Steel. "I am now going to explain it to my wife."

The men shook hands.

AND Langholm rode on his bicycle off the scene of the one real melodrama of a life spent in inventing fictitious ones. Steel went straight to his wife. Tears were still in her eyes, but such tears and such eyes! It cost him an effort to say what he had to say.

"Rachel," he said at length in a tone as new as his reluctance, "I am going to answer the question which you have so often asked me. You know that I was exceedingly fond of Alec Minchin as a young man; now, I am not often exceedingly fond of anybody, as you may also know by this time. Before your trial I was convinced that you had killed my old friend, whom I was so keen to see again that I came up to town by the very first train after getting his letter!"

"I don't blame you for thinking it before the trial," said Rachel. "It seems to have been the universal opinion."

"I formed mine for myself and I had a particular reason for forming it," continued Steel with a marked vibration in his usually unemotional voice. "I don't know which to tell you first. Well, it shall be that reason. On the night of the murder do you remember coming downstairs and going or rather looking into the study at 1 o'clock?"

Rachel recoiled in her chair.

"Heavens!" she cried. "How can you know that?"

"I saw you come down, I saw you peep in—all dread. And afterward I learned from the medical evidence that your husband was dead at that time."

"So you thought I had come down to see my handiwork!"

"To see if he was really dead. Yes, I thought that afterward. I could not help thinking it, Rachel."

"Did it ever occur to you that I might have thought he was asleep?"

"Yes, that has struck me since."

"You have not thought me guilty all along, then?"

"Not all along."

"Did you right through my trial?"

"God forgive me—yes, I did! And there was one thing that convinced me more than anything else; that was when you told the jury that the occasion of your final parting upstairs was the last time you saw poor Alec alive."

"But it was," said Rachel. "I remember the question. I did not know how to answer it. I could not tell them I had seen him dead, but fancied him only asleep: that they would never have believed. So I told the simple truth. But it upset me dreadfully."

"I can read people sometimes," Steel said after a pause. "I guessed your difficulty. Surely you must see the only conceivable inference?"

"I did see it."

"And, seeing, do you not forgive?"

"Yes, that. But you married me while you still thought me guilty. I forgive you for denying it at the time. I suppose that was necessary. But you have not yet told me why you did it."

"Honestly, Rachel, it was largely fascination"——

"No."

"Then let me hear the prime motive at last."

Steel stood before his wife as he had never stood before her yet, his white head bowed, his dark eyes lowered, the suppliant and the penitent in one.

"I did it to punish you," he said. "I thought someone must—I felt I could have hanged you if I had spoken out what I had seen—and I—married you instead!"

His eyes were on the ground. When he raised them she was smiling through unshed tears. But she had spoken first.

"It was not a very terrible motive, after all," she had said; "at least, it has not been such a very terrible—punishment!"

"No, but that was because I did the very last thing I ever thought of doing."

"And that was?"

"To fall in love with you at the beginning!"

Rachel gave a little start.

"Although you thought me guilty?"

"That made no difference at all."

"And you fell in love with me!" she murmured.

"God knows I did, Rachel, in my own way," said Steel.

"I am so glad," whispered his wife.

—THE END.—

How St. Louis Was Cheated Out of a Railroad

States Government behind his proposition because of its necessity as a military agency. He learned that a transport on sea can carry only 1000 soldiers, and that the boats must be protected by battleships. He computed that, with his line finished, the Government could entrain 1000 to 2000 men every 30 minutes at Galveston or San Antonio, and disembark them at Panama 40 hours later. In this way, if the canal were attacked, a quarter of a million men could quickly be mobilized for its protection.

But his greatest idea was that of upbuilding an industrial empire in Mexico and Central America. This area, between the continental United States and its possessions at Panama, he considers to be the richest undeveloped country in the Western Hemisphere, with its treasure house of agricultural and mineral wealth. With population continually increasing, and with the earth's supply of land fixed, he foresees in half a century a congestion of population in the United States which will overflow into less thickly settled countries. His road was to serve as an artery through which the excess population would drain into the vast and undeveloped spaces south of use.

There is, of course, at present a railroad route from St. Louis to Houston by way of the Frisco and its connections. But the plan ultimately contemplates a new line, running almost west of south from St. Louis to Houston and paralleling the Mississippi River at its own level. Part of this proposed line, between St. Louis and Memphis, has already been constructed. South of Tuxpan, another line was to connect with the Mexican National south of Mexico City, so that, in the end, the entire system, from end to end, would practically be situated at water grade. The saving in construction and operating expenses to a railroad running virtually all the way at sea level, and avoiding mountains and valleys, is obvious.

It was in May, 1911, that Yoakum, by appointment, met Limantour in New York. Their attorneys had drawn up agreements between Yoakum's backers and the Mexican Government. These were signed by the American railroad builder and the Mexican Minister of Finance, and were to be submitted to Diaz in Mexico for final ratification. Yoakum, on his side, was at the point of seeking the proper backing in Congress and from the War Department. At that psychological moment came Diaz's fall. Limantour was to sail for a month's trip to Paris. Instead, he was gone a year.

Thus was St. Louis cheated out of a St. Louis-to-Panama railroad, and of an eventual position as the center of American commerce with Central and South America. For St. Louis is the home of the Frisco Railroad, which is a Missouri corporation.

Yoakum is one of the biggest railroad men in the country. He is frequently called "the empire builder of the Southwest," and his work in this section has been compared with that of James J. Hill in the Northwest.

Speaking recently of his career with the Frisco, he stated that he had built it up from 900 miles of track to 4000, and at the same time increased its earning capacity from $5000 to $9000 a mile.

"When I first went over to the Frisco 17 years ago," he related, "it was running two bobtail trains to Wichita, Kan., and Sapulpa, in what was then Indian Territory. The night train carried an old castoff sleeper to Wichita.

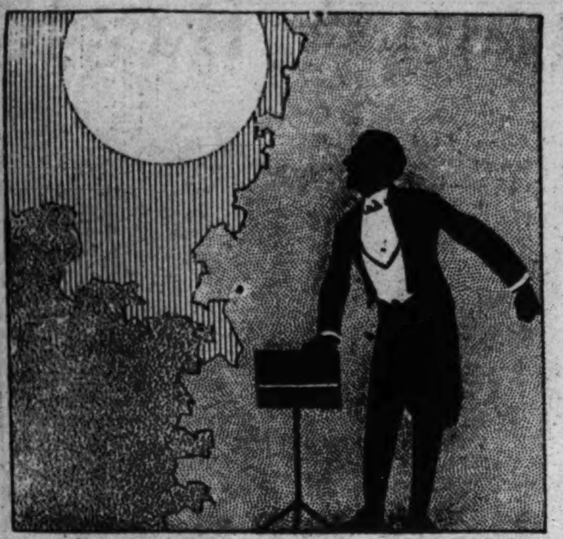
"I drove on a reconnaisance trip from Sapulpa to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad. I observed that in this section St. Louis newspapers were unknown, and that the goods of St. Louis merchants and manufacturers were not sold there. Mind you, this was only 400 miles from the doors of St. Louis merchants."

Today, said Yoakum, the railroad is reaching out over 4000 miles of tracks for St. Louis business, and has been a leading factor in the industrial development of the Southwest. His railroad to Panama would have extended St. Louis' sphere of influence more than 2000 miles to the south of the Rio Grande and would have made it the commercial capital of a large part of the continent of North America. And he declares that the plan has not been abandoned, but only deferred, and that it will be taken up with all his old energy as soon as a power arises or is constituted in Mexico with which he may treat.

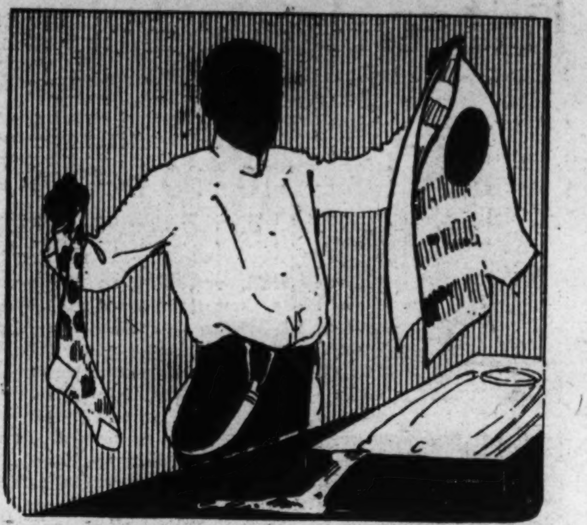
BUG HARMS GOLF GREENS

A GREATER danger to the putting greens of England than the suffragettes has appeared in an insect which now bears the name of the "golf green fly." This insect, which destroys the tender and delicate grass on putting greens, was discovered by a research student at the Royal College of Science. Happily the Royal College of Science has proved its usefulness to the nation by discovering a powder that effectually destroys the "golf green fly" and several other varieties of fly that are dangerous to putting greens.

Petty Grafts of the "Movies"



The electrician, unless tipped, is likely to have an "accident" with the spotlight and the actor finds himself in darkness on the stage.



A comedian who does not contribute to the "laundry graft" will probably find that all of the "laugh" has been washed out of his speckled socks and striped vests.

How vaudevillians in St. Louis neighborhood theaters are mulcted, from booking agents down to stage hands, told by a "Ten-Cent Actor"—Vengeance taken upon Thespians who neglect universal system of tipping. . . . . .

By a Ten-Cent Actor.

We call ourselves 10-cent actors—the big class of us to whom the moving-picture theaters, with their interludes of vaudeville, have opened up a new profession, as singers, monologists, magicians and what-not. We are on "small time," as the "movie" circuits are called, but many of us have ambitions to achieve "big time," as the circuits of the large vaudeville theaters are known.

When I was little more than a child, my mother fitted up a theater for me in the attic, with footlights, drop curtains and wings. Here my playmates and I delighted to attempt amateur theatricals. My mother is a pianist, and I think I inherited something of the cleverness of her hands. At any rate, I took to sleight-of-hand, or magic, like a duck to water, and by daily practice gained, by the time I was 18 or 19, a proficiency which often caused me to be summoned before guests in the house to mystify them with my feats. I must also have had the "gift of gab," for I developed a line of "chatter" which everybody said was pretty good.

When moving pictures, using vaudeville acts between the films, began to spread all over the city, I discovered that I could turn my skill to profit. I might have started in as an office boy or a clerk or a cub reporter and made from $3 to $12 a week, perhaps. But my first engagement as a magician brought me $35 a week, and now, after a year's experience, I often make from $75 to $90 a week. Not bad for a youth of 20, which is now my age, you will say.

But all of this salary is by no means clear profit. At the very entrance of the business I found it was honeycombed with graft, which extended from the booking office down to the lowest stage hand and to the bass drummer of the orchestra.

The booking aegncies are supposed, according to the contracts we receive, to get 5 per cent of our weekly earnings in the theaters to which they assign us. But their commission is in fact nearly always 10 per cent and sometimes 15. Some of the agents frankly tell us that in addition to the commission we pay to their firm, we must pay them individually another 5 or 10 per cent. Others go about getting their rake-off more subtly.

For instance, I was anxious, for the sake of the prestige, to show my act in one of the biggest "movie" houses in the West End. I remarked to the agent who was "handling" me that I was afraid I would never get to show in that theater. He looked at me queerly, and then said, in significant tones:

"I'll bet you $10 you do."

"You're on," I said, for I caught his meaning instantly. A few days later I was assigned to the house in question, and paid the $10 wager. In this way the agent got his $10 commission on the side, which was more than 10 per cent of my salary. Besides, I paid his firm the regular 5 per cent fee.

One of the big "movie" houses in St. Louis is owned by a rich man who commits to a manager the business of hiring entertainers and fixing their salaries. I applied to him, showed him my "stuff," and obtained an engagement of three afternoons and nights for $30. Thinking that it would help me get better prices in other houses, I asked him to make the contract read $45, or $15 a day instead of $10. He agreed readily. I found out afterwards by accident that he coolly pocketed the $15 difference between what I really got and what the contract called for.

Not long ago I was talking with a girl who was singing in cabarets and "movie" houses. She inquired of me anxiously whether I didn't think, as she had been singing for a year, it was time for her to become a "professional." She meant, I found by questioning her, that she wished to be put on a salary. It appeared that she had been singing for a year without getting a cent, the booking agent assuring her that she was still an "amateur" getting invaluable experience, while he kept for himself every penny of the fees paid to him by the theaters for providing her services. This is one of the reasons why booking agents have automobiles.

After the actor is booked and has his engagement at a theater, he finds there a universal system of compulsory "tipping" which would put an English hotel to shame. First of all, the stage manager must have from $1 to $5, depending on your salary. If you omit this ou are likely to find your act down at the bottom of the bill, when everybody is tired and going home.

If your act calls for lighting effects, it is fatal not to remember the electrician with a dollar or so. Otherwise, just when you signal for lights, his machine suddenly gets out of order, or the spotlight falls in the wrong place, leaving you in darkness.

It is the assistant property man's prerogative to care for the laundry of the actors. This is quite an item. Some acrobats, for instance, must use new sets of tights for each act during the afternoon and night, say three appearances in all. By all means, do not forget to tip the assistant property man. Otherwise your laundry is likely to go mysteriously astray, or your bill is cunningly padded—so that he may split with the laundry and get his tip after all. A comedian who neglects to fee the assistant property man is likely to find that the laundry has washed all the laugh out of his speckled socks, and faded all of the joke out of his striped vest. All of this trouble may be avoided by the payment of 50 cents, and even a quarter is not altogether disdained.

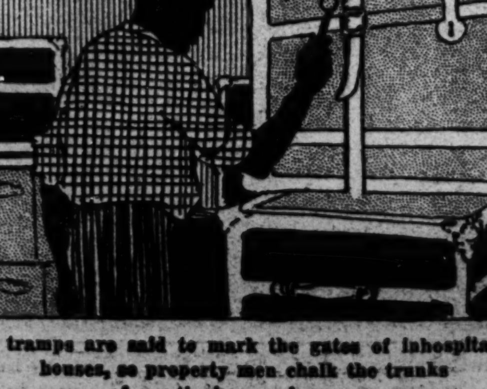
Then, if you value the success of your act, do not fail to tip the stagehands and property men. In my ignorance at the beginning I failed to do this. One of my tricks was turned into ridicule by a stagehand, who slyly cut with his knife a thread by which cards were being levitated, and another spoiled a trick with a lemon by cutting off the end of the fruit.

In addition, stagehands have a system of marking your trunks with chalk, as tramps are said to mark the back gates of residences, thereby informing their fellows at the next theater to which you go that you are a close-fisted scoundrel. Thereupon expect to have your trunk mislaid, or hidden behind other baggage where you can scarcely find it or get to it, or to have it dropped "accidentally" and damaged.



As tramps are said to mark the gates of inhospitable houses, so property men chalk the trunks of nontipping performers.

The musicians in the orchestra who play your music are less grasping, for they usually expect you to do no more than buy them a glass of beer around each night. Once I neglected to do so—much to my subsequent mortification.

My program had been one of merry tricks, and was to close with a climax of fun to the accompaniment of one of the jolliest of the new rags. Imagine how mirthful the finale was when the beerless musicians, instead of "Too Much Mustard," broke into the lugubrious strains of Beethoven's "Funeral March!" That certainly taught me a lesson about the artistic temperament.

We are not infrequently called upon to furnish entertainment at the various clubs and hotels. If the booking agent pays me $10 for the evening's work, I may be certain that he got at least $25 from the club and pocketed $15 as his fee.

Often it happens that an impresario on a small scale gathers together a number of acts and takes them out on the road among the "movie" houses in the smaller towns of Illinois and Missouri. Unless the manager keeps his eyes wide open, he and his company will be robbed right and left by the rustic sharps.

The usual arrangement is that the visiting company shall receive a certain percentage of the receipts. One such manager was astonished to discover the discrepancy between the number who obviously were present and the number of tickets reported sold. So he took his stand in the box office one night.

After the first show, the ticket taker remarked that he was going to get a bite to eat, and asked the ticket seller if he could bring him anything. "A sandwich with plenty of ham," was the reply. Soon the ticket collector returned, bringing his companion a huge sandwich. The manager seized it, opened it, and discovered that the "plenty of ham" was about $25 worth of tickets, which the collector was returning to the ticket seller to be sold again. Of course, this was clear profit for the theater and clear loss for the manager and his company.

At another out-of-town theater, a visiting manager likewise became suspicious and went to the box office. He saw nothing out of the ordinary, but finally heard behind him a gentle tapping, which was frequently repeated. He turned and saw on the wall what appeared to be one of the toilet boxes in public places, from which one can get soap and a towel.

As the ticket seller looked uneasy when the visitor cast his eyes upon the box, he opened it and found within a mass of gallery tickets. He found that a hidden chute led from the box to the ticket taker in the gallery, and that this worthy was dropping down the tickets he took in to his confederate, by whom they were to be sold over and over.

Still another ticket taker wore out to luncheon the overcoat belonging to the ticket seller, and returned the garment with the pockets filled with tickets—of course, to be resold.

I found that my loss in graft and tips, on a basis of $35 a week salary, averaged from $5 to $8 a week, and that, as my salary increased, the loss also increased in proportion. Everyone in the theater, down to the stagehands, have an uncanny knowledge of just what every actor is making, and a marvelous arithmetical skill in estimating just what part of that salary is due to himself.

Of course, even after everyone's greed is satisfied, from the booking agents down to the property man, a 10-cent actor makes a pretty fair living, compared with some other lines of work. I know nothing else at present at which I could make $40 to $50 clear a week. But as the graft increases geometrically while your salary is increasing only arithmetically, I don't think I can afford to make the stage my permanent profession.

Perhaps the actors wouldn't feel so sore about the graft extorted from them if the stagehands and property men and all the menials and mechanics about the theater didn't add insult to injury by holding them in such contempt. They certainly despise an actor, and are not backward in letting him know it. I guess some of us may not be Kellers and Sembrichs and George Cohans. But it goes pretty hard to hear some scene shifter, after we have disgorged a substantial part of our salaries to him and his tribe, make audible remarks about "them bum 10-cent actors."

DIVORCE COURT

MIZZI SCHUMANN

Noted opera star, on day of her own divorce, announces engagement of Mizzi, who was wooed and won on her own orange ranch after a runaway horse catapulted a handsone stranger at her door . . . .

LIFE, as may have been observed before, is a puzzling matter. Witness: The other day a celebrated woman sat in a divorce court and strove amain to be rid of a husband. She paraded his perfidy and assailed his honor. Then she walked out of court and beamed with enthusiasm in recounting the romantic engagement of her young daughter, saying the thought of it made her young again. So it goes. Perhaps it is just the sufficiency of youth. In this case it was something more.

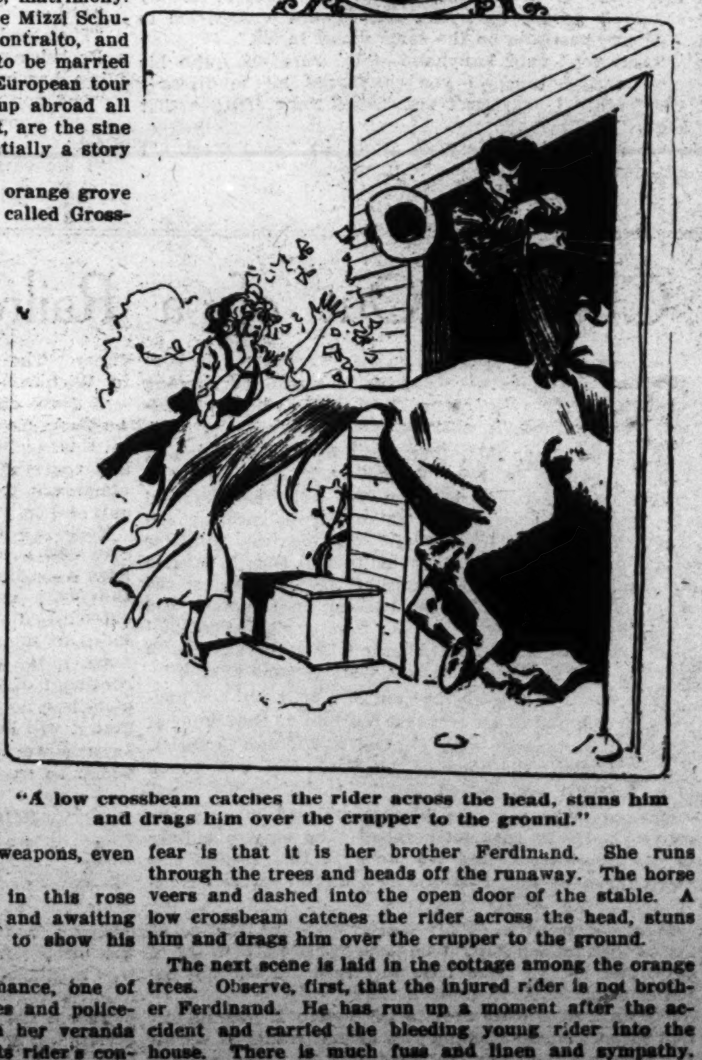
Any Californian will tell you, if found in a normal mood, that his State is surfeited with roses and oranges, than which no truer concomitants of romance may be conjured. Goethe's Mignon found the orange glowing in its dark leaves even better than the rose, which is enough in its way. All of which is to prove that California is the place for romances--along with all others.

But this subtle nothing—romance—cannot be fed alone on oranges and roses. You might gather all the orange groves in the world and plant in their shadow all the roses of Samarcand, and not one reputable romance would come of them. But nature provides for that. It lets young women discover that orange groves make pleasant shade and sends them there to erect bungalows and keep house. Also it provides young men with eyes that pervade the countenance, runaway horses, injuries, tender nursings—and, alas, matrimony.

This is what was done in the case of little Mizzi Schumann-Heink, youngest daughter of the contralto, and Hubert Guy of San Diego, Cal. They are to be married as soon as the young woman completes a European tour with her distinguished mother and picks up abroad all of the frills which, in the singer's judgment, are the sine qua non of housewifery. But this is essentially a story of how such things happen. Hence:

Mme. Schuman-Heink owns a ranch and orange grove 14 miles out of San Diego. The place is called Grossmont and possesses a commodious chalet overlooking El Cajon Valley. Some time ago the singer gave her Mizzi, whose real name is Marie, 45 acres of oranges on the outskirts of the big estate and erected a six-room cottage for her. A year ago Miss Schumann-Heink, with her friend, Miss Gertrude Nieman, left the effete New Jersey to take up her home in the little cottage among the oranges—and there it happened. But that comes later.

HUBERT GUY.



"A low crossbeam catches the rider across the head, stuns him and drags him over the crupper to the ground."

The two young women, Mme. Schumann-Heink recounted with obvious pride, bought their dishes and cooking utensils in a 10-cent store. They cooked on smoky coal oil burners. They lived in the unplastered cottage with Navajo blankets and Indian art about them, and they sold $2000 worth of oranges when the season had come.

"They do their laundry and iron their laundry," said the contralto. "Dose two have such good times picking oranges from de trees. All night dey sit by the fireplace and hear the mother sing to them on the Victrola."

Consider, now, Miss Schumann-Heink in this rose and orange retreat, living the simple life and awaiting as do all men and women, for romance to show his blooming face.

As it happened it was a runaway romance, one of the favorite varieties common to heiresses and policemen. Miss Schumann-Heink is sitting on her veranda when she sees a runaway horse, beyond its rider's control, dashing down through the orange la[illegible]. Her first fear is that it is her brother Ferdinand. She runs through the trees and heads off the runaway. The horse veers and dashed into the open door of the stable. A low crossbeam catches the rider across the head, stuns him and drags him over the crupper to the ground.

The next scene is laid in the cottage among the orange trees. Observe, first, that the injured rider is not brother Ferdinand. He has run up a moment after the accident and carried the bleeding young rider into the house. There is much fuss and linen and sympathy. These things go with such occasions as ham with eggs.

Miss Schumann-Heink bathes the injured man's head and bandages the bruises and cuts left by the obtrusive crossbeam. Then the rider sits up and takes notice. He becomes suddenly aware that Miss Schumann-Heink is young; that she is fair to look upon; that she has large, dark eyes, which just now contemplate him in a most distracting manner. It is merely sympathy, but how is a man who has just jousted a crossbeam to judge such matters?

The next result of this conspiracy of roses and orange groves, of runaway horse and crossbeam, was that Mr. Hubert Guy of San Diego was forced—much against his will, to be sure—to spend several days at Eagle's Nest. Behold that is the name of Miss Schumann-Heink's cottage.

In the days that followed he rode out often from San Diego to visit Brother Ferdinand and Sister Mizzi. Now, it is not proper to spy on a couple in the act of becoming engaged, so that no dictographic or kinetoscopic record of that potential matter exists, but it may be left to the human reason. Supposing, for instance, that you were in the mood of romantic proposal and you had about you bowers of roses and arbors of orange-laden branches. You would call them into service, would you not?

In any event, Mr. Guy and Miss Schumann-Heink did. In about four weeks after the memorable contact with the crossbeam there was a telegraphic message from San Diego to Chicago, where Mme. Schumann-Heink lives, to the effect that her little Mizzi, having arrived at the brashness of 18 years, was engaged to Mr. Guy, profession, banker and broker.

Madame was pleased. What would you? She had seen romances before and liked the color of them. Her son, Hans Schumann-Heink, had engaged a woman pianist for a tour and returned with a wife. His brother, Walter, had been waited upon in a Paterson (N. J.) restaurant by the proprietor's daughter and a wedding followed like a Q E D. Not that alone, but there had just been another rapid-fire courtship in Paterson, N. J., which had terminated in the engagement of Henry Schumann-Heink and Miss Elsie Straumann, a school teacher.

Humors of Lending Libraries

PROSAIC and serious though the business of lending libraries may seem to be to the average person, it provides at times an unsuspected fund of humor. There is, for instance, the juvenile borower who writes to the librarian:

"Dear Sir—Please renew the book that I took out about two weeks ago, or it may be three. I forget the author and title, but it was bound in blue, with a picture of a dolphin on the back."

And then there is the troubled reader who, holding out to the assistant the latest novelty in bookmarks, says, "I wish you would tell your lady readers not to leave fringe-nets in their books. I found a hairpin in the last book and a fringe-net in this, and my wife is getting a bit suspicious."

Perhaps, however, it is the people who unconsciously twist the titles of books they ask for who provide the librarian and his assistants with their biggest laughs, and in "Library Jokes and Jotting," Mr. H. T. Coutts gives some amusing examples of borrowers' quaint requests. Here are a few selections:

"I have come for Mr. A——. Will you please send him 'Indecent Orders'?" ("In Deacon's Orders.")

"Please renew 'The Prisoner of Zena Dare'" ("Prisoner of Zenda."

"Have you a novel entitled 'She Combeth Not Her Head'?" ("He Cometh Not, She Said.")

"I want Braddon's 'Trial of the Servant'" ("Trail of the Serpent.")

"Have you the 'Essays of a Liar'?" ("Essays of Elia".)

"'Bunch of Screws' ("Bunter's Cruise").

"Is the 'Stuck-up Minister' ("Stickit Minister") in?

"'Kiss Auntie' ("Quisante"), if you please."

"A lady reader," says Mr. Coutts, "who had a passion for country walks used to arrange visits to charming rural spots, and sought help in the choice of them at the library. She asked the attendant to supply her with 'Notable Hamlets.' Until he pointed out to her the portraits of Henry Irving and other famous actors, included in the volume, she could not believe that it had nothing to do with rambles to famous villages.

Children often confuse the titles of popular books and will ask for such things as "Alison's Fables," "Good Liver's Travels," "Helen's Dairy," "Hollyberry Wan," "From Powder Admiral to Monkey," and "Sweet Family Robinson Crusoe."

Miniature Cattle and Hybrid Hogs Introduced in America by August A. Busch

Irish cows of tiny size, that give enormous quantities of milk, to be exhibited on a special traveling display at state fairs . . .

At many of the big State fairs in the country next summer will appear an exhibit that promises to attract more than usual attention because it will be unique.

It will be nothing less than a miniature livestock farm on wheels—the live stock being of a variety which most American farmers will then see for the first time.

The wheels will be the running gear of two huge, old-fashioned prairie schooners, drawn by the finest team of oxen that can be found in the United States and Europe. It will be composed of at least eight steers.

Interesting as this equipage no doubt will prove, it is likely that it will attract even less attention than the curious freight it carries. For there will be cattle such as are rarely seen except in a small part of Ireland, and hogs of a breed wholly new in this country.

The cattle will be only about three feet high, yet each cow will give upwards of three gallons of milk a day, milk, moreover so rich in butter fat that the dairies in the land where the cattle thrive are world famous.

The hogs will be different also from the smooth, well-tended swine of the American farm. They will have many of the peculiarities of our best native hogs and yet they will have many marks of a totally unfamiliar breed. They will, in fact, be a cross between the wild hogs of Europe and the native American hogs, a hybrid from which is obtained the famous hams of Westphalia.

Miniature cattle, hogs, prairie schooners, oxen and all will belong to a St. Louisan, August A. Busch. Mr. Busch departed June 14 for Europe to select personally the foundations for the herds and has commissioned Hagenback of Berlin, to collect the best varieties to be found for his inspection.

Before going Mr. Busch wrote to the Secretary of Agriculture, informing him of his intention and promising him that all the imported stock should come from places entirely free of any dangerous livestock diseases. This is to facilitate the entrance of the animals through quarantine. They will be brought to St. Louis forthwith and quartered in the baurenhof at Grant Farm, the Busch country place.

This barn, by the way, is something of a palace within itself. Although Mr. Busch has declined to discuss the dollars and cents of such matters, it is declared that the bauernhof cost $250,000. In appearance it resembles an old European chateau, with its generous inner court, more than it does a stable.

In it are places for all kinds of livestock, as well as automobiles and other vehicles, and a dairy. Outside of its valuable collection of horses and gear, it at present houses a herd of 35 fine Jersey cattle, some of which were presented to Mr. Busch by his son, Adolphus Busch III.

Mr. Busch explained that his chief purpose in importing the hogs and cattle is to exhibit them in such a manner as to cause farmers to investigate the advisability of breeding them. He is convinced that both the hybrid hogs and the tiny cattle would be of great value, because of their hardy natures and their ability to forage for themselves, together with an immunity from cholera and tuberculosis such as most of our own breeds do not possess.

"I have always had an ambition to breed fine livestock myself," he explained, "and to do something to advance stockbreeding in the country. I expect to exhibit these animals in all the large state fairs of the country. I expect to transport them by rail and overland by the prairie schooners and ox teams. I am sure they will attract attention.

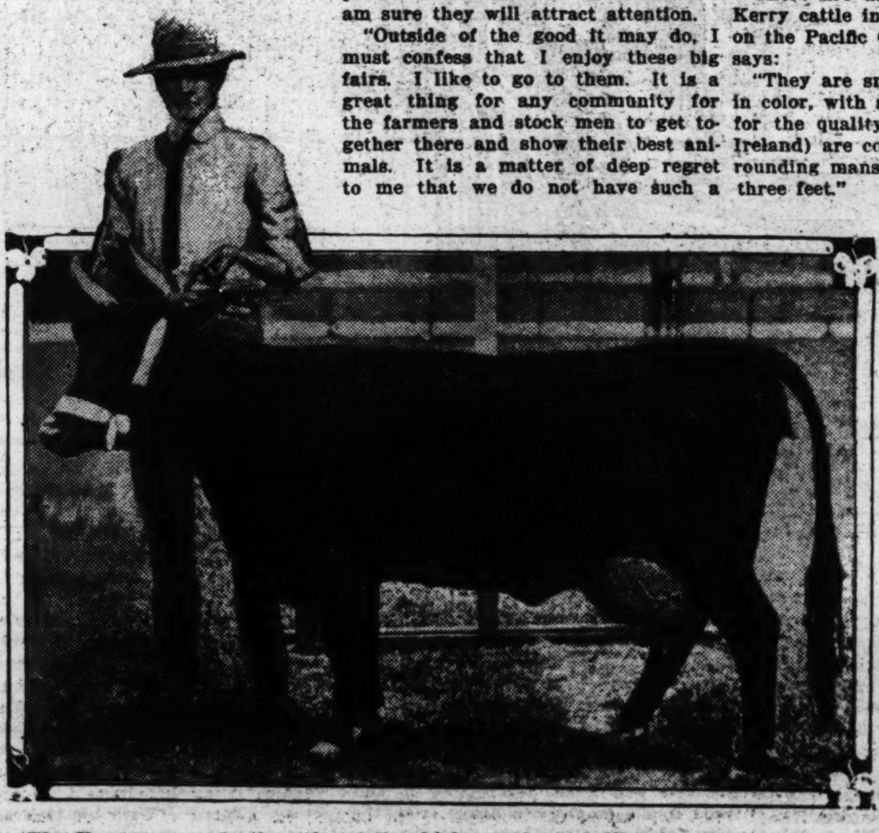
"Outside of the good it may do, I must confess that I enjoy these big fairs. I like to go to them. It is a great thing for any community for the farmers and stock men to get together there and show their best animals. It is a matter of deep regret to me that we do not have such a gathering right here in St. Louis every year—a great, big, old-fashioned fair, where the best of everything is shown and where there are a few horse races to give it zest.

"I have been especially interested in the Kerry-Dexter cattle of Ireland. They are hardy creatures—can subsist almost anywhere a goat can. They are splendid foragers, immune from most of the diseases that affect our native cattle and, at the dairy, yield rich returns for all the cost and care of them.

"The cross-breeding of wild boars with the finest domestic sows brings a hybrid that is especially fine for meat. It is most excellent as a bacon hog and as for hams—well, it is identically the animal from which Westphalian hams are obtained, and everybody knows how this meat is esteemed by the epicures. The breed is a very hardy, self-supporting one, thriving almost anywhere and offering the greatest resistance to cholera. I think their introduction into this country will be a matter of great importance to the stock breeders."

There are already two or three small herds of the Kerry cattle in this country, two of them being owned on the Pacific Coast. Of the Kerry cattle an authority says:

"They are small, finely-shaped animals, black or red in color, with small, up-turned horns. They are famed for the quality both of their flesh and milk and (in Ireland) are considerably in demand for the parks surrounding mansion houses. An average height is about three feet."



The Kerry cow, only three feet tall, which can browse like a goat and gives a surprising amount of rich milk.

"The cattle are of small size, rarely weighing more than 350 pounds and frequently not more than 200. The breed is a mixed one, of various colors; formerly all were black. In the more remote and mountainous districts this color still predominates; but few, I believe, of the pure native breed at present remain. They are, in general, good milkers, eighteen quarts a day being no uncommon produce from a cow of 309 pounds. Small beasts of all kinds are preferred by the farmers as being better suited to the circumstances of the country and more capable of enduring hardships and more easily subsisted. It is the large quantity of milk yielded by so small an animal that renders the Kerry cows generally valued by the cottagers of Ireland. She is frequently named the poor man's cow, and she merits this appellation by her capacity of subsisting on such fare as he has means to supply."

In his search for eight oxen, Mr. Busch will see whether he can find in Europe a better team of eight than his all-American team of eight, collected at considerable expense several years ago. Draft cattle are still bred to a great extent in Germany.

In discussing his interest in stock-breeding, Mr. Busch declared that ever since he was a boy he had had an ambition to own fine livestock of all kinds. This is in keeping with his well-known love of outdoor life. He has always been a great hunter, the game room at his Grant Farm home being stocked with the finest and largest collection of trophies privately owned in St. Louis.

It was not, however, to gratify a mere personal ambition that he embarked on the present enterprise. He declares himself in hearty sympathy with all the modern movements to improve farming and stock breeding and says he will feel amply repaid if his importations will be of any value to the public.

He expects to send the exhibits out in the charge of experts. One of these probably will be Robert Aull, at one time president of the old St. Louis Fair and known in St. Louis as the "World's Fair Park Commissioner."

It is said that the millionaire brewer is thinking of other ventures into the realms of livestock breeding.

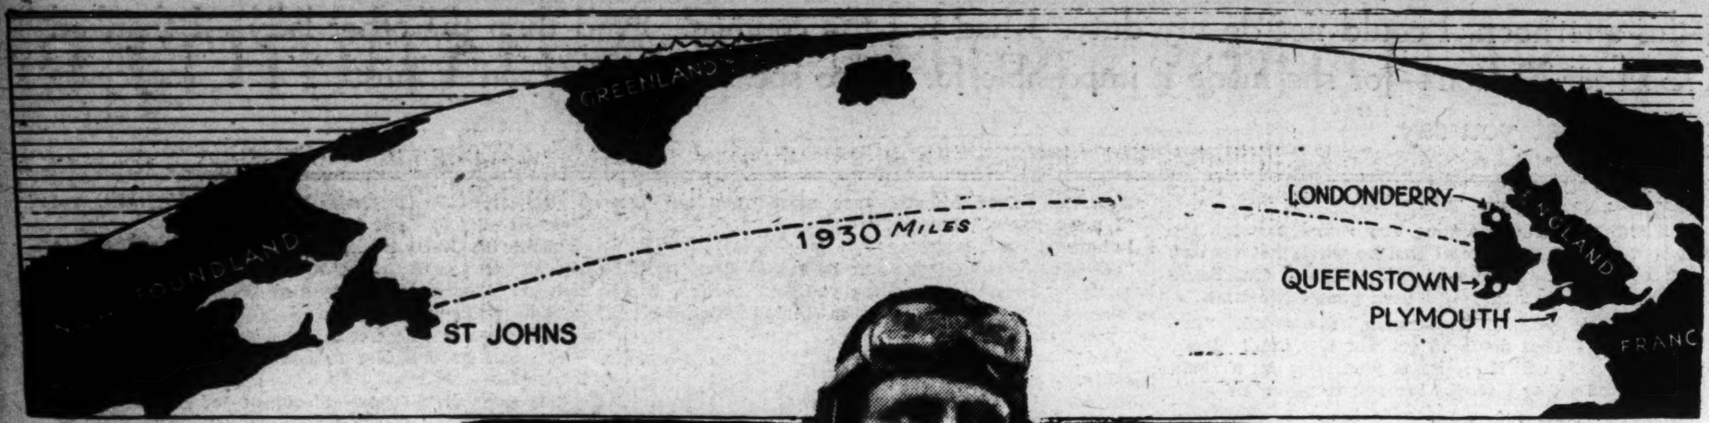
UNUSUAL AND PRETTY ROMANCE

Columbus of the Aeroplane



LIEUT. J. C. PORTE.

Here you are made acquainted with Lieut John C. Porte, the aviator who will attempt to fly across the Atlantic in an American machine for a $50,000 prize

TO fly across the Atlantic!

Just to think of it produces thrills, and thrills.

Two thousand miles of watery grave between Newfoundland and the Irish coast! The whims of a gasoline engine! The uncertainties of fog and wind and waves. The frail body of a flying boat probably your sole salvation!

Truly, it is the most sensational adventure of modern times and he who succeeds in it will be acclaimed the Columbus of the air.

You conjure up the man for this adventure. You likely imagine that only a devil-may-care, loop-the-looping sky acrobat would essay such a jump into the great unknown.

Then you meet the man picked from the aviators of both continents as the "one best bet" in this greatest race for aeronautical honors, with the Harmsworth prize of $50,000 as added incentive. This man is John C. Porte, Lieutenant of the British navy, who is now preparing at Hammondsport, N. Y., to pilot the Rodman Wanamaker expedition across the Atlantic next month, and to report his experiences exclusively for the Post-Dispatch and New York World. You talk with Lieut. Porte for 10 minutes, and all your preconceptions of heroics in trans-ocean flight goes to smash; you gain a new impression of aviators and a conviction that you have met in this quiet-spoken young son of an Irish clergyman the man who WILL cross the Atlantic in an aeroplane.

You don't have to penetrate far beneath Lieut. Porte's armor of dignified British reserve before you discover that he does not regard his ocean flight as the sport of a holiday. His serious personality sufficiently repudiates the flippancy attributed to him by a part of the British press in a misquotation that went around the world. "I have never described the transatlantic trip as 'a jolly adventure,'" he said, "but the story still persists. I don't like it. I have never regarded the trip in the light of adventure, but as a very serious expedition in search of a definite result."

Rodman Wanamaker, millionaire sportsman and philanthropist, son of John Wanamaker, the merchant, set his heart last winter upon the aerial linking of the continents in this year that marks the centenary of Anglo-American peace. He told his executives to spare no expense on the machine, so they are putting about [illegible]0,000 into two specially designed Curtiss flying boats. For the pilot Mr. Wanamaker said to search the lists for the one man most likely to approach the staggering task with assurance of success; he must not be a spectacular flier of the type that is always "ready to take a chance," but a man of disciplined mind and body, equipped with scientific knowledge and a love for service. Mr. Wanamaker's man selected Lieut. Porte because he had built his reputation and success as an aviator on the rule never to take an avoidable risk in the air. Porte had become noted as the most careful successful airman on either side of the Atlantic.

"I'm no circus performer," said Porte, analyzing himself. "I am keen for aviation and its advancement, and [illegible] readily acknowledge the great service to the science [illegible] some men who have helped to demonstrate the stability of the aeroplane by hazardous stunts. But avia[illegible] is not necessarily advanced by everybody taking the extreme risks. If I turned to looping the loop [illegible] such tricks they would think I had gone crazy."

[illegible] the "angel" of the expedition, Mr. Wanamaker set only one limit—safety. Before going to Europe, where he expects to welcome Porte at the end of his flight, Mr. Wanamaker had a brief, solemn conference with the airman. The death of Gustav Hamel, who had been Porte's intended rival, was fresh in the minds of everyone connected with the Wanamaker flight.

"Please understand this thoroughly, Lieutenant," said Mr. Wanamaker, "you are not to start out in that boat unless you KNOW you are going to get to the other side. You are not to start on a chance that you will arrive. If this first machine isn't perfect, wait till the second one is ready; if that isn't right, we'll build a third or a fourth—I don't care how many; but you are not to risk your neck."

Porte promised to be careful. "I am not blind to the risks," he declared, "but I really don't feel that I am taking any great risks, such as Columbus took. He didn't know where he was going! I know just where I am going and how I am going to get there."

This confidence of Porte's is the assurance of a man trained to know and to do some one thing well. Porte did not grope around under the sea in British submarines six years without acquiring self-confidence and courage. He put himself to the fore so rapidly that after five years he became head of the training course for officers and men of the British submarine corps, which increased during his six years of service from five to sixty-five boats. He served through most of the experimental stage and broke down his health through his devotion to duty. He was on the way to further promotion when retired on pension in 1911, at the age of 27.

"The submarine service is the best possible training for aviation," Lieut. Porte explained. "I was interested in aeronautics and realized that my experience under the water would serve me in the air. I had to take up something, since I couldn't live on hot air, so I went into aeronautics as a business."

At the age of 14 Porte began his naval training after his early education in English private schools. He was born in Bandon, County Cork, on Feb. 26, 1884. His father, the Rev. J. R. Porte, then rector of Bandon, is now vicar of Denmark Hill, London. Porte is not married.

Wilbur Wright's first visit to Europe in 1908 aroused the young Lieutenant's interest in aviation. The following year, while on shore service at Portsmouth, Porte spent most of his spare time and money experimenting with gliders. With the services of two ship carpenters he constructed the first glider, so far as he knows, making use of the "staggered" planes—the upper plane set forward instead of directly over the lower one. One of the gliders carried Porte and one passenger in its flights off Portstown Hill. "From ignorance," Lieut. Porte said, "this glider flying was the most risky thing I ever did—more hazardous, I believe, than flying the Atlantic now. I had several tumbles, but fortunately no serious hurts.

In 1910 Lieut. Porte invested $1500 in a Demoiselle monoplane, but it was too small to carry him and all he got for his effort was experience in control as he hopped over the ground in it. The following year, however, he was able to master a big Deperdussin monoplane at Rheims with three-quarters of an hour practice. This was his first actual flying, in 1911. Then came his retirement with honors from the navy and his plunge into aviation as head of the British Deperdussin Co. Porte personally conducted his aviation school and piloted the big "Dep" machines in the principal English races. He soon won the name of being the sanest, soberest man in the flying game.

Porte's only serious accident was at the start of the 1000-mile English circuit race in 1911, when his machine was smashed by a gust and he was carried down with it 60 feet. He dented the gasoline tank with his head, but that never affected his nerve for future flying.

Nerveless, imperturbable, Porte appears on every occasion. His flying was the marvel of the enthusiastic British public last year at Hendon In the speed contests he was always scratched against Claude Grahame-White and other aviators of equal note. The following account from The Aeroplane of Aug. 28, 1913, describes one of Porte's most noted races:

"Undoubtedly the feature of the race was the magnificent flying of Lieut. Porte, R. N., on the big Deperdussin. Though the wind was treacherous, he flew very low and cornered in a manner that was daring to the point of recklessness. In the first heat he allowed M. Harty to lead for one circuit while he discovered what the atmosphere was doing; then he began to race, and outstripped the little Morane by something like half a lap. The biplanes got out of the way and left the others to it. For the greater part of the eight laps nobody could prophesy the finish, but everybody could see that there was a mighty small space between Mr. Porte's left wing tip and the pylons as he passed them. Certainly the spectators had never been so deeply moved by any flying contest. During the last lap they were standing on their chairs for the most part, and when the great brown thunderbug came pounding past No. 1 pylon, just two seconds in front of its plucky little adversary, they not only clapped their hands, but they waved their hats and shouted. If this sort of thing keeps on there will be bookies at Hendon."

Another account of this race described Porte's banking his machine so steeply at the turns and hovering so close to the ground to avoid the wind that his wing tip skimmed the earth by barely a few inches and at one turn dug up the grass.

HIS WIFE

Copyright 1914 by the Post-Dispatch.

HE was a shabby, little, middle-age man—one of that innumerable host whose dull, irresolute faces and lax, lethargic bodies pathetically publish them as failures. And the unkemptness of his rusty, gray hair, the dinginess of his coarse skin, the uncleanness of his blunt finger-tips, the stains on his threadbare coat lapels, and the grimy glaze on his linen, all were symptoms expressing poignantly his apathetic acquiescence in that destiny. In that struggle for which fate had prepared him, in mind and spirit, so inefficiently he had been long since well beaten into a pattern for submission and drudgery. Now, at last, he was irrevocably a poor machine, none too accurate even for small performances, doing whatever task was set for him by those who, because they were everything that he was not, controlled his mean and trifling fortunes.

All day long he worked in a big room full of desks and active young men, where the clerical business of a great factory was done. His tasks were calculated to require little of the spirit of enterprise and alertness which characterized this place. In an atmosphere of eagerness and sharpness, he moved about his petty employment quite unaffected by it. Sometimes, upon indiscriminating strangers, his dullness imposed as calmness, his lethargy as deliberation, his bulging brow—the peculiarly salient, deceptive brow of so many futile souls—as evidence of capability suppressed. To such casual, myopic observers he seemed to be a man who had not been given a proper chance—a man inappropriately employed. For he ruled forms, filed unimportant papers, distributed or stamped letters, kept the desks in order, did whatever the time of the keen, young clerks was too valuable to be wasted on. A boy could have done nearly all that he did, and, by the deadly accuracy of his employers' judgment, he received nearly as little as a boy's wages

In the evening, when all the clerks had gone and he had put the big office to rights, he would begin inevitably to think of his own homegoing and, consequently, of his wife.

His wife! How often he had expressed himself in incoherent terms, at such moments as that; what a travesty on proper reward for all his long days' effort were those homecomings of his to her!

It was a part of his little tragedy that, as though at his making he had been half intended for better uses, he should be able vaguely to appreciate the values of what other people had and he was missing. What should be, even among the people of whose especial class he was, the legitimate expectation at such an hour, with home in view? Simple, warm coziness, without a doubt! A soothing sense of snugness engendered of pleasant, tranquil companionship in cheerful setting. But what, in place of that, had he to anticipate?

He always knew exactly how he would find his wife: at the stove in the kitchen of their gloomy little flat, her face blotched and shining from the heat of frying food, her thin hair stringing down around her coarse, creased neck, her shapeless figure wrapped in a faded and stained working dress. And he always anticipated even the expression with which she would receive him at his homecoming; an expression of recognition without welcome, signifying an almost sullen acceptance of his presence—as though, in her opinion, there was in him some constant, subtle cause for resentment and hostility.

What could be the solution of this furtively hostile riddle which was so apt to appear in his wife's eyes as soon as she turned them on him?

He had too little intuition or capacity for seeing even himself clearly to find the answer. But he could understand that something intangible was, nowadays, always between them—something that she, who had so evidently raised it up herself, seemed always with curious, wicked injustice to be blaming him for.

Whatever, unconsciously or not, she meant by this, how blighting an effect it had on him, coming home with timorous aspirations toward peace and tranquillity, always to be so greeted! That maddening look of hers—sometimes he almost fixed it as a sort of tired contempt—would fill him with a weak, bewildering rage. The strange inequity of it! He would get swiftly a desire to retaliate for it upon the one person in the world on whom he could feel perfectly safe in retaliating. Then, casting about for means of retaliation, he would most easily find them just in seeing her as she was, with clear, spiteful eyes. He would see her as she was after all the years they had lived together in absolute, gross intimacy, without any appreciation of the saving quality of carefully preserved ideas, having destroyed every illusion. There would be no little repulsive detail in her conduct or appearance that he would not remember and observe, that he would not mark vindictively. And his reprisal would come when she would see—and she could not help seeing—written on his face, his comprehension of her stale state of degeneration and his repugnance of it. It was through, in his expressed contempt for her existing self, aged, grown slatternly and ugly, becoming something that he had never bargained for, that he would strike back at her. It was not by ingenious understanding, but just instinctively that he had come across this weapon for revenge. If he had known how terrible a weapon it was!

Greeting each other so, in air surcharged with mutual antipathy and provocation, they would begin their evening.

"That's married life!" he said to himself again one day, just as he had often said, as he put on his worn-out coat and hat to leave the empty dusky office and go home. "That's married life!" Unconsciously he made those three inadequate words, by the accent of vague bewilderment with which he uttered them, exquisitely pathetic.

AS he was going along the hall on his way out, someone called to him from the private office, the open door of which he was just passing.

He stopped, forgetting everything else in a sudden thrill of unreasoning, unreasonable fear. For he was, at best, always secretly apprehensive of that private office, or, rather, of those in it. And now, at this unusual call for him, presaging he could not guess what act of theirs, for an instant he was really frightened. He felt the acute fright of a poor and defenseless person whose unstable, trivial fortunes are suddenly menaced. Suppose that they had all at once found him in some way inefficient or too old for their full profit. Suppose that they were actually going to turn him out, aghast, to walk the streets!

Hat in hand, he shuffled to the open door, having on his face that wide-eyed, flaccid expression of humility and anxiety which aging, inept dependents take into the presence of powerful employers.

In the bright private office there was but one person: the owner of the factory. He was sitting tipped back in his chair beside a large, glistening desk, smoking, with the air of a man who has finished satisfactorily his sort of day's work. His calm face indicated, for the employe in the doorway, strange qualities such as unvarying self-possession, self-confidence and competency. Innumerable details which made up his immaculate appearance hinted at an extraordinary, felicitous existence amid other surroundings of unguessed luxury and attractiveness. Expressing, by every visible characteristic, the idea of unlimited possession, ability and power, he was the sort of being for one quite without possessions, or ability, or power even over himself, to be properly afraid of. When he began to speak the other held his breath, prepared by his extravagant and senseless trepidation for any dire announcement.

The employe was told that there was an errand to be done at once, which had been forgotten until every one else had gone. It related to some repairs being made in his employer's house from the factory. There were some measurements, necessary for the completion of the work, to be got before morning. He was rapidly and clearly instructed in their nature and was told to make them on his way home that evening, and to give them to a foreman the first thing next day. He received the address and money for carfare. In another moment he found himself in the hall.

As he stumbled down the factory steps and set off on his errand, his nervous reaction from fear affected him peculiarly. At once, half realizing the absurdity and the shame of his emotion he began to hate the man before whom he had been forced to feel it. He hated that calm, rich man for those intangible qualities in contemplating which he had felt so pitiably helpless. He hated him for everything differentiating which he had—even for his personal appearance, for his physical immaculateness and fineness. He hated him as the embodiment of his class; of that class which, as he had always implicitly believed, from a position of luxurious ease inexorably drives the poor and defenseless hither and thither in deep-worn ruts of toil, to pile up its illimitable profits.

These thoughts of his seemed, as he went on his way, to attract toward him for his notice countless tangible examples of the conditions which he was hating. For now, having left the rough factory streets behind, through clangorous, feverish zones of business and pleasure mingled, he came into the particular regions of the rich.

There, in an evening mist made luminous by glittering lamps and the brilliant facades of wonderful hotels and shops, he moved like a man in a strange, superior land, bewildered, oppressed by a sense of his own miserable insignificance. That was, perhaps, the worst of his condition; that he was not permitted to view these things with the unappreciating, childlike wonder which is the unsuspected blessing of so many of the lowly. The poor metal of his brain oddly contained of better stuff just enough for his dejection; so that even from his place he could look up, half-comprehendingly, at this strange, inaccessible existence and envy bitterly. So, the clatter of extravagant traffic tangled in the broad avenue, the dazing glimpses, caught through carriage windows, of beautifully perfect women, his occasional contact with the tide of well-clothed alien beings that flowed about him, the very crisp air, scented by winter flowers and perfumes, filled him with a despondent sense of privation. And, at his despondencey, there smoldered in him a hot envy for all this heartless, cruel, greedy race into whose especial country he was intruding. How bitter a commentary on injustice he was among them—beaten after long years' futile struggling for just a little of what they had never wanted and would never relinquish, in the smallest part, for such as he. Ah, the ghastly, wicked inhumanity of the condition that allowed it!

He passed from the refulgent section of that avenue into the quieter, darker parts. Here were silent stretches of massive and harmonious dwelling houses, solemnly grand, suggesting discreetly for him, just by the illuminated richness of their wide doorways and drawn window curtains, untold magnificence within. Among these he found the house of his employer. He rang the bell at the servants' door and presently was admitted.

A MAID, leading him back through a narrow hall, passed him on to a man servant whom—at first sight of his tall, correctly clothed figure—the intruder took for a gentleman. This imposing domestic heard the other's errand with an air of reluctance and disfavor and then told him coldly, as though he was responsible for being there, that he had chosen a very bad time. "How long will you be?" the servant inquired brusquely. "At any rate, you will have to cut it short. There's a dinner party tonight and you must get out of here before anyone arrives." He preceded the other quickly through a door and into the main part of the house.

At once the stranger stepped, with a thrill of amazement, into a region of extraordinary and stately beauty. He stared about him with no definite comprehension of the suggestive details in those decorations; the extensive, soft-colored rugs shining on the stone floor, the massive, ancient fountain basin in the midst of the hall, the few great paintings on the wooden walls, or the bulky, green-bronze group of consummately molded figures at the base of the wide staircase. His impression was merely of the unexpected, unnecessary vastness and richness of the place which for him in his ignorance assumed a sort of splendid public quality, as though it might be the foyer of some elaborate hotel.—as though, indeed, it could not reasonably be a part of a private house.

The servant led him hastily up the polished stairway to a second story, no less largely beautiful, and as deserted. In an ample, golden-brown place where soft firelight was reflected from countless gilded backs of books and blankly shining picture glasses, he set to work at his measurements, the servant watching him impatiently. And he worked hurriedly on his own account; for all the strange grandeur of this place filled him with confused uneasiness, as though it formed an environment in which he had no right—in which, in fact, by his presence he was effecting something reprehensible.

With his task nearly finished and escape at hand, all at once in the silence he heard behind him a soft, suggestive rustling and then a little, low, feminine exclamation of surprise. Turning involuntarily, he saw in the doorway, looking at him, a lady.

She was a beautiful person, tall, slender and delicately blond. She was dressed for the evening in a low-neck gown whose peculiar, frosty rosiness so harmonized with herself that, as perhaps was intended, it seemed something almost less alien than a dress—nearly like a subsequently created part of her. Standing at the doorway in the soft light, she was something so complete, harmonious and perfect, she was so exceptional and unprecedented a sight that for the shabby intruder, she had quite the quality of an apparition.

Here, for the first time in his life, this man was face to face with a woman of that other, alien world. Here he was seeing her in the intimate setting of her own proper place, in this beautiful attire which, too, to his humble, unsophisticated senses, seemed distressingly intimate. Now, finally, he could see, with all the appreciation of which his mind was capable, to what environment, to what associations, fate allowed those other men to come home.

When this wonderful lady learned the reason for his intrusion she asked, in a voice pregnant for her hearer with such unexampled softness and refinement that it added to his confusion:

"Are you nearly through? You must hurry. This is a very inopportune time; my husband, perhaps, forgot"——

"I am all through, lady," he answered, huskily, and stood waiting timidly for her to step from the doorway. At once her slight expression of irritation faded; she turned indifferently and left the room with a slow, barely undulating step.

"See him out," she said over her snowy shoulder to the servant. "Open the library windows before you go down."

THE SHADOW OF THE ROPE

By E. W. HORNUNG

AN installment full of surprises and thrills closes this great

"'I WANT to tell you,' the sick lad murmured. 'I wanted to tell her—God knows it—and that alone was why I came to her the moment I could find out where she was. Yet, when she came this afternoon, I could not do my duty. I had not the courage. And then the other lady—I thanked God for her too—for she made it impossible for me to speak. But to you I must . . . especially after what you say.'"

"Have the ladies gone?"

Langholm had ridden a long way round, through the rain, in order to avoid them; and he would not venture to set foot upon the noisy wet gravel without Mrs. Brunton's assurance that they had been gone some time.

"And they've left a different man," she added. "But what have you been doing to get wet like that? Dear, dear, dear! I do call it foolish of yer! Get out o' them nasty wet things, or I shall have you to nurse an' all!"

The kind, blunt soul bustled to bring him a large can of scalding water, and Langholm bathed and changed before going near the invalid. He also felt another man. The thorough wetting had cooled his spirit and calmed his nerves.

Severino lay smiling, like a happy and excited child. Langholm was sorry to detect the excitement, but determined to cut his own visit shorter than ever. It was more pleasing to note how neat and comfortable the room was now, for that was his own handiwork, and the ladies had been there to see it. At the bedside stood a real Chippendale table, with a real Delft vase upon it, filled with such roses as had survived the rain. A drop of water had been spilt upon the table from the vase, and there was something almost fussy in the way that Langholm removed it with his handkerchief.

"Oh," said Severino, "she quite fell in love with the table you found for me, and Mrs. Woodgate wanted the vase. They were wondering if Mrs. Brunton would accept a price."

"They don't belong to Mrs. Brunton," said Langholm, shortly.

"No? Mrs. Woodgate said she had never noticed them in your room. Where did you pick them up?"

Langholm looked at the things, lamps of remembrance alight beneath his lowered eyelids. "The table came from a little shop on Bushey Heath, in Hartfordshire, you know. The vase is from Great Portland street." The prices were upon his lips; both had been bargains, a passing happiness and pride.

"I must remember to tell them when they come tomorrow," said Severino. "They are the sort of thing a woman likes."

"They are," agreed Langholm, his lowered eyes still lingering on the table and the vase. * * * "So these women are coming again tomorrow, are they?"

The question was quite brisk, when it came.

"Both of them, eh?"

"Yes, I hope so!" The sick man broke into eager explanations. "I only want to see her, Langholm! That's all I want. I don't want her to myself. You see, as it is, I can't say anything—that matters. Do you see?"

"Perfectly," said Langholm gently.

"What did you talk about, then?" he asked.

A small smile came with the answer, "You!"

"Me! What on earth had you to say about me?"

"I heard all you had been doing."

"Oh, that."

"You know you didn't tell me, that evening in town."

"No, I was only beginning, then."

It seemed some months ago—more months since that very afternoon.

"Have you found out anything?"

Langholm hesitated.

"Yes."

Why should he lie?

"Do you mean to say that you have any suspicion who it is?" Severino was on his elbow.

"More than a suspicion. I am certain. There can be no doubt about it. A pure fluke gave me the clew, but every mortal thing fits it."

Severino dropped back upon his pillow. Langholm seemed glad to talk to him, to unburden his heart ever so little. And, indeed, he was glad.

"And what are you going to do about it?"

"That's my difficulty. She must be cleared before the world. That is the first duty—if it could be done without—making bad almost worse!"

"Bad—worse? How could it, Langholm?"

No answer.

"Who do you say it is?"

No answer again. Langholm had not bargained to say anything to anybody just yet.

Severino raised himself once more upon an elbow.

"I must know!" he said.

Langholm rose, laughing.

"I'll tell you who I thought it was at first," said he heartily. "I don't mind telling you that, because it was so absurd; I was idiot enough to think it might be you, my poor, dear chap!"

"And you don't think so still?" asked Severino, harshly.

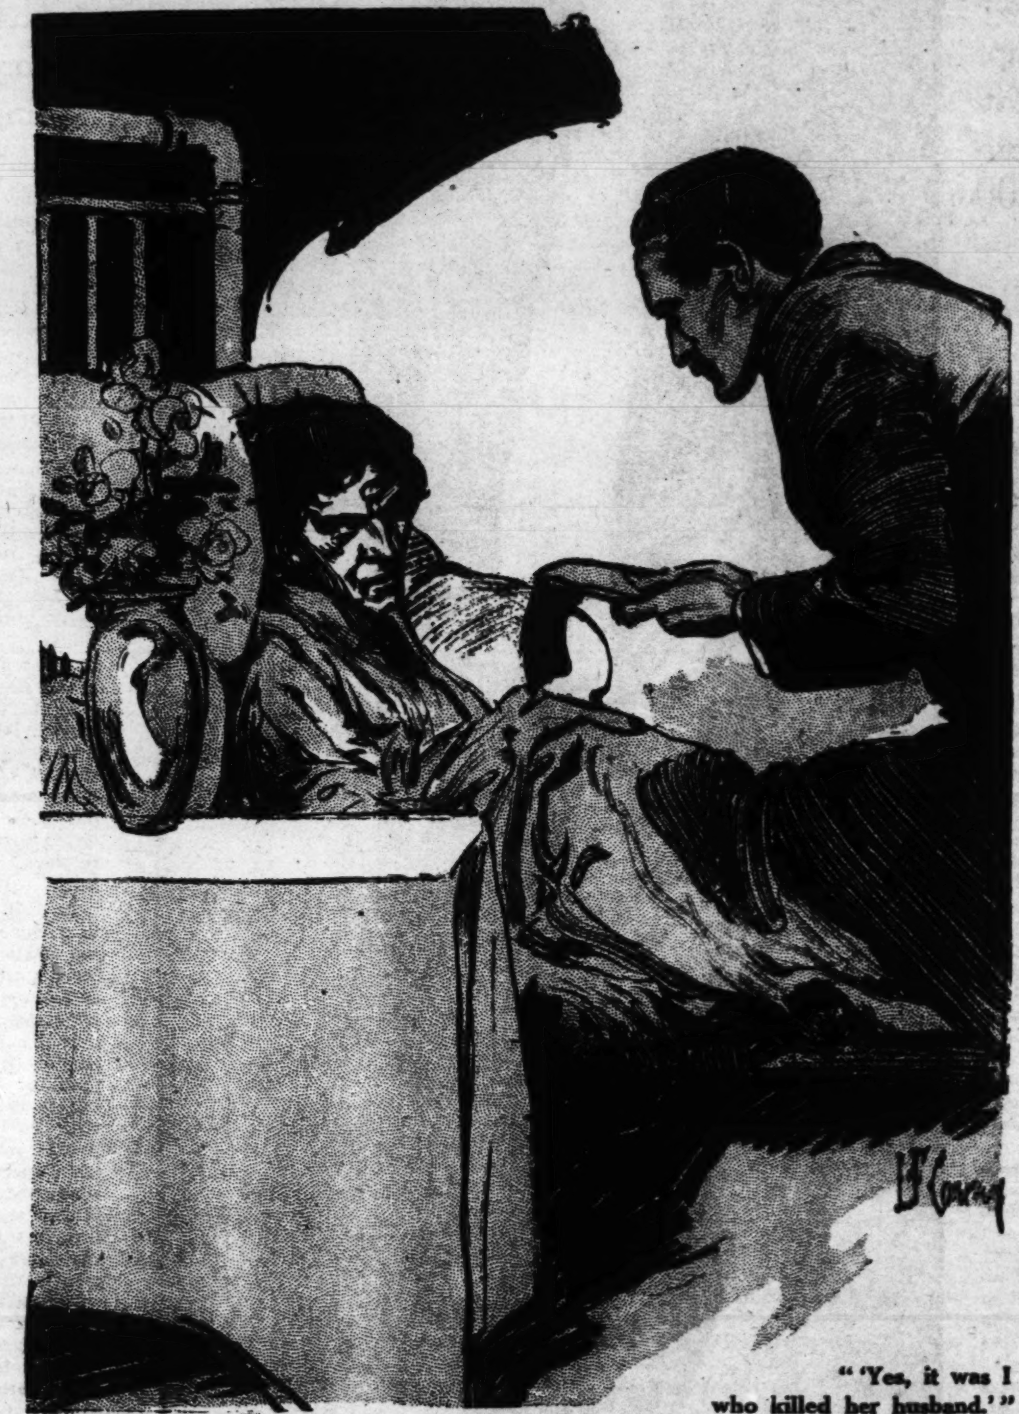
"Of course I don't, my dear fellow."

"I wish you would sit down again. That's better. So you know it is someone else?"

"So far as one can know anything."

"And you are going to try to bring it home to this man?"

"I don't know. The police may save me the trouble. I believe they are on the same scent at last. Meanwhile, I have given him as fair a warning as a man could wish."



"'Yes, it was I who killed her husband.'"

SEVERINO lay back yet again in silence and deep twilight. His breath came quickly. A shiver seemed to pass through the bed.

"You needn't have done that," he whispered at last.

"I thought it was the fair thing to do."

"Yet you needn't have done it—because—your first idea was right!"

"You said you first thought it was I who killed—her husband."

"It couldn't have been!"

"But it was."

Langholm got back to his feet. He could conceive but one explanation of this preposterous statement. Severino's sickness had extended to his brain.

"Where are you going?" asked the invalid, querulously, as his companion moved toward the door.

There was silence for a few moments, and then a faint laugh, that threatened to break into a sob, from the bed.

"I see what you think. How can I convince you that I have all my wits about me? I'd rather not have a light just yet—but in my bag you will find a writing case. It is locked, but the keys are in my trousers pocket. In my writing case you will find a sealed envelope, and in that a fuller confession than I shall have breath to make to you. Take it downstairs and glance at it—then come back."

"No, no," said Langholm hoarsely; "no, I believe you! Yes—it was my first idea!"

"I hardly knew what I was doing," Severino whispered. "I was delirious then, if you like! Yet I remember it better than anything else in all my life."

"You really were unconscious for days afterward?"

"I believe it was weeks. Otherwise, you must know—she will be the first to believe—I never could have let her"——

"My poor dear fellow—of course—of course."

LANGHOLM felt for the emaciated hand, and stroked it as though it had been a child's. Yet that was the hand that had slain Alexander Minchin!

"I want to tell you," the sick lad murmured. "I wanted to tell her—God knows it—and that alone was why I came to her the moment I could find out where she was. No—no—not that alone! I believe I should have come, even if I had had nothing at all to tell her—only to be near her—as I was this afternoon! But the other made it a duty. Yet, when she came this afternoon, I could not do my duty. I had not the courage. And then the other lady—I thanked God for her, too—for she made it impossible for me to speak. But to you I must. * * * especially after what you say."

The man came out in Langholm's ministrations. "One minute," he said; and returned in two or three with a pint of tolerable champagne. "Now drink, and tell me only what you feel inclined, neither more nor less."

"It is all written down," began Severino, in better voice for the first few drams; "how I first heard her singing through the open windows in the summer—only last summer!—how she heard me playing, and how afterward we came to meet. She was unhappy; he was a bad husband; but I only saw it for myself. He was nice enough in his way—liked to send round for me to play when they had anybody there—but there was only one reason why I went; I make no secret of it now; if I made any then it was because I knew her too well and feared to lose what I had got. And yet—that brute, that bully, that coarse"——

HE checked himself by an effort that strained his face a sickly brown in the light of the distant candle, Langholm handed him the tumbler and a few more drams went down to do the only good that human aid could do for Severino now.

"I was ill; she brought me flowers. I never had any constitution—trust a Latin race for that—and I became very ill indeed. With a man like you, a chill at worst; with me, pneumonia in a day. Then she came to see me herself, saw the doctor, got in all sorts of things, and was coming to nurse me through the night herself, God bless her for the thought alone! I was supposed not to know; they thought I was unconscious already. But I kept conscious on purpose; I could have lived through anything for that alone. And she never came!

"My landlady sat up instead. She is another of the kindest women on earth; she thought far more of me than I was ever worth, and it was she who screened me through thick and thin during the delirium that followed and after that. But that night—it was her second in succession—she fell asleep beside me in the chair.

"Dear soul, how it angered me at the time! It made me fret all the more for—her. Why had she broken faith? Something had kept her. At last I got up and went to the window. And all the windows opposite were in darkness except theirs."

Langholm sprang to his feet, but sat down again as suddenly.

"Go on!"

"What is that you thought, Langholm?"

"All those garden walls—they connect."

"Yes? Yes?"

"You got through your window, climbed upon your wall and ran along to the lights."

"And yet you could suspect another after that!"

"Ah, there is some mystery there also."

"I did not know what I was doing," resumed the young Italian. "I still have very little recollection of what happened between my climbing out of our garden and dropping into theirs.

"It was near midnight, as you know, and the room it happened in—the study—had the brightest light of all. The window was as wide open as it would go, the lower sash thrown right up. The sill was only the height of

HIS WIFE

> "AS he went, at once inevitably, there occurred to him a comparison between the place he was leaving and that to which he was now going; between the woman he had just seen and the one he would see presently. Two images stood suddenly before him in cruel contrast: the images of his employer's wife and of his own."

The intruder, following into the hall, came into air faintly perfumed with some strange, sweet, very subtle odor, which lingered where she had been. As he descended the stairs, he began to remember, in little flashes, amazing details of her that his mind had been able, half-unconsciously, to grasp. He remembered the exquisite smoothnes and color of her cheeks and throat, the white beauty of her shoulders and breast that he had in some way comprehended without daring to look at directly. He remembered the splendor of her slim, ring-laden fingers. He remembered the illusion of youthfulness in her figure as she left the room, trailing her soft, clinging, frostily-rosy skirts, undulating just perceptibly. He began to remember all her half-apprehendable perfection which actually made her seem to him, weighed by his inadequate measures of experience, hardly a woman.

The cold air struck his forehead and neck, hot and moist from his late confusion. The door was slammed shut behind him. He looked up and about with the manner of a man suddenly waking out of unrealities. Slowly he set out for hime.

As he went, at once inevitably there occurred to him a comparison between the place he was leaving and that to which he was now going; between the woman he had just seen and the one he would see presently. Two images stood suddenly before him in cruel contrast; the images of his employer's wife and of his own.

The difference in that comparison, as vast as in every other between his condition and his employer's, affected him terribly by what he would have termed its injustice. Both of them, he reflected, after all, just men—the one had everything that signified contentment and enjoyment in prosperity, the other had nothing. Both of them husbands, the one possessed a wife in whom was embodied that evident perfection of womanhood by which the other was actually bewildered. And this shabby man, realizing that for someone else intimate life with such a woman was an actuality, was going home to the woman allotted to him—his own wife. He would find her at the stove in the kitchen of their dingy little flat, in a murk of greasy smoke, disheveled, red faced, coarse, nowadays repulsive even to him, ready to greet him with her old look of mean, perpetual hostility. At that moment, his whole weak nature crying out against the cruelty of it all, how he loathed her, for her part among the instruments of his punishment!

Punishment! But what had he done to deserve his punishment?

That was, he thought then, the worst of it; there was no justice at all in a world where such conditions were possible. By the only doctrine which he knew—the illogical doctrine which teaches the poor how to envy and to hate illogically—this was the intolerable thing; that the rich should be able to take everything, and such as he, striving pathetically for so little, nothing. How vividly that villainous wrong stood out before his eyes tonight, on his realizing all the tremendous difference between his employer's fortunes and his own, between their homes, their wives, everything—even themselves.

He stopped in the street as this thought seized him. Yes, between themselves, too. He was not thinking then of their differences of clothing and cleanliness, of education and refinement. He was thinking of something beyond these things, setting him and his employer unalterably far apart—something which he was trying to identify. * * * His mind, unadapted for any consecutive reasoning, seized clumsily on this new idea and began to grapple with it.

He remembered his employer as he had seen him in his private office, still at his post after everyone else had gone—surely a poor figure from which to draw an example of idleness rewarded with criminal prodigality. His was a face fashioned in a superior mold. Power and ability and perfect self-reliance were written on it too clearly ever to have replaced other sorts of lineaments erased. Those qualities, so expressed, and surely not grown up with that man's good fortune. Surely he had been born with them. Surely they had urged him to become what he was; they had been responsible for that, had done that for him.

There, at last, through a rift in the dark obscuration of unreasoning class hatred, shone the answer to everything. While some men came into the world with such spirit in their faces, there could be nothing in common between them and such as this poor man. Their sort must gain everything and his must work in little, futile ways forever and gain nothing. That innate difference—that tragedy of fate's capricious handicap of brain and spirit—that was the answer.

Walking on slowly, he remembered, in dismal corroboration of this, how everything he had ever undertaken, in all his life, had failed. He remembered how everything with which he had ever had personally to do had been infected by his own perpetual failure. It had been so always, with all his associations, with the woman he had brought into his life—

Ah! What was he seeing now? He was seeing his wife, in a form for a long time strange to him and nearly forgotten. He was seeing her as she had been in that brief, almost unbeliveable period marked by their wedding day.

He remembered she had been young and fresh; her mind had then been largely still unformed; her character had been still untrained. She had been the plastic material from which—how terrible to realize it—almost anything might have been fashioned!

And he, all their life together, had been dragging her down with him through the gloomy paths of his puerile, profitless career. If she had begun then with heedless, youthful certainty of the future, with vague, but trustful, young optimism, how long had it taken to show her the mistake of that, to wear such tenuous things out, to give her, in place of them, all their antitheses? With him she had lost them so quickly, so long ago, that only now, with a quick pang, had he remembered them.

What was she now? She had grown too early middle-aged and ugly under worry, slovenly and gross under hardship, querulous and bitter under misfortune. She was what he had made her.

He had made her so. He had made her what, but a little while ago, he had loathed her for being.

His wife! That long-forgotten mental picture of her stood out before him; the picture of her as she had been at the beginning when, under the protection of such a man as his employer, might she not have approached in large degree, through ease and prosperity and cultivation, the image of such a woman as his employer's wife? If that were so, ah, the mortal injury that all these years he had been doing her!

FINALLY, all his numbing thoughts arranged, he came miserably into that familiar region, crowded, strident, dirty and malodorous, where he lived. He reached his tenement and climbed the soiled, littered stairs, through air rank with odors of cooking food and of uncleanly living. He reached his own door and, pushing it slowly open, went in.

But when he saw her, exactly as he had pictured her in that contrast with his employer's wife, with every unlovely detail of her appearance cruelly evident, he stopped in the doorway, staring at her wretchedly. He was staring at all that he had done.

She rose from the kitchen chair in which she had been waiting for him, glanced swiftly at the clock, and then turned to him a face full of irritable, indignant inquiry.

But he stood still and mute, struck so by the look that had preceded that one—a look of real relief, for one instant illuminating her face as he, appearing at last, had quieted her apprehension at his long lateness. The old, familiar greeting he had expected—and he had analyzed it now, and knew what bitter, hopeless and just thoughts must be behind it. But that first unconscious look which he had found tonight in place of it—that flash of unguessed solicitude—melted all his numb apprehension. It drove him, stumbling forward to her, with a face tremulous; chaotic; with his fingers involuntarily reaching out for her in gesture which for a long time he had forgotten. He took her in his arms; he smothered her struggling amazement with a sudden, weak convulsion of dry sobs. In a cracking voice, striving to express for her his piercing realization, he cried:

"My wife. * * * My poor wife. * * *"

Could it have been merely a contagion of emotion which leaped from him to ravage her susceptible, feminine nature? Peculiarly her mouth, in a swift, sympathetic response, was suddenly contorted as though from pain. And then, going all limp, she clung to him, her coarse hands clutching his threadbare shoulders, her unkempt hair pressed against his cheek. Their sobs, their bungling motions, were incoherent. Perhaps even their agitation was to them, just then, inexplicable, roused they knew not how and shaking them they knew not to what purpose. But at that sudden, mutual crumbling into emotion, all at once miraculously all their long bitterness and all their cruel, recriminative thoughts were gone. All in an instant those unexpected, unfamiliar tears were swept away the sullen barriers between them—the angry sense of rights and wrongs, the wanton injuries and ghastly processes of retaliation. And perhaps, after all, cited then divinely with a golden intuition, each saw, without a word needed to explain, all of the other's tragedy standing in brimming eyes, and finally understood.

city from their homes in Green Spring Valley passed along the road in a stream of automobiles, and most of them, recognizing Parr, greeted him with a chorus of jeers and jests, to which he replied in kind.

Mrs. Parr arrived soon after her husband had completed the second mile and was rolling down the road with renewed energy, as if, in athletic parlance, he had got his second wind. She expressed naively her surprise at finding him still "in the ring."

"Well," she exclaimed, "I didn't expect to find you here. If I had thought you would stay I shouldn't have slept a wink. How are you?"

"Good morning," he replied, as, for the two thousandth time, he revolved his body over his right arm and dropped on all fours. "I'm fine." Mrs. Parr rode beside him to the finish, when she proudly presented him with a silver loving cup.

The third mile went at a faster clip than the first, it being completed in three hours and 10 minutes. As he neared the goal, so great a crowd gathered that it was necessary for policemen to clear a way for him. To the surprise of everyone, he seemed comparatively fresh at the end, and capable of rolling another mile, if necessary.

Covered with dirt but grinning triumphantly, he staggered to his feet with a sigh expressing sincere relief. At first his cramped legs sagged a bit at the knees. His mother, Mrs. Harry A. Parr, arrived 15 minutes before the finish, and as her son arose from the ground, cried: "Get him a chair!" With a fervor which was unmistakable, Parr exclaimed:

"I don't want a chair. I haven't stood up for 15 hours."

Making the liberal estimate that with each turn of his body Parr advanced five feet, it followed that in accomplishing the three miles he had performed 3168 revolutions, at an approximate rate of three and one-third turns a minute.

Despite this astonishing record, he was able, after being whisked away to his home in an automobile by his proud wife and mother, to appear at the Pimlico races that afternoon and collect his bets from the unfortunates who had been rash enough to doubt his pluck and endurance.

CANDLE TO BURN 3000 YEARS FOR J. P. MORGAN

A VOTIVE candle soon to be placed in the Vatican at Rome in memory of the late J. Pierpont Morgan will be so large that it could burn continuously for nine years before being consumed. As it is to be lighted only for 12 hours on each All Soul's day, it is expected to last over 3000 years. It was made in New York by Ajello Bros., at the cost of $1500, the expense being shared by the congregation of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Caramel, in Jersey City, in acknowledgement of Mr. Morgan's many charities and benefactions in Italy.

It is made of the finest white Italian beeswax, is 16 feet high, tapers from a base of 1 1-2 feet to 6 inches at the top, and weighs 400 pounds. An oil portrait of Mr. Morgan is placed 60 inches from the bottom. More than $300 in gold leaf has been used in ornamentation.

As a beeswax candle of this kind could not be made by molding, it was made by dipping. That is, the wick, prepared by a secret formula and tapered in proportion to the dimensions of the completed candle, was repeatedly dipped into a cauldron of melted wax, each dipping leaving a fine coating, which was permitted to dry before another was made. It required four weeks to complete this process. The candle is said to be the largest and costliest ever made.

The largest candle ever made before, was kindled Easter morning two years ago before the altar of St. Biogio at St. Peters, Rome. It has been burning constantly and is expected to burn four more years. It was made in payment of a vow by a celebrated singer whose lost voice was restored.

In the little Church of St. Michael, Padula, Italy, is another giant candle. It is a memorial of Detective Sergeant Petrosino of New York City, who was assassinated at Palermo.

"'I WANT to tell you,' the sick lad murmured. 'I wanted to tell her—God knows it—and that alone was why I came to her the moment I could find out where she was. Yet, when she came this afternoon, I could not do my duty. I had not the courage. And then the other lady—I thanked God for her too—for she made it impossible for me to speak. But to you I must . . . especially after what you say.'"

THE SHADOW OF THE ROPE

By E. W. HORNUNG

AN installment full of surprises and thrills closes this great story. Incident there is a-plenty, stirring incident and tense situations, but perhaps the greatest fascination of the issue lies in the vigorous and dramatic narrative in which the author tells his tale. These closing chapters are the most entrancing as well as the most eventful in the whole novel.

Sixth Installment

THE irresistible discomfiture of this ruffian did not affect the value of the evidence which he had volunteered. It was enough for Langholm to know that there was a certain secret in Steel's life, upon which the wretch Abel had admittedly traded, even as his superior Minchin had apparently intended to do before him. Here was the motive, without which the case against John Buchanan Steel must have remained incomplete. Langholm added it to his notes—and trembled!

He had compunction enough about the major triumph which now seemed in certain store for him; the larger it loomed, the less triumphant and the more tragic was its promise. Before morning he had decided to give Steel a chance. It was a vague decision, dependent on the chance that Steel gave him when they met, as meet they must.

Meanwhile Severino was a thorn in his side. He knew that Rachel had been written to and fell into a fever of impatience and despair because the morning did not bring her to his bedside. She was not coming at all. She had refused to come—or her husband would not allow it. So he must die without seeing her again! The man was as unreasonable as sick men will be; nothing would console him but Langholm's undertaking to go to Normanthrope himself after lunch and plead in person with the stony-hearted lady or her tyrannical lord. This plan suited Langholm well enough. It would pave the way to the "chance" which he had resolved to give to Rachel's husband.

That resolve was not weakened by successive encounters, first with a policeman near the entrance gates, next with a trespasser whom Langholm rightly took for another policeman in plain clothes, and finally with the Woodgates on their way from the house.

"Oh, what a blessing you have come!" cried Morna, whose kind eyes discovered a tell-tale moisture. "Do please go up and convince Mrs. Steel that you can't be rearrested on a charge on which you've already been tried and acquitted!"

"But, of course, you can't," said Langholm. "Who has put that into her head, Mrs. Woodgate?"

"The place is hemmed in by police."

"Since when?" asked Langholm quickly.

"Only this morning."

LANGHOLM held his tongue. So the extortioner Abel, outwitted by the amateur policeman, had gone straight to the professional force!

"I don't think this has anything to do with Mrs. Steel," he said at last; "in fact, I think I know what it means, and I shall be only too glad to reassure her, if I can."

But his own face was not reassuring, as Hugh Woodgate plainly told him in the first words which the vicar contributed to the discussion.

"I have been finding out things—I have not been altogether unsuccessful—but the things are rather on my mind," the author explained. "How does Steel take the development, by the way?"

"As a joke!" cried Morna, with indignation; her husband was her echo both as to words and tone; but Langholm could only stare.

"I must see him," he exclaimed decisively. "By the way, once more, do you happen to know whether Mrs. Steel got a letter from me this morning, Mrs. Woodgate?"

"Yes, she did," answered Morna at once. Her manner declared her to be not unacquainted with the contents of the letter, and Langholm treated the declaration as though spoken.

"And is she not going to see that poor fellow?" he asked.

"At once," said Morna, "and I am going with her. She is to call for me with the phaeton at 3."

"Then I can only commend him to the sympathy which I know he has already. And I will talk to Mr. Steel while you are gone."

The first sentence was almost mechanical. That matter was off Langholm's mind, and in a flash it was fully occupied with the prospect before himself. The phaeton was at the door when Langholm also arrived, and Rachel herself ran out to greet him on the steps, her face still years older than the one he wore in his heart, though no less beautiful in its distress.

"I hardly dare ask you!" she gasped, her hand trembling in his. "Have you found out—anything at all?"

"A little."

And he opened his hand so that hers must drop.

"Oh, but anything is better than nothing! Come in and tell me—quick!"

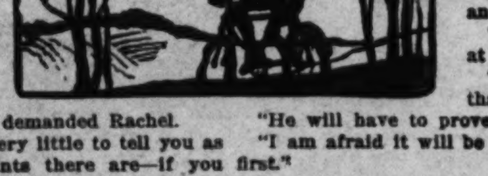
It was Steel, spruce and serene as ever, a pink glow upon his mobile face, a jaunty Panama straw covering his white hair, and buckskin shoes of kindred purity upon his small and well-shaped feet. Langholm greeted him in turn.



"I came to tell Mr. Steel," said Langholm, a little lamely.

"Excellent!" murmured that gentleman.

"But am I not to hear also?" demanded Rachel.

"My dear Mrs. Steel, there is very little to tell you as yet. But one or two little points there are—if you would not mind my mentioning them to your husband?"

"Oh, of course."

There was no pique in the tone. There was only disappointment—and despair.

"You manage a woman very prettily," remarked Steel, as they watched the phaeton diminish down a drive like a narrow Roman road.

"You are the first who ever said so," rejoined the novelist, with a rather heavy sigh.

"WELL, let us have a cigar and your news. I confess I am interested. A stroll, too, would be pleasanter than sitting indoors, don't you think? The thickest walls have long ears, Langholm, when every servant in the place is under notice. The whole lot? Oh, dear, yes—every mother's son and daughter of them. It is most amusing; every one of them wants to stay and be forgiven. The neighbors are little better. The excuses they have stooped to make, some of them! I suppose they thought that we would either flee the country or give them the satisfaction of a double suicide. Well, we are not going to do either one or the other; we are agreed about that, if about nothing else. And my wife has behaved like a trump, though she wouldn't like to hear me say so; it is her wish that we should sit tighter than if nothing had happened, and not even go to Switzerland as we intended. So we are advertising for a fresh domestic crew, and we dine at Ireby the week after next. It is true that we got the invitation before the fat fell into the fire, but I fancy we may trust the Invernesses not to do anything startling."

During this monologue the pair had strolled far afield with their cigars, and Langholm was beginning to puff his furiously. At first he had merely marveled at the other's coolness; now every feeling in his breast was outraged by the callousness, the flippancy, the cynicism of his companion. Steel seemed disposed to discuss every aspect of the subject except that of the investigations upon which his very life might depend. Finally, and without ceremony, Langholm interrupted.

"I thought you came out to listen to me?"

"My dear fellow," cried Steel, "and so, to be sure, I did! Why on earth did you let me rattle on? Let me see—the point was—ah, yes! Of course, my dear Langholm, you couldn't really have discovered anything of any account inside a week!"

"Nevertheless," said Langholm, "I have."

"You don't mean to tell me you have struck a clew?"

"I believe I can lay hands upon the criminal," said Langholm, as quietly as he could. But he was the more nervous of the two.

"Have you communicated with the police?" he inquired.

"Not yet."

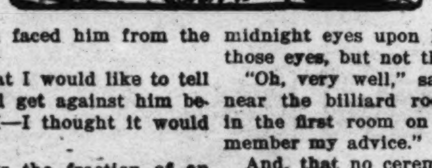
"They don't get it from me."

IT was impossible any longer to doubt the import of Langholm's earnest and rather agitated manner. There was an immediate alteration in the tone and bearing of his host.

"My dear fellow," he said, "forgive my levity. If you have really found out anything, it is a miracle; but miracles do happen now and then. Here's the pond, and there's the boathouse behind those rhododendrons. Suppose you tell me the rest in the boat? We needn't keep looking over shoulders in the middle of the pond!"



For an instant Langholm dreamt of the readiest and the vilest resource; in another he remembered that he could swim. He signed to Steel to lead the way, and in a very few minutes they were scaring the wildfowl in mid-water, Steel sculling from the after thwart, while Langholm faced him from the crimson cushions.

"I thought," said the latter, "that I would like to tell you what sort of evidence I could get against him before—before going any further. I—I thought it would be fair."

Steel raised his bushy eyebrows the fraction of an inch. "It would be fairest to yourself, I agree. Two heads are better than one, and—well, I'm open to conviction still, of course."

But even Langholm was not conscious of the sinister play upon words; he had taken out his pocketbook, and was nervously turning the leaves.

"Got it all down?" said Steel.

"Yes," replied Langholm, without raising his eyes; "at least I did make some notes of a possible—if not a really damning—case against the man I mean."

"The first point," said Langholm slowly, "is that he was in Chelsea, or at least within a mile of the scene of the murder, on the night that it took place."

"So were a good many people," remarked the other, smiling as he dipped the sculls in and out.

"Well, you can't hang him for that."

"He will have to prove where he was, then."

"I am afraid it will be for you to prove a little more first."

Langholm sat very doggedly with his notes.

"The next point is that he undoubtedly knew Minchin in Australia"——

"Aha!"

"That he was and is a rich man, whereas Minchin was then on the very verge of bankruptcy, and that Minchin only found out that he was in England thirty-six hours before his own death, when he wrote to his old friend for funds."

"And you have really established all that!"

Steel had abandoned all pretense of rowing; his tone was one of admiration, and his dark eyes seemed to penetrate to the back of Langholm's brain.

"I can establish it," was the reply.

"Well! I think you have done wonders; but you will have to do something more before they will listen to you at Scotland Yard. What about a motive?"

"I was coming to that; it is the last point with which I shall trouble you for the present." Langholm took a final glance at his notes, then shut the pocketbook and put it away. "The motive," he continued, meeting Steel's eyes at last, with a new boldness in his own—"the motive is self-defense! There cannot be the slightest doubt that Minchin intended blackmailing this man, at least to the extent of his own indebtedness in the City of London."

"Blackmailing him?"

There was a change of voice and manner which was not lost upon Charles Langholm.

"There cannot be the slightest doubt," he reiterated, "that Minchin was in possession of a secret concerning the man in my mind, which secret he was determined to use for his own ends."

STEEL sat motionless, his eyes upon the bottom of the boat. When at length he raised them, the natural inscrutability of the man was more complete than ever.

"So that is your case!" said he.

And even his tone might have been inspired either by awe or by contempt, so truly rang the note between the two.

"I should be sorry to have to meet it," observed Langholm, "if I were he."

"I should find out a little more," was the retort, "if I were you."

"And then?"

"Oh, then I should do my duty like a man—and take all the emoluments I could."

The sneer was intolerable. Langholm turned the color of a brick.

"I shall!" said he through his mustache. "I have consulted you; there will be no need to do so again. I shall make a point of taking you at your word. And now do you mind putting me ashore?"

A few raindrops were falling when they reached the landing stage; they hurried to the house, to find that Langholm's bicycle had been removed from the place where he had left it by the front entrance.

"Don't let anybody trouble," he said, ungraciously enough, for he was still smarting from the other's sneer. "I can soon find it for myself."

Steel stood on the steps, his midnight eyes upon Langholm, the glint of a smile in those eyes, but not the vestige of one upon his lips.

"Oh, very well," said he. "You know the side door near the billiard room? They have probably put it in the first room on the left. Good-by, Langholm; remember my advice."

Langholm found the room to which he had been directed; in fact, he knew it of old. But the missing machine certainly was not there. Langholm was turning away when the glazed gun rack caught his eye. Yes, this was the room in which the guns were kept. They had never interested him before. Yet now he peered through the glass—gasped—and opened one of the sliding panels with trembling hand.

There on a nail hung an old revolver, out of place, rusty, most conspicuous; and at a glance as like the relic in the Black Museum as one pea to another. But Langholm took it down to make sure. And the maker's name upon the barrel was the same that he had noted down at the Black Museum; the point was gained, the last of the cardinal points postulated by the official who had shown him around.

THE fortuitous discoverer of them all was leaving like a thief—more and more did Langholm feel himself the criminal—when the inner door opened and Steel himself stood beaming sardonically upon him.

"Sorry, Langholm, but I find I misled you about the bicycle. They had taken it to the stables. I have told them to bring it around to the front."

"Thank you."

"No, thank you."

It was an inglorious exit that Langholm made; and he was thinking to himself, was there ever so inglorious a triumph? He knew not what he had said; there was only one thing that he did know. But was the law itself capable of coping with such a man?

VERA CRUZ PHOTOGRAPHED FROM AN AEROPLANE

FOR the first time in history, war correspondents like Richard Harding Davis and James H. Hare, the famous reporter in pictures, are using the aeroplane at Vera Cruz to obtain their "stories" and photographs.

The photographs on this page were taken by Mr. Hare from the cockpit of the new United States Navy hydroaeroplane, C-5, during a voyage above Vera Cruz and its harbor. They give an idea more vivid than words could accomplish of the Mexican city which is receiving for the first time under American rule an orderly and sanitary government.

The pictures tell the story of the cruise. First we see the aeroplane being tuned up in preparation for the flight. Then come in panoramic succession bird's-eye views of the city and its platted squares; the ships of the American fleet, looking like toy boats with which children play in the nursery, but in reality mighty engines of destruction; and the famous prison of San Juan d'Ulloa. Finally a group of husky marines is seen dragging from the surf the flying boat from which the photographs were taken.
